Rare Books, Autographs and Prints

TANTALLON Castle, in North Berwick, Scotland, for centuries the stronghold of the Douglasses, given additional fame by Scott who described it in "Marmion," is to be sold this summer.

The newly discovered manuscript novel of Guy de Maupassant, "Dr. Heraclius Gloss," about which there has been rumors for many years, is now being translated and will be published by Brentano's in the autumn.

Amy Lowell is writing a "Life" of John Keats which will be ready for publication next year. It will contain unpublished letters of both Keats and Fanny Brawne and a number of rare portraits. Miss Lowell has long been known as an enthusiastic Keats collector.

"The Etchings by James McNeill Whistler" by Campbell Dodgson, like other Studio publications, is beautifully printed and moderate in price. It contains ninety-six reproductions of etchings most of which are exceedingly well done. The introduction is a delightful and scholarly piece of writing and will be of interest in itself for Whistler collectors.

The Byron Palace at Ravenna, where the poet lived in 1819, one of the literary shrines of Italy, was recently destroyed by the Fascisti. The building was known in the Middle Ages as the Rasponi Palace and it situated across the square from Dante's tomb, which escaped injury. The palace was reduced to ruins because it was used as the headquarters of the Socialist Co-operative Society.

The book cart has been an important factor in the second hand book trade in Germany for many years. Since the war there has been a great change. High rents and the shortage of places of business have forced the dealers to put many of the newer publications on wheels. This is giving the book cart men better profits than formerly. As a result the market for the cheaper second hand books, among which rarities were frequently found, has temporarily disappeared.

The first of a series of exhibitions under the auspices of the Columbia University Summer School, containing etchings by American and European artists, is now open to the public in Avery Hall. There are prints by Whistler, Zorn, Millet, Haskell, Nevinson, Haden, Hassam, Besnard, Roth, Braquemond, McLaughlin, Heinzelman, Kinney and others. Some of the best-known Whistlers are present, including the "Black Lion Wharf," "Becquet," "Little Rag Gatherers," and "The Forge." The Millet plates are "The Gleaners," "The Digger," and "The Carder."

A pathetic letter written by Heine was recently sold at auction in Berlin. The poet, writing from Paris in 1846 to the physician Dieffenbach, said: "The bearer of this letter is Mr. Lessalle, one of my most cherished friends. He can give you tidings of my mental and spiritual state. My cursed malady is very obstinate and gains ground in most shameless fashion. My soul is weary and dejected like a drenched butterfly. I ask your kind offices for my friend Lassalle, who is not one of the weaklings, and who possesses my full confidence."

"Proof Reading in the Fifteenth Century; an Examination of the Evidence Relating to the Correctors of the Press at Work in Paris prior to 1500," by Douglas C. McMurtrie, of Greenwich, Conn., is a little monograph in which the author summarizes the evidence adduced by Claudin in his "Histoire de l'Imprimerie en France," Paris, 1900, the same author's monograph on "The First Paris Press," and various references to proof reading and proof readers in Paris in the fifteenth century. But as the proof reader was often the textual editor, the evidence bears rather on scholarship than on printing.

An interesting incident in the English celebration of the Shelley centenary was the meeting held in Haymarket Theater under the auspices of the Keats-Shelley Memorial Association. Reports of the occasion announce that an eloquent address was made by Sir Rennell Rodd, and that among a number of other distinguished men who joined in the praise of the poet were J. C. Squire and John Drinkwater. Post Wheeler of the American Embassy, who spoke for the American admirers of Shelley, called attention to the little known fact that the poet's great-grandfather, Timothy Shelley, emigrated to New Jersey and that his grandfather was born in the Colony.

E. Weyhe, dealer in prints and art books, 710 Lexington Avenue, announces a new work on Rembrandt's etchings. It includes a complete set of facsimile reproductions, which, with a few exceptions, are in original size, and are made by a new process showing remarkable fidelity to the originals. In every case the reproductions are taken from the best possible proof of the etchings. The prints are mounted 19 ¾ by 13 ½ inches and are enclosed in three port folios. There is an edition de luxe in which the prints are matted instead of being hinged. The prints are arranged in chronological order and the first volume has a general introduction by H. W. Singer.

The destruction of the Four Courts in Dublin has caused the loss of many original historical documents and manuscripts. Among the losses were the manuscript reports of the Irish Lords and Commons, said to be unique specimens of bookbinding and tooling. There was a complete set of original signatures of the Kings and Queens of Great Britain from Henry VIII down. Title deeds and leases lost with the record office dated as far back as 1174, and the office contained original parish registers of births, deaths and marriages from about the seventeenth century as well as chancery order books of equal age. The wills lost, however, date back only to about 1840. All the bankruptcy records seem to have been destroyed, and the Government will severely feel the loss of the census for the years 1831, 1841 and 1851, on which the operation of the old age pensions act largely depended. It is said that the entire legal machinery of the new Irish nation has been sadly impaired.

The editor of the London Spectator says that The Temple Bar edition of Boswell's "Life of Johnson" "should prove an epoch-making edition of an epoch-making book."

Among the acquisitions of the Metropolitan Museum of Art announced in the current Bulletin is a thirteenth century manuscript from which certain leaves have been placed on exhibition. It is a Latin psalter containing the psalms from the first to the eightieth, except for places where initial letters have been cut out, consisting of forty-nine leaves of vellum, 11 by 8 inches, and is preceded by a much mutilated calendar of six leaves of the same size. There are also three full page illuminations, each with two scenes from the Passion of Christ, which seems once to have been a part of the psalter, to judge by their style, quality of workmanship and dimensions. It is conjectured, according to the Bulletin, that the psalter is of about 1265 and the work of Parisian craftsmen, as it bears a striking similarity to the famous Psalter of St. Louis in the Bibliothèque Nationale known to have been executed about that date. The calendar seems later, and, with a preponderance of British saints, is considered to be of British workmanship. These, says the Bulletin writer, represent Gothic writing and the art of illumination at its highest point.

Stephen Vincent Benét's

Second Novel

To be published August 25th

YOUNG PEOPLE'S PRIDE

Like The Beginning of Wisdom, Mr. Benét's new book is about the younger generation, but the younger generation now out of college.

It tells the story of four normal young people, and of their attitude toward love and marriage.

It will serve as grist for the mills of those who argue pro and con about the morals of the young people of today.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S PRIDE

Has a well constructed plot which marks an advance in Mr. Benét's ability as a novelist.

Of its author H. L. Mencken said a year ago:
"I have no doubt whatever that Benét will do well in fiction."

Illustrated with six drawings by Henry Raleigh—$2.00

The Outline of Science

.. Volume Four

Ready in October

With the fourth volume, published in October, this great work will be completed. The unprecedented demand which greeted the first volume has grown stronger with each succeeding one—and is still growing. $4.50 per volume.

The Man in the Twilight

By Ridgwell Cullnm

No need to tell you that this story of adventure in the Canadian wilds will go big. "The Way of the Strong" proved the popularity of Mr. Cullum's virile romances—and this is even better. $1.90

Charles Rex

By Ethel M. Dell

Here's a convincing illustration of the reason why Miss Dell is known as the novelist who never had a failure. "Charles Rex" has all the adventurous romance that fiction readers love. $2.00

The Chain

By Charles Hanson Towne

A tale of New York that contains, to quote Gertrude Atherton, "the spirit of youth without the stimulant of jazz." Illuminating sidelights on many well known figures lend unusual interest to this lively novel.

In ONE day

68 Booksellers in 45 cities wrote, wired or phoned their re-orders for Edith Wharton's new novel,

The Glimpses of the Moon

But this was only one day. The next 34 Booksellers in 30 cities re-ordered the book; and the next day 49 Booksellers in 32 cities. And so it goes.

One retail bookseller has had 2600 copies

Another 2,200. Several have had more than 1,000. And the book has been published only three weeks.

"Mrs. Wharton needs no prize to rank as the foremost woman novelist of our generation." — Harry Hansen in Chicago News.

"To all who read with their brains 'The Glimpses of the Moon' must be a delight." — Carl Van Doren in The Nation.

THE HEAD OF THE HOUSE OF COOMBE

What Booksellers are Saying:

From New York: "The most wonderful and beautiful story I have ever read."

From Boston: "This is a very wonderful story and I am more enthusiastic than ever about pushing the sale."

From Cincinnati: "It is a joy to recommend so refreshing a story to my customers when so much new fiction leaves a 'bad-taste-in-the-mouth.'"

From West Virginia: "One of the best books we ever read. We predict a big sale."

From Pittsfield: "I do not know of any other book that I have been so anxious to read as 'Robin.' I think the sale is going to be enormous."

From Syracuse: "I am sure 'Robin' will be one of our leading six for the holidays."

From Philadelphia: "I agree with you—'Robin' is going to be a great seller!"

Remember: ROBIN and THE HEAD OF THE HOUSE OF COOMBE are available as boxed sets, either in the cloth or leather editions.

A splendid gift for any occasion!

Watch your stock on THE HEAD OF THE HOUSE OF COOMBE! The publication of ROBIN has brought a greatly increased demand for the earlier novel. COOMBE is now in its 80th thousand!

The Bobbs-Merrill Company

Publishers

For the benefit of those victims of a horrible economic system which allows them to scan 18 newspapers every day but does not permit them to read a single book from one Saturday until the next, may I draw public attention to a book which has given me more pleasure than anything else since the first appearance of Hamsun's "Growth of the Soil?" I refer to "Vandemark's Folly."

The author is Herbert Quick and I do not know anything about him. Brother Porter, of the literary department, next door, tells me that Quick at one time or another had something to do with the Department of Agriculture. [Brother Porter was wrong about that. Mr. Quick was a member of the Federal Farm Loan Board.—Publisher's Note.]

How Quick came to be a writer (and a first-class artist) I do not know.

But I accept the fact gratefully.

VANDEMARK'S FOLLY is the Genesis of the great American Middle West.

It is the story of a simple boy, neglected by his step-father and thrown upon his own resources. He goes West. Of course he goes West, for everybody else is going West.

He is slow and he is not very bright. But his patience and his courage are indomitable. The wicked step-father gives him a deed to a swamp in Iowa. He takes the swamp and turns it into profitable land. He grows up with the new community.

When he is old and when the time has come for his last great voyage, he sits himself down and tells his children what happened in Vandemark township 70 years ago.

Not since Abraham described his adventures on the trip from Ur to Canaan have I enjoyed anything as much as this humble record of an unknown pioneer.

I do not pretend that I am writing literary criticism.

I am just asking you to read a mighty fine book.

Young People's Pride

By STEPHEN VINCENT BENÉT

What are the young people of today like? Stephen Vincent Benét, one of the foremost of the so-called younger generation of writers, shows them to us as they are, normal young people with a zest for living and a marked sense of the beautiful, and actuated, despite all odds, by that idealism as regards love and marriage which is peculiarly American. I have the honor to announce

WILLA CATHER'S new novel

ONE OF OURS

MORE and more have we come to recognize in Willa Cather our greatest living woman novelist. ONE OF OURS, a novel to which she has devoted nearly three years (she is one of the few writers of today who refuses to be hurried) is her first long novel since MY ANTONIA (1918), and shows her at the very fullness of her powers. Nothing that Miss Cather has ever written has quite prepared one for this book—and yet everything that she has written has been a preparation for it. Here, you will say, is an authentic masterpiece—a novel to rank with the finest of this or any age.

All the magic of Miss Cather's subtle and flexible style, all the passion of her daring, impatient mind, are lavished upon the presentation of a single figure—a sort of young Hamlet of the prairies—and upon the haunting story of his struggle with life and fate. ONE OF OURS is the intimate story of a young man's life. Claude Wheeler's stormy youth, his enigmatic marriage, and the final adventure which releases the baffled energy of the boy's nature, are told with almost epic simplicity.

Alfred A. Knopf

"ONE OF OURS" WILL BE PUBLISHED SEPTEMBER 8TH

You Can Answer Inquiries for Children's Books

with one catalog---

"THE BOOKSHELF FOR BOYS AND GIRLS 1922-1923"

A COMPREHENSIVE LIST The Bookshelf for Boys and Girls is prepared and printed by us with these main objects in view:—to help buyers of books for children find the right book, to help distributors of books serve book readers and buyers by providing a complete, comprehensive guide at a cost low enough to permit bookseller or librarian to give copies to enquirers without too large a financial outlay.

PERFORMS A REAL SERVICE The Bookshelf for Boys and Girls is the only list so carefully prepared and edited as to deserve placing in parents' hands without reservation, and yet so complete as to serve and reach the interests of all classes of readers.

Customers will ask—What Books? This list helps you answer intelligently.

It is edited by an independent board of editors actuated by but one motive—to prepare an adequate and unbiased list. It is published by the R. R. Bowker Co., 62 W. 45th St., New York. Office of the Publishers' Weekly.

From Nursery Rhyme to Grown-up Time.

This list is a classified guide to all the best books for children, grouped under three main departments:

Books for the Very Little Ones,
Books for Older Boys and Girls, and Books for Boy Scouts.

The Board of Editors.

The selection of titles in the Bookshelf for Boys and Girls is in the care of three competent and well-known librarians:

"For the Very Little Ones"—
Miss Clara W. Hunt,
Supt. of Children's Work,
Brooklyn Public Library.

"For Older Boys and Girls"—
Miss Ruth G. Hopkins,
Director Children's Department,
Bridgeport Public Library.

"For Boy Scouts"—
Franklin K. Mathiews,
Chief Librarian,
Boy Scouts of America.

No effort will be spared to make this catalog live up to its reputation as the "finest list of children's books available."

Ready in August — We print from order only — How many will you want?

YOUR IMPRINT MAKES IT YOUR CATALOG

No other imprint will appear on or in the "Bookshelf for Boys and Girls" except that of the distributor buying it. So it goes out as the special catalog of librarian and bookseller in each locality. Offered prior to first printing at prices below those possible in making local and individual lists. One co-operative printing and publishing effort has lowered costs.

THE name Irvin S. Cobb below the title J. POINDEXTER, COLORED, guarantees the goods. Cobb is perhaps the most consistent front rank writer in America today. He is always up to his own high mark of excellence. And for the first time Cobb has given us a novel, a Cobb novel, the adventures of an old-fashioned but comparatively youthful Southern darkey in New York City. Jeff Poindexter tells the story himself; Cobb sets it down and sees that Jeff's account is properly "punctured" so as to make the reading as easy as it is laughable. With J. POINDEXTER, COLORED, Cobb keeps his established audience and adds to it the large number of readers who prefer the novel to shorter fiction in book form.

Vacations at Height

THE greatest vacation month of the year ends with the most widely used of week-ends at Labor Day. This gives a most active period to the final vacation reading activities, and the bookseller's slogan of "Take Along a Book" can get its crowning value at this time. The Year Round Bookselling Committee has urged all booksellers to take special pains to turn August to fullest account thru the slogan, the posters and the window transparencies.

The silhouette poster of Books for the Week-End has proved one of the most successful for book promotion that has been devised. Miss Taylor's drawing is full of life and interest, and the black and white contrast makes it stand out sharply in every window where it is displayed. The habit of making full reading provisions for week-end packing can be greatly enlarged by the bookseller, and the special selling to insure that books as well as candy go into the traveling cases can be done both on Friday and on Saturday morning.

Present Level of Living Cost

THE Department of Labor has recently published its figures on the cost of living for July 1st, which gives opportunity for important comparisons with previous years. The percentage set by their figures is 5.6 percent increase over 1914. The costs affecting the publishing of books are still much higher than the average, composition and printing being about 100 percent above 1914, and other costs involved bringing an average of about 80 percent increase. The cost of printing in England has recently come down with wage reduction, so that the wage scale of the English printer is now about one-third that of the American printer.

Book Censorship Discussion Increases

THE accumulating discussion of censorship attained increased attention on the publication in the New York Times on August 4th, of an interview with John S. Sumner, of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice. This interview was given first page space and carried the decidedly provoking heading.

"PLAN LAID TO CENSOR ALL NEW LITERATURE
PUBLISHERS AND AUTHORS FAVOR VICE SOCIETY'S PROPOSAL TO ELIMINATE SALACITY
MAY NAME AN OVERLORD
AN ARBITER OF MORALS WITH POWERS LIKE THOSE OF HAYS, LANDIS AND THOMAS"

Mr. Sumner was quoted as saying that the plan for establishing censorship thru a large committee and with a possible arbiter at the head was being actively discussed by the authors and by the official organization of the publishers. Both of these groups promptly repudiated this statement in the press.

The interview went on to quote a letter which Mr. Sumner had sent to a group of twenty publishers, asking what they would think of a plan which comprised the submission of manuscripts prior to publication when there existed doubt as to their propriety. Mr. Sumner stated that he believed many publishers would like to have some such assurance of safety from prosecution and stated that in two or three cases manuscripts had been submitted to him in advance of publication for criticism.

The basis of his statement that the plan was already under consideration was the fact that the Authors' League had in the spring asked the National Association of Book Publishers to appoint a special committee to talk over the present conditions in the censorship situation and to see whether the matter could be in any way clarified by conference. This committee was appointed, consisting of Arthur Scribner, Alfred Harcourt and George Palmer Putnam, and the Authors' League committee had Mr. George Creel as chairman. One preliminary gathering was held, which did little more than to state the case and to postpone any general conference until after vacations and after the plan for theatrical censorship by general panel had been put into effect. No specific proposal had been laid before such a committee, and it seems likely that Mr. Sumner's advance proclamation as to what such a conference would recommend may have the effect of eliminating such a conference altogether.

The suggestion from Mr. Sumner became peculiarly obnoxious to both publishers and authors because of the way in which it was presented, including attacks on general publishing standards and on "the younger group" of authors, so designated.

The public interest in the subject is shown by the fact that almost every New York paper immediately carried an editorial on the subject, and letters from all sides appeared.

That any manuscripts had been submitted before publication to the Society for criticism was a surprise to most people in the trade, as the one feature of the suggestion which would meet with unanimous disapproval would be that books should be censored before publication. No one person and no group or panel would deem itself competent to make such a judgment. The Authors' League, which has been active in the problem of stage censorship and which has been trying to see some way clear to better conditions in books, was particularly incensed at the form and wording of Mr. Sumner's interview. The Publishers' Association promptly disclaimed any interest in the plan as outlined, wishing for its part to create for publishing the highest possible standards and the best possible conditions for the free scope of publishing initiative, but realizing that decisions as to what should be put in print among old books or new must be left to the judgment of the individual publisher.

In a later interview, Mr. Sumner disclaimed any particular interest in the idea of having a dictator in the field, but suggested that the plan "should include the listing of a jury of five hundred representative citizens who would agree to serve once or twice a year in reading doubtful manuscripts. If the jury selected from this large panel should pronounce the manuscript fit, its decision would affect the publisher when he came to sell the book. While the jury would have no formal standing, nevertheless if any complaint were launched against a published book which the jury had approved in manuscript, the record of that approval would undoubtedly be accepted by any magistrate as sufficient ground for dismissing the case against the publisher."

In outlining reasons for the need of censorship, Mr. Sumner said: "The government figures show that more than 40% of the adults are below standard mentally, and then there are children to be protected. The 20% of adult people who do not need any protection from their own impulses are inclined to be reckless in demanding a freedom from censorship and restraint.

"What we are really doing is protecting that 20% from the consequences of such recklessness. We do not want books published that inflame the passions of the 80% mentally immature to the degree that they may commit vicious crimes on the mature 20%."

The point in the interview most unanimously criticized was that which suggested that the judgment should be made before publication. There was no suggestion as to whether this was to include old as well as new books. The most recent cases of discussion have been the case of Rabelais, prosecuted in Cincinnati against Stewart Kidd Co.; the case of "Mlle. de Maupin," in which a salesman for McDevitt-Wilson's Inc. obtained thru that company's action a judgment of $2500 against the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice for arresting him for selling said book; the case against Boni & Liveright for publishing "The Satyricon" of Petronius Arbiter; and the three charges against Thomas Seltzer, Inc. for publishing and selling D. H. Lawrence's "Women in Love," Arthur Schnitzler's "Home-coming of Cazanova" and "The Diary of a Young Girl," on which the opinion of the magistrate has not been rendered.

The Society also conducts cases against lewd pictures and postal cards and books which do not at all claim to have a place in literature or general interest. No recent case seems to have been brought to the courts in the latter category.

London Literary Periodicals

THE London correspondent of the Chicago Evening Post writes that many of the literary people in London are a little uneasy about the future status of the Literary Supplement of the London Times. Recently the daily issues of the paper have been printing more book matter, and this was interpreted at first as meaning a widening of their book interest, but some fear that it may lead to the ultimate discontinuance of the Weekly Supplement.

"Altogether the Times deserves high credit," writes Shan Bullock, "for its attention to the arts, but such attention would not compensate us for the loss of the Literary Supplement, which has taken its place definitely as the best literary journal in Great Britain. It has no rivals. The Athenaeum is now an annex of the Nation. The Academy is dead. We have not room even for a penny Literary World. To kill the Supplement because of high costs or lack of support would be a national misfortune. Since its price was raised to sixpence its circulation has certainly fallen away, but not much, and I see no reason why it should not continue its brilliant career, in a less ambitious and more popular form and at a less price. Not all of us can afford a three halfpenny Times and a sixpenny Supplement."

If I read a book and it makes my whole body so cold no fire can ever warm me, I know that is poetry. If I feel physically as if the top of my head were taken off, I know that is poetry. These are the only ways I know it. Is there any other way?

EMILY DICKINSON.

Mail Order Selling for Bookstores

By William S. Thompson

Manager of the Mail Order Department, G. P. Putnam's Sons

PARTS II, III

II—THE BOOKS TO BE SOLD

All books cannot be sold profitably by mail, and no absolute rule can be evolved for determining the profitable ones. Their selection is largely a matter of experience and good judgment. It would be thought that a book which sells readily over the counter would sell well by mail, but this is not always the case. In general, the books which are susceptible of a mail order sale are useful books, reference books, books which appeal strongly to a very distinct class of people, books on current matters of very wide general interest, and fiction by very well known writers who have such a large number of regular readers that they form a class by themselves. On the other hand, there may not be a sufficiently large field available even for a useful book, or a book which appeals to a very distinct class, to pay either the publisher or the bookseller for the trouble and expense of preparing circular matter.

As stated elsewhere in these articles, the bookseller's best chance for profit in mail order work lies in the advance promotion of the sale of a very important book with a wide possible field. It is sometimes easier to get orders for an important current book in advance of publication, than it is to get them afterward. This is perhaps due partly to the natural curiosity of the book-buying public in a widely heralded future book, and partly to that phase of human nature by which a man or woman will order something to be delivered and paid for in the future, which would not be ordered, if it had to be accepted and paid for today, just as in the days of the cash subscription book business, an agent would spend weeks in canvassing a limited territory, taking orders for delivery on an indefinite future date, and then, at the conclusion of his canvass, hire a team and make all his deliveries and cash collections in a few days. Under these circumstances, hundreds of books would be sold for future delivery, which would never have been sold at all if the agent had carried the books with him and made deliveries and collections as he sold them.

The bookseller's next best opportunity for mail order profit is in the book, the importance of which is unsuspected, and the enormous sale of which is unforeseen before publication. When a book like this begins to move, and a large sale is almost a certainty, the bookseller can reasonably apply to the publisher for imprinted circulars. In such an instance, the mouth-to-mouth advertising which helps the counter sale will also help the sale by mail, and mail order efforts can logically be continued as long as the book continues to sell well over the counter.

As a general thing the bookseller should avoid approval shipments in mail order work, selling only for cash with order, C. O. D., or in the case of accepted individuals, on regular charge accounts, but in selling by mail it is well to be liberal in the opening of charge accounts, for under this plan many desirable people will contract the book-buying habit. The average bookseller has not the organization for handling large numbers of approval shipments; he would not, perhaps, care to make the investment necessary to carry sufficient stock to fill the larger volume of orders which would result from an approval offer; nor would he care to undertake to dispose of even the small percentage of books which invariably come back in bad condition. Moreover, the approval plan is an impossibility in the case of fiction, which will naturally form a considerable percentage of the business by mail; too many people would read a novel and then return or exchange it, if offered on approval. Again, the bookseller is so close to his townspeople and their confidence in him is so great that he does not need to make approval offers in order to induce business.

The open charge plan, therefore, seems the best for the bookseller to use by mail, and he can regulate his future list of customers automatically, to some extent, by putting no people on his lists to whom he would not be willing to extend credit for a small reasonable amount.

III—THE PRINTED MATTER

This generally consists of the envelope, a letter on the bookseller's letterhead, a descriptive circular and a post-card bearing the order-form. If any money is required with the order, as is sometimes the case, an order blank and a return envelope should be used. Successful mail order printed matter must enable the customer to reply with the least possible effort.

Of all of these pieces the most important is the descriptive circular and next the selling letter. In case the circular is for the promotion of a single book, it should be supplied by the publisher imprinted, and free of all expense to the bookseller. The publisher is usually much better equipped than the bookseller to write and print a proper circular, one which will create desire in the mind of the recipient. Also he is in a better position to determine its proper form and size and the amount which ought to be spent on it. By printing perhaps, hundreds of thousands at a time much expense is saved in the promotion at any particular volume.

The question of the production of circulars by publishers is exceedingly important. The publisher must be content to sink his individuality completely, and look at the customer from the bookseller's point of view rather than from his own. In other words, the publisher's name must not appear on circular matter furnished to booksellers. In this respect publishers have been and still are open to much criticism. A good example of a circular furnished to booksellers on which no publisher's name appears is the elaborate eight-page circular of "The Outline of Science" used by the bookselling trade this last spring.

Descriptive circulars furnished by publishers should be standardized, so the bookseller will not have to carry on hand or to furnish too many different kinds of envelopes. Practically all circular matter may be made of a proper size to fit, when folded properly, into either a No. 6½ or a No. 10 envelope, the two standard sizes. Some houses use a No. 9 instead of a No. 10, and circulars cut without waste from 34 to 44 paper fit into a No. 9 a little better than into a No. 10. Baronial or nearly square envelopes, in the writer's opinion, have no selling advantages over the

A FORM LETTER TO BE USED IN WRITING PEOPLE THAT HAVE BEEN SUGGESTED FOR THE BOOKSTORE'S MAILING LIST. SUCH A LETTER SHOULD BE ACCOMPANIED BY A FORM SUCH AS APPEARS ON OPPOSITE PAGE. SEE CHAPTER ON LIST BUILDING IN ISSUE OF AUGUST 5.

JOHN BOOKMAN & CO.,
138 Main St., Newtown, N. Y.

Dear Reader:

Will you permit us to send to you from time to time advance descriptions of important forthcoming books? This service to the book users, and book needers, of Newtown is new and is possible only thru the close co-operation with us of the largest publishers in the country.

No matter what one's occupation or profession or interests, books of some kind are an essential to every ambitious man or woman. Pick out the people who are eminent in all branches of human endeavor. In all probability it will be found that they are, and always have been, constant users of books, not only of those pertaining to their own particular occupations, but of those covering various other fields, and that they have been able, and are still, to use for their own further advancement the knowledge thus obtained.

Other less ambitious people are content to acquire knowledge second-hand from those who have already acquired it from books and taken advantage of it; still others are content never to acquire knowledge in any form or by any means, and these last two classes almost never rise above the level of mediocrity.

That is why we believe that book habit is one short road to success. That is why we say that books are essential to the business, professional or social advancement of the ambitious people in Newtown. That is why we are starting this new and special service for their particular benefit.

The form herewith is for your convenience. There is no obligation whatever on your part beyond placing in the spaces provided in your correct addresses and as much of the other information asked for as you desire. The more you give us the better we shall be able to serve you, to call to your attention forthcoming books which might be of particular interest to you, which might perhaps prove to be worth a great deal to you, and of which you might not hear in any other way.

To get the benefit of this service as quickly as possible, fill in and mail the form to us at once.

Very truly yours,

sizes mentioned above, and they have one very serious objection, they are generally too wide to fit into the bundles of mail tied up for letter-carriers, so when delivered they are quite often bent or folded and perhaps even mutilated. They cost more to make and they are not usually carried on hand by the bookseller for daily use.

The order-card or order-blank should also be furnished by the publisher. If not imprinted for the bookseller, it should be made up so the bookseller's name can be readily filled in, and it is better if it is so made, that the customer gets the impression that it is good only if filled in and sent to the bookseller from whom the circular comes. The "Outline of Science," order-form furnished to the trade is a good illustration of this form of order. An order-form made for a bookseller should be so worded, as this one is, as to be useable for a cash or C. O. D. order or on open charge accounts, leaving the credit department a chance to decide when the order is received upon what basis it shall be filled.

The copy for the selling letter should be made up by the publisher also from the bookseller's point of view; the letterhead and envelope must, under present conditions, be furnished by the bookseller himself. The writer, however, expects to see the time when complete outfits of printed matter, all imprinted with dealer's name and folded and enclosed in envelopes, will be furnished free by publishers to booksellers who will have only to address and stamp and mail them. The distribution of such expensive outfits would necessarily have to be limited to those booksellers who maintain up-to-the-minute properly compiled lists for circularizing, who believe in the results to be obtained from such work, who have demonstrated their ability along this line, and who will address and mail such outfits promptly. This would be the ideal method of advance mail promotion, and its effect on the advance sale of an important book would be hard to overestimate.

Much can be done by the bookseller in mail selling without a descriptive circular, merely by the use of his letterhead, with a reproduced selling letter, and a reply card, either printed or multigraphed. Here the selling letter must be a strong one and it must contain some descriptive matter which would ordinarily appear on the circular. This plan eliminates the expense of the circular and is of value when the bookseller desires to make a special offer to a limited number of customers, and here is a case where the bookseller can profitably make an approval offer. The results which can sometimes be obtained in this way with an effectively worded letter are really remarkable.

Even a double Government postal card may sometimes be made an effective selling medium when the selling message is short; the particular advantage of this form is that there is no expense for stationery. The cost of the double postage 1c. out and 1c. back includes the price of the card.

The case of the double postal card, in the writer's opinion is the only one in which it is worth while to send a stamped reply card. To stamp reply cards costs $10.00 a thousand, plus the labor of stamping, and it does not usually bring in enough additional business to make it worth while. People who are sufficiently interested in offers of books by mail, are willing to pay the cost of postage of the reply, in fact those who are too poor or too stingy to reply on account of the cost of a reply stamp might not make desirable customers.

There is a movement on foot to institute what would be called the collect-on-delivery reply card, the postage being paid on delivery by the House to which the card is to be returned. The writer hopes that this form of reply card will not be favorably passed upon by the Post Office Department, as he believes it would not be a benefit to the selling of books by mail, by either the publisher or bookseller. If some houses use it in bookselling, others must, in order to meet competition, and it would lead eventually to a lowering of the standard of responsibility of those who reply.

Part IV. The Operations Involved in Handling Mail Orders.

The Government Shakespeare

WITH the Lord Mayor of London in the chair, a meeting was held early this summer in London to give public attention and discussion to a proposed project for a new authorized text of Shakespeare, a representative meeting held at the Mansion House, attended by literary people and actors.

This would be a new departure in government activity, and the proposal seemed to be that there should be a careful new text for the people's edition in one volume, the plays to be arranged in chronological order without obsolete spelling and with an arrangement of the verse which would give prominence to Shakespeare rhythm. It was stated at the meeting that there were at present only two handy English editions giving all the plays in one volume, the Globe edition first published in 1863, and the Oxford edition published in 1892.

It was suggested that a committee should be formed along the lines of the translators and revisers of the Bible, and that the text of the plays should be prepared on the same general principles. The folios would, of course, be the basis for the text, and the work would be published at a low price. As government or university support to book publishing has usually been considered most important in bringing into print books that could not be profitably published by private enterprise, it would be a departure if this suggestion were taken for government support in publishing the one volume Shakespeare, a book that can be always marketed successfully thru regular channels. The English trade journal, the Bookseller, puts itself on record as saying that it is heartily in support of the proposal.

Book Tariffs Are Now Before Senate

SUMMARY OF SCHEDULES AS AMENDED IN SENATE

Books less than 20 years old—If of foreign authorship	15%
Books less than 20 years old—U. S. authorship	25%
(Bound or unbound except where bound in leather when cover is at 30% and text as above.)
Book bindings—Less than 20 years old	30%
(If the new binding is on a book over 20 years old the binding alone is dutiable.)
Children's books—More reading than pictures—Less than 1½ lbs. weight	25%

SCHEDULES NOT YET REACHED IN SENATE DISCUSSION

Books printed and bound more than 20 years	Free
Books and pamphlets, wholly or chiefly in language other than English	Free
Bibles	Free
Books for the blind	Free
Books etc. for libraries and schools	Free
Books of persons and families coming from foreign countries	Free

ON Friday, August 4th, the Senate reached the book schedules in their discussion and passed two sections in a form that gives much better conditions to the book-trade than were to have been expected by the original bill, which first came from the House in July, 1921. Whether the bill will now pass and become the law of the country replacing the Underwood rates depends on a great many circumstances, but, altho there are several details in which the book-trade would like to have seen the bill improved, the general tenor is fair to the publishers of books, users of books and to the printers.

When the House bill was first presented, an immediate outcry went up against some of its worst features, and these seem likely to be corrected. Books over twenty years old are slated for the free list and books in foreign languages. The associations of publishers, retailers and libraries joined together in the protest that influenced the Senate. The House bill provided for a 20 per cent duty on new books, and the Senate's first draft raised this to 25 per cent. In the form now adopted there would be a 15 per cent duty on all books of foreign authorship, the same rate as the Underwood tariff, and 25 per cent on all others. This divided duty was a suggestion made to cover the argument of printers that large quantities of books of American planning were going across the water to be manufactured. If such is being done, they will fall under the 25 per cent duty.

As originally drawn, the bill called for 33 1-3 per cent duty on leather bindings in the House bill and 45 per cent in the Senate bill, and these duties increased over the Underwood 15 per cent would have been applicable not only to new books but to old books and they were so worded that the same duty would have applied to the old books themselves as well as to their bindings. This feature of an unnecessarily high duty on bindings and its application to contents of old books was corrected by special effort, inaugurated for the retail bookstores' interest by Charles E. Lauriat, Jr., of Boston. The correction of this needlessly high rate should be credited to his efforts, supplemented by the work of Mr. Macrae for the Publishers' Association.

Taking into consideration the general tendency of this tariff to make international intercourse difficult the probable conditions for the booktrade seem satisfactory. Special thanks is due to Senator Lodge for his interest in correcting some of the features of the measure. Mr. Lodge always having had a keen interest in the book schedules of American tariff.

It will be remembered that the original House bill of last year provided for American valuation, which, on old books, would have been peculiarly onerous, tho on new books it would have only made more certain the present unfortunate method of levying duties. It should be kept in mind that book tariffs on bound books are not levied on the cost as paid by the publisher in England, but on an artificial price level, which is one-third off the English list price. This has the effect of practically doubling the duty. It would seem to any person that the natural basis for levying duties would be on the cost of the article, but this has been changed on books on the theory that all duties must be levied on the English wholesale cost. and the Custom House construes this to be not the wholesale cost of books as they are sold to the American publishers in big editions but the wholesale cost as sold to individual dealers in England. No relief from this feature is expected in the administrative sections of the bill, owing to the great disagreement in the valuation features.

Clerks' Salaries and Clerks' Sales

A Percentage Basis of Pay

A GENERAL trade estimate of the percentage proportion that clerks' salaries in bookstores bear to net sales is 12%. To arrive at the salary which a given individual clerk should receive we have but to determine what his or her percentage of sales is as against his or her sales.

We are indebted to the Philadelphia Retail Ledger for a chart which lists a sliding scale of weekly salaries against a sliding scale of weekly sales totals—printed in that paper's first June issue, 1922. The chart reproduced here is a deleted and reduced sample. It is shown to point our own example as to its possible practical use in retail bookstores.

This is a salary calculating chart—the intersections of the horizontal, and vertical lines of which show percentages which a given salary constitutes in relation to a given volume of sales. The smaller chart No. 2 used in connection with this larger chart indicates the various items of expense in a bookshop and gives the percentage that each bears in relation to total net sales.

It is to be noted that the 12% item for salaries in bookshops includes managers, buyers, etc., and does not represent clerks only. A proper correction or some definite basis that is true to fact in each shop can easily be made.

If we assume, therefore, that we have a clerk in our bookstore whose weekly net sales are $450. we can determine what that clerk's salary ought to be. We know that the percentage of salaries to sales, as shown in chart 2, is exactly 12%, salesman alone perhaps 8%. Find the weekly sales column and go down that to the $450. figure. Following the vertical line to 8% we arrive at the 7.8% as the closest on our chart. We find that it falls in the column under "Clerk's Weekly Salaries" headed by $35. So $35. is slightly in excess of the amount we should pay the clerk who is selling $450. worth of books weekly.

"For example" says the Retail Ledger, "let us assume that the clerk approaches the manager with the plea for an increase in salary." Let us also then assume this example in our bookshop. The clerk is getting $30 per week —wants $35. We expect sales from our clerks in proportion to sales so we look up the record. We find that this clerk whom we pay $30. has been averaging in sales $500. per week. He has been receiving 6% of his sales. He is entitled to 8% and we find that we can afford to pay him the advance sought.

By the same method, if we find that our clerk who has been getting $30. per week salary is selling $300. worth of books per week, we know that he is receiving 10% or better than a safe percentage. But in order not to turn him down abruptly—but to inspire him to additional activity we indicate, guided by the chart, that when he can bring his weekly sales up to $450. per week we'll advance his salary to $35.

Elements of advantage and danger can be seen in the adoption of the plan. Is it worthwhile, for example, that the clerks should be advised that they are on a salary-related-to-sales basis? Shall they be advised what percentage on their sales the individual salary is? Is it a better policy to fix the salaries upon some other basis than that of individual sales? Shall this system be used solely in figuring business? These are questions of policy to be considered.

While the advantage of indicating to the clerk just what his or her salary means as related to his or her sales is apparent as an activity stimulator, there is the danger of producing friction among clerks who seek for greater sales and bigger salaries attendant thereon. This, of course, comes back to the management.

Wise direction and careful thought might well utilize this scheme to the end of better salaries and bigger sales.

Answering The Buyer's Lame Excuses

Traveler's Hardest Problem is to Win Attention

IN a recent number of Printers' Ink, Frank L. Scott discusses the methods some salesmen have evolved for answering some of the almost bromidic stock excuses that buyers use to avoid the salesmen's solicitude. He lists ten stock excuses and gives apt comebacks to them. Buyers have good reason to be cautious and to be chary of increased inventories, yet many times they hold off from salesmen's suggestions which would be to their real advantage.

(1) "See me next trip!" To this a Massachusetts salesman answers "I will be around again in six weeks. Meanwhile new advertisements for our line will appear in 4,500,000 copies of national mediums. In this city one out of every five adults will buy about $1.50 worth of goods of our class. This business will be divided among seven dealers —you being one of them. And, say, something may keep me from getting here in six weeks. What then? Another thing: some competitor of yours may even now be planning a drive on our line during that period. He might be planning it without my knowledge. Even if I knew, I couldn't divulge a confidence. Finally, how do you know that your stock will last six weeks?"

(2) "There's no demand for your brand right now." The live salesman can quote definite facts about dealers who have a demand for the brand right now.

(3) "Smith gives me more liberal credit arrangements." An assistant sales manager replied, "If that's what makes your business grow, you'd better buy from the lowest-down, least-known, longest-profit manufacturer in the field. He may give you more credit than you ever dreamed of getting."

(4) "Oh, my trade is satisfied with the goods I give." "Yes and they'll be more than satisfied when you give them something still better. You know that. Every customer is grateful to the dealer who gives him a better cigar, or a better phonograph. Don't tell me that your stock has reached the point of perfection."

(5) "I'll put them in when I get a call." "Well, how the dickens do you expect to get a lot of calls for products you don't stock, don't display, don't push?"

(6) "I want the exclusive agency." Careful study has shown that the sales of many articles multiply only with large number of dealers in a given town. A prominent store in Cleveland gave this excuse for refusing to stock a well-known dollar specialty. The smaller dealers about him all bought. The leader was astonished at the "calls" he began to get. This manufacturer finds almost infallible the policy of surrounding the exclusive agency hunter with a circle of dealers who are not hypnotized by the "me only" idea.

(7) "People in this locality prefer a different type of goods." One salesman approaches the dealer this way: "If you were going to sell groceries you'd hardly want to do without Ivory Soap and Uneeda Biscuits. Do you know of any line where a dealer can open shop on local goods alone? Admitting that you have a good call for your locally made stuff, can't you see that there is a strong trend toward nationally known, nationally sold goods?"

(8) "I'm all stocked up with your goods—have too much now." One house has trained its salesmen to work particularly hard on this objection. If the dealer is really loaded, the salesman is instructed to use all means at hand to set things moving again. This sincere desire to help automatically uncovers the validity of the objection. In the face of it the dealer simply cannot refuse to give facts and figures, and these give the salesman an intelligent basis on which to work.

(9) "I have too many brands now, and I must keep down my investment." This is sometimes too easy an objection for the conscientious salesman to swallow. A garage man said the other day, "Up to four months ago I was carrying six makes of tires. A smart salesman got me to drop them all and put in his high-priced tires and one cheap make. I find that my customers are readier to accept these brands, and I really have cut down my investment. Other salesmen were trying to get me to add another tire instead of selling me on the idea of starting fresh on a better basis."

(10) "Your price is too high." The dealer often sincerely means this. But some dealers do not really know what price their customers will pay. A certain manufacturer had great difficulty in marketing a fairly high-priced accessory for Ford cars. After failing to sell the dealer, the salesman would say to him, "Will you let me try to sell one of these to the next three Ford owners who stop here for gas? If I succeed, you'll get regular profit on the sale." The garage man nearly always consented. The salesmen averaged nearly two sales out of every three attempts. Slow work? Somewhat. But it paid handsomely in the long run and took all the power out of the dealer's objection.

There are dozens of other varieties of buyer's "stalls," but the best part of it is that somewhere there is a good answer to every one of them.

Reminiscences of a Book Scout

By Joseph Jewett Barton

XI. Reflections on Monday

THE other day I was sitting in front of my desk with my feet on it, wondering whether buisness was really dead or only sleeping.

An old friend came in, drew up a chair, pulled out a smelly pipe, and, after getting it working well, started to soliloquize. "Yes, you had a copy of 'English Notes, intended for very Extensive Circulation, by Quarles Quickens, Esq., 16 pp. Boston Daily Mail Office 1842.' It had salmon pink wrappers, was a nice copy. Perhaps you picked it up for fifteen cents. You didn't tell me anything about it, but sent it to a New York dealer and probably asked about fifty dollars for it. I wonder if you saw that article in Hopkins' page in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY where the 'Notes' was attributed to Poe and lately had been sold at auction for eight hundred dollars, and that the next copy would probably bring a thousand." As he went out the door, I heard something about "A guardian—be careful when in the rural districts that the cows don't bite you."

I got to thinking about that tragedy. It isn't the money loss, but the sting of not knowing the value. Sombre thoughts breed others, and as various experiences of the less pleasant kind passed thru my mind. I recalled the passing of old Mr. Brown. Brown was not his name, but at present I cannot remember his real one, if I ever knew it.

He was tall and spare, a little bent in the shoulders, had dark curling hair, streaked with gray, of more than the customary length, and wore a thin mustache and beard. He looked like an old time print of a master of a small red school.

When I became well acquainted with him he told me much of his life. As I recall it, his family had not been very prosperous, nor of any particular station in the small New England community in which he was reared. He had worked his way thru college, with intervals of teaching school to secure needed funds to finish his course.

I suppose too little food and too much hard work had undermined his powers of resistance, so at some time he had drifted into tuberculosis, but was now considered cured.

He kept a little book shop way out toward the end of the busiest street in Brooklyn. As I never pass by any place that has books in the window, I of course, went in to see what he had of interest. We, of the craft, prefer to seek our own and wait on ourselves, but Mr. Brown was eager to show me everything in his little shop; he seemed fearful lest I might overlook something.

He had a hobby—Italian poetry of the old school in the original—there is a subject for you. He talked earnestly, lengthily and finally boringly on the subject; when you are hoping you may find a Thompson's "Long Island" or the "History of Flatbush" tucked away in a dark corner where somebody else may have overlooked it, the subject of Italian poetry, however fervently presented, doesn't seem to touch the spot.

I wound up my first visit by buying a "Pilgrim's Progress" with Anderson plates; that's all I could find, and I had to buy something.

Brown asked me if I would manage his shop for a few minutes while he went across the street to the baker's, he said he had not breakfasted yet, and I surmised that the thirty-five cents I gave for Bunyan was immediately converted into a bottle of milk and some buns.

I formed the habit of stopping in to see Brown about once every week. He was a gentleman, was well educated, very poor and of indifferent health. He didn't whine or curse his luck or the Capitalists, but did the best he could with what he had. He should have had many a bottle of milk and other nourishing food every day, but I do not believe he got it. He did not appear to have any relatives or friends, tho he did say he had some books in his trunk that were to go to a friend when he died. He promised to show those books to me, merely to gratify the desire of seeing a few nice items, but he never did.

In the course of one of our conversations he inquired as to my own likings among books; I told him I had an insane desire to acquire, at a moderate price, a presentation copy of a Kilmarnock Burns in the original boards, uncut, but I did not think my longings would ever be satisfied. Then in the most unsophisticated way he remarked that he knew an old Scotchman from whom he could get a Burns, whether first edition or not he couldn't say, as he was not interested in poems in the Scottish dialect. It was a very old copy, and he would go and see him in a few days and the next time I came, he would, in all probability, have it for me.

For many weeks he joined me in breakfast from the bakers, and if he had taken on the weight that I did from that second breakfast of mine, he would still be with us.

As time went on and he hadn't seen his Scotchman, and was not making any apparent effort to do so, my enthusiasm waned a little and I went off on a fishing trip. It was probably a month before I got around to Brown's shop again, and then it was closed. I thought nothing of this, and called again in about another week—still closed.

A few days later I was in a book shop and asked the proprietor, "What has become of Brown—perhaps you know him, he keeps a little shop out toward the end of your street."

"Who, Brown?" he replied. "Yes, I knew him, he is dead.'

"What was the matter with him?" I asked. He told me that the old man's neighbors had missed him for several days, had notified the police and upon breaking into his store had found him dead, laying over a trunk full of books. The coroner said he died of starvation.

I have no doubt he was glad to go, but somehow I felt guilty. It seemed as tho there were something I had failed to do.

And tomorrow, it being Tuesday, I will get a large bunch of mail, perhaps, and after I have separated the checks from the bills, I will cash them and then go and buy among other things, several copies of "English Notes." Certainly among all those pamphlets in the second story of that old barn I have just learned about there ought to be at least two more.

Length of Novels

A COMPLAINT is made by "a novelist" in the London Times, quotes the New York Evening Post, that the publishers' requirements offer a most deplorable restriction upon the length of novels. He points as an example to the stipulation in a recent prize novel contest, that submitted manuscripts should contain not fewer than 60,000 nor more than 100,000 words. The reasons for this are common sense; people don't want a book that can be read thru in two or three hours, because they like a novel that will last over a week end, while the cost of producing a novel of 120,000 words is so great that a large sale must be certain before any publisher will undertake it. Hence the young novelist with no reputation feels that he is barred on the one hand from writing anything as short as "Ethan Frome" or Turgeniev's "Spring Floods," and anything so long on the other as "Anna Karenina" or "The Old Wives' Tale." If you are an intense admirer of Mrs. Deland's very short novels, on the one hand, or of De Morgan on the other, you must willy-nilly choose another model. Of course, there is always the resource of the trilogy, to which men like Oliver Onions and Arnold Bennett turned; or you can write a half dozen novels and long stories about a single family, as Galsworthy did, and publish them first separately and then together. But there are some conceptions which, to an individual writer, seem simply to cry out for unitary treatment in about 150,000 words, and what is he to do? This complainant thinks that some novels, like Brett Young's "Black Diamond," have been spoiled by hasty and abrupt endings thus imposed.

Belgian Book Congress

THE Second Congress of the Belgian Patronal Federation of the Industries of the Book was held at Namur, July 21, 22, 23, under the auspices of the Syndical Chamber of Master Printers of Namur and Luxembourg, and under the patronage of M. Van de Vyvere, minister of economic affairs, Baron Paul de Gaiffier d' Hestroy, governor of the province, and M. Saintraint, Burgomaster of Namur. The questions considered were those of apprenticeship, place of children in the industry, contracts, scholarships, examinations, machinery, family salaries in the industry of the book, and calculation of net costs in printing.

The Bide-A-Wee Davenport

AT the A. E. Little store in Los Angeles, one is tempted to linger long amongst the books, for a large leather davenport offers a most enticing reading and resting place.

It is really a combination table and davenport, and is used also for display. The back extends like a library table, and on it are placed, book ends between which are late books of travel or romance. The sides of the davenport are also very wide and spacious, giving room for a set of small leather bound classics, and for an attractive card holder containing the neat, artistic cards of the firm.

Standing beside each arm of the long davenport, is a floor lamp with silken shade, casting a soft glow upon the reader's page, and upon the display of books and bric-a-brac.

The davenport faces the shelves of books, with the aisle of the store between and obviously at the disposal of the book-lover. This bookshop offers comfort yet does not hesitate to suggest buying.

Father of the Circulating Library

Benjamin Franklin Was An Innovator in the Book Field Also

IRVING BACHELLER'S novel "In the Days of Poor Richard," has inspired Ward Macauley, the Detroit bookseller, to write for Detroit Saturday Night on "Benjamin Franklin, Father of the Circulating Public Library." There is a lot of interesting information about Franklin as a bookman that booksellers might have at their tongue's end. Franklin published the first novel printed in America. He was the first to illustrate a news story. He collected the finest private library of his time in this country. We have reprinted Mr. Macauley's article on Franklin below:

"Among the multitude of benefactions for which the American people must ever revere the name of Benjamin Franklin, it is doubtful if any has been of such wide-spread beneficial value as the part that he played in the founding of the subscription libraries. Franklin out in the lightning with his kite is a familiar figure to everyone in the land. Franklin as the originator of the idea of allowing books to leave libraries is not nearly so well known.

"As is well known, Franklin had a lifelong thirst for knowledge. It is recorded that when he took up a vegetarian diet, he rejoiced that the practice allowed him more money to buy books and more time to read them. He put in his lunch hour in earnest study. He loved to discuss questions of the day and the eternal questions that man has always tried to solve. When he was about 21 years old, he founded that celebrated club called the Junto, which flourished for many years to the great enjoyment and benefit of the small number that were allowed to belong to it. One of the most interesting chapters in the life of this wonderfully interesting man concerns the founding and the conduct of the club. The rules and usages of the Junto are an inspiration in themselves.

"Naturally enough, as the members of the Junto debated on various questions, they turned to books for information and to corroborate their judgments. The meetings of the club were first held in a tavern (ah, how many delectable gatherings those old-time taverns have known!) but later on a clubroom was provided by one of the members. Frequently a member would bring a book to the Junto meeting, to read from it, or to use it in illustrating an argument in debate. Franklin suggested that members bring their books to the club room and leave them there for all the members to use when desired. The idea met immediate approval and before long, a good-sized library decorated one end of the Junto room. The plan worked satisfactorily for about a year when some dissatisfaction arose, the books were showing signs of use (no doubt some disappeared, tho we do not find this recorded) and the members took the books back to their own homes again.

"The advantages derived from the use of the Junto books gave Franklin the idea of forming a paid library which subscribing members could use. It must be remembered that in those days books were scarce and very expensive; most were imported from England. Such a thing as an attractive little pocket volume would have been thought hardly worthy to be called a book. James Parton records: 'If any Philadelphian of the present day should venture to take from the library, James Ralph's two folios on the reign of William Third, he could scarcely carry them home without assistance."

"Franklin's plan for a library was along these lines: Each subscriber was to contribute two pounds for the first purchase of books and ten shillings yearly to increase the library and for upkeep. Certainly the idea was one that should have readily appealed, but money was very scarce and general love of reading not widely developed; thus it required five months of the most diligent effort on Franklin's part before he was able to secure the 50 subscribers necessary to go on with the project. It took several months more to collect the pledged funds (modern welfare fund organizers know how this is). Then getting the books from England was a very slow matter, but at last in October, 1732, a year and a half after Franklin first started work, the books came and their arrival created the greatest interest. The Junto room was used as the library and was opened once a week for the distribution of books. During the second year, Franklin himself was the librarian. He also printed a catalog and this exempted him from the yearly fee.

"Later on, non-subscribers were also allowed to take out books by making a deposit and paying a weekly fee. The success of the library was immediate. It grew in volume thru further contributions and thru many donations which were made to it. New subscribers were added slowly but continuously.

"It is hard to overestimate the value to American life of this act of Franklin's in instituting the subscription library. Other libraries came into being all over the country and general reading became quite the fashion. The common people, who in many countries were ill-informed if not actually illiterate, were in America well-read and widely informed on many topics.

"James Parton, whose 'Life and Time of Benjamin Franklin' remains the authority, says, 'Whether Franklin was the originator of subscription libraries, and of the idea of permitting books to be taken to the homes of subscribers, I cannot positively assert. But I can discover no trace of either of these fruitful conceptions before his time. Libraries are nearly as ancient as books but the old libraries appear to have been like old fashioned wells to which every one had to go who wanted water. A lending library is a Croton aqueduct with pipes laid in every house that chooses to pay for them. The universal diffusion of knowledge for which civilization waits had been forever impossible without permanent, self-sustaining town and village libraries on a plan similar to that of the library founded in Philadelphia in 1732.'

"All who use libraries must ever hold Franklin's name in most grateful esteem."

French Writer Urges Bookbuying

IT is undoubtedly true, says the French periodical Excelsior, that there is a serious crisis in the book-trade. There is proportionately much less reading than in the past, and even tho books be still read, they are not bought much. Why is this? Because books are too high, say the people who do not stop to consider that, while everything else has tripled and quadrupled in price, the book has hardly doubled. But there are other reasons. Formerly one loved books for themselves. When a work appeared one bought it to add to one's library and then made one's friends go and do likewise. Today, when you have a copy of a book that is just out, people ask you for it; and as you generally are weak enough to lend it, nine times out of ten you never see it again. It passes indeed, from hand to hand until it falls to pieces, with no profit for the author nor publisher, who have, indeed, no greater enemies than book lenders, unless it be book borrowers. Now the same people who hesitate to pay six or seven francs for a book, do not mind spending the same sum for tea or the movies.

The book also has arrayed against it the author's best friends, who, instead of helping its circulation by propaganda, wait for it to be presented to them, with a dedication, of course. The same people who understand perfectly that their friends, the butcher and baker, cannot make them presents of meat and bread, yet expect the author they know to send them his latest work. They are convinced that it costs him nothing, and that his work of months, —often of years, has been solely for the pleasure of giving away the result of his labor, his efforts, sometimes his privations. The time is nevertheless passed when it was believed that poets lunched on rose-leaf salad and dined on a ray of moonlight!

Come, gentlemen, give the matter a little thought. Go once or twice less to the cafe and buy one or two books each month. And, you ladies, give up one taxi ride or some ribbons. You will lose nothing: quite the contrary, for your wits will gain by being kept in touch with new works otherwise than by hearsay. That is better than a few trinkets. And when you do not know what to give a friend, why not present him with the latest novel or the newest collection of poems? These would be worth much more than flowers which fade so quickly, or a poor perfume which evaporates. If your means permit it, have these books attractively bound with the monogram. By this act you will also give encouragement to the profession of bookbinding, which used to number and which still numbers great artists in its ranks, and which is suffering along with the rest from the crisis in the book-trade.

One or two books a month, it is not much; and yet not only will you be permitting writers to continue their work, but you will also be building up your library. At any rate you will not be throwing money out of the window.

Book Reviewing by Radio

BOOK reviews are to be a new feature of Chicago radio programs. Readers of the Chicago Evening Post who live out of town or who are away for the summer vacation will no longer have to wait impatiently for the Post Friday Literary Review, but if they are radio fans they will hear Llewellyn Jones read every Friday night his leading review, one or two shorter reviews, often a review of a book of poems with a quotation, some of the "News of the Week" and part of Shan Bullock's London letter. It is said that one hundred and fifty thousand homes will hear this program every week from 9:05 to 9:30. The editor confesses to a feeling of stage fright whenever he happens to think of the much-larger-than-heretofore audience which he will be addressing hereafter. He can visualize with equanimity, he says, an author reading his page and reading that his latest book is extremely bad. With less equanimity he imagines such remarks coming directly to the author's ears.

Should Rare Books Leave the Country

By L. G. Ackroyd, in "The Landmark"

ONE wonders very much how far the indignation, expressed from time to time by art-lovers, at the way in which some of the great treasures of art in Great Britain are being bought by Americans is indicative of real and widespread feeling on the subject. When experts write to The London Times we may take it they are quite concerned; but it is doubtful whether the fact that over 90,000 people visited the National Gallery, for instance, to see the famous "Blue Boy," while it was being exhibited recently, is to be attributed to our passionate appreciation of Gainsborough. Great is the power of advertisement, and the information that Sir Joseph Duveen had bought the picture for the famous Californian collector, H. E. Huntingdon, for £150,000, which was much commented on by the Press, certainly had the effect of awakening a good deal of curiosity, if nothing more.

The whole question has been raised anew by the recent sale of many rare books to a notable buyer from the United States, and the astonishing sums which have been paid for some of these coveted treasures. In the Report of the Departmental Committee on English, which was published a short time ago, great concern is expressed 'at the prospect of the disappearance from this country of early printed books and manuscripts still remaining in private hands, and indispensable for the study of important branches of English literature and language.' It may be said here, on the authority of a well-known expert, that rare books are not going over to the United States in anything like the numbers that we are led to suppose, tho it is, of course, true that some literary treasures of unique value were purchased by Dr. Rosenbach who came over here evidently with the intention of buying them, either for himself or other collectors, whatever price might asked—at the sale of Early English literature in the famous Britwell Court Library. There is a fashion in these things, and at present the productions of the Elizabethan period are very much in demand—to the exclusion, let us hope, of many less expensive and less advertised 'lines' from which the English collector of taste, with limited means, may make a choice selection.

But regrettable as it may seem that such a manuscript as the Wakefield or Towneley Mysteries (mystery plays dating from about 1460) should fall to an American bidder for £3,400, after the Wakefield Corporation Library Committee had bid up to and even beyond £3,000; or that Robert Chester's 'Love Martyr, or Rosalin's complaint' (1601), containing the first printed version of Shakespeare's poem, 'A poetical essay on the Phoenix and the Turtle,' should go to the same purchaser (at the trifling price of £3,100)—there are certain facts to be remembered in this connection which may help us to bear our loss with equanimity.

First of all, these literary treasures are going to an English-speaking country, the founders of which were men of our own blood who shared the greater part of our history. Up to the time of the famous 'Boston tea-party' they even shared our forms of government; and now, when it is the earnest wish of all enlightened people that the English-speaking races of the world should be still more closely knit together, it ill becomes us to be perpetually grumbling because our brothers and sisters across the Atlantic cast longing eyes at the rich stores of art and literature which are part of our glorious heritage, and in which they, too, feel a kindred pride.

There is another point. Books are very perishable, and rare books, the real aristocrats, require for their preservation luxurious surroundings and expert care which it is quite impossible for many impoverished owners in a country suffering financially to afford. For the benefit of students from all parts of the world they require, further, to be carefully edited, collated, and exhibited; and it is desirable, of course, that photographs and facsimiles should be made of them whenever possible—all extremely costly processes. The privilege of performing this great public service is usually prized, as it should be, by the rich men whose means permit them to add treasures evidently meant for mankind to their collections. They not only house these books sumptuously and afford every facility to students to study them, but they usually leave them to the nation at death, and thus pay their final debt to the community from which they derived their abundance.

It should also be remembered that, for the purposes of study, the copy of a good book is just as valuable to a student as the original. The enjoyment of a play by Marlowe or Shakespeare is not, fortunately, confined to those who read them in a first edition. In this respect rare books differ from great pictures, of which no copies are ever adequate.

Perhaps in the pages of The Landmark one may safely express the opinion, undoubtedly regarded as unpatriotic in some quarters, that it does not greatly matter whether the first editions of some of the most highly prized literary works remain in our country or go across the Atlantic.

This is, after all, a matter for the connoisseurs and experts rather than for the genuine students and lovers of literature. The small private collectors are not robbed of the fastidious joy with which they peruse their sale catalogs—Mr. Birrell says, 'there is no better reading to be had anywhere.' And they can still prowl about the bookshops and auction-rooms, in which they may chance to find just those desirable 'brown volumes' which no Croesus would so much as look at, but which may gladden a genuine book-lover's heart to the end of his days.

Six Months' Book Publishing

WHILE the total sales of books in the United States in the last two years have steadily increased, the number of individual titles issued has gone up but very slightly, which would seem to be to the health of the business if care as to selections has been exercised at the right point.

The summary of book production for 1921, printed in the Annual Summary Number, January 28th, showed that on new books there had been an increase over 1920 of from 5101 to 5438, or about 6 per cent. If the figures for the first six months this year are an indication of the total year's progress, 1922 will increase over 1921 in about the same ratio. The total of new books for the first six months, is 2656 in 1922, last year 2525. The number of titles that is usually put on the market in the first six months of the year is only slightly less than that for the last six months, the great number that fall in September, October and November being counterbalanced by the small number usually issued in July, August and December.

In the field of new editions very little change was shown between 1086 of 1920 and the 1008 of 1921. The figures for the first six months on new editions show a falling off from 482 in 1921 to 355 in 1922, more than counterbalancing the gain shown in new titles.

The number of books that fall in each separate field of writing is given in detail below, arranged according to percentage of increase or decrease.

in that direction. Such centers are easily pointed out in the large cities, and an interesting visualization of the group habit is shown in an advertisement that was printed in the Boston papers, showing eighteen different firms in extremely varying fields of book business gathered around Beacon Hill. The initiative for this cooperative emphasis on Boston's book center was taken by Charles E. Goodspeed, and it may suggest to other cities a means of emphasizing bookstore promotion.

A Week's Gleanings of Book-Trade News

LLOYD GEORGE has written an introduction to J. Saxon Wills's book on the Genoa Conference.

J. K. HUYSMANS'S "A Rebours," under the title of "Against the Grain," will be published this fall by Lieber & Lewis.

FREDERICK A. STOKES has issued a booklet of interview, appreciations and biography as part of the $10,000 advertising plan to sell Honoré Willsie's "Judith of Godless Valley" this fall.

THE FIRST EDITION of "Maria Chapdelaine," is priced at 500 francs in the June catalog of A. Gomes, bookseller at Nimes.

THE NEW EDITION of "Who's Who in America" (Vol. 12., 1922—23), has just come from A. N. Marquis & Company.

IT IS SAID of John H. Patterson, the head of the National Cash Register Co., who died recently, that when he read a book he liked, he ordered a thousand copies by telegraph, had special sentences underscored in blue pencils, and distributed them among his employees.

MARSHALL JONES announces for immediate publication "Germany in Travail," a volume in the Amherst Books, by Otto Manthey-Zorn, Professor of German in Amherst College, "Cross Currents in Europe Today," by Charles A. Beard, the lectures delivered in June at Dartmouth College will be published about August 1st.

The Chicago Evening Post hails the first novel of Eliot H. Paul, "Indelible," (Houghton) as "the real thing." "I am sure that it will be well worth while for every reader of this review to read 'Indelible' and put it on a shelf where there will be room for others—for Mr. Paul is going to make a very distinctive place for himself as an American author," say Llewellyn Jones in his lengthy review of the book.

ILLUSTRATED BOOKLETS devoted to Anatole France and W. B. Maxwell have recently been printed by Dodd, Mead & Co., who will be glad to send copies on request. The same firm also issues booklets devoted to Archibald Marshall, Louis Couperus, Jean Henri Fabre and Ralph Waldo Trine.

HEINEMANN, the London publisher, has recently issued two attractive booklets containing an appreciation and bibliography, one on John Galsworthy and the other on Joseph Hergesheimer.

Good Book Promotion

THE monthly booklists which D. Appleton & Company have used to bring their books to the attention of the trade during the past year have been an interesting example of imagination applied to trade promotion, and many of the features of this series have been before mentioned in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. The calendar, which includes births and deaths of authors and other references to literary events, past and present, is worth preserving for permanent reference, and the separate list of birthdays of Appleton authors shows the remarkable extent of their catalog, there being very few days in the month when an Appleton author cannot be put down. So much has been said in past years about the stereotyped methods used in promoting books that it is interesting to see how many new ideas have lately appeared not only in display copy for consumer but in trade approach.

Once A Month

A NEW method of emphasizing the constant growth in the list of the Modern Library has been adopted by Boni & Liveright, and, instead of publishing books from time to time or in spring and fall groups, they now plan to add a new volume on the 10th of each month just as the music record people add new items to their list at regular intervals. It would seem likely that the retailers could take good advantage of this regular habit in finding customers who would look forward to seeing what comes next in the Library and in having a book of its character to add to their other book purchases. It would also give opportunity for the bookseller to bring the whole subject of Modern Library again to the customers' attention.

The old method, years ago, of publishing books in monthly series, such as the Town and Country Library, was devised in order to obtain the benefit of second-class mailing rates for the volumes. A revival of this monthly custom in order to give the bookseller and buyer a habit of regularly looking forward to new titles would seem to be much more constructive for present book buying habits.

The Olympic Games

The New York Evening Post, reporting that poets, painters, and musicians as well as athletes are hereafter at the Olympic Games, says:

"The ancient Greeks would hardly have thought the Olympic contest worth while if they had been limited to athletics. Certainly the modern games will gain immensely by the introduction of rival versifiers and novelists. Following the broad jump, for instance, spectators may be invited to witness a poetry competition. Here it would be safe to bet upon our own Vachel Lindsay, who has a way of reciting verse that makes it sound as if something phenomenal were happening. Novelists could not be allowed to read an entire volume, but they could select their weepiest or cleverest or most scandalous unpublished passages and do their worst. Handicaps would be imposed in accordance with the respective lung power of the contestants."

Obituary

JAMES H. McINNES

James H. McInnes, for many years with D. C. Heath & Co.'s New York office, died suddenly while on his vacation, on August 5th. He was 59 years old. When a boy he started with the jobbing house of Charles T. Dillingham and remained with them for nearly fifteen years. Afterwards he joined the selling staff of the Heath concern, and in the past twenty years had represented them for school contracts chiefly in the Metropolitan district. During the nineties he entered politics in his home city, Brooklyn, and was elected to the Board of Aldermen of Greater New York. He became the minority leader during one administration, and vice-chairman of the Board during the term of Mayor Seth Low.

Periodical Note

YONKERS, N. Y.—The MacKinnon Book Service has been appointed special agent in the United States and possessions for The Pan-American Magazine. This is a monthly publication which for 22 years has been devoted to Inter-American and International affairs—literary, financial, historical, industrial.

R. C. SMITH, A. N. Kane and William R. Kane, Highland Falls, N. Y., the publishers of the Editor, Black Cat, and Blue Pencil, are publishing a new monthly periodical called Yours Truly, a magazine of letters and letter writing, which was introduced with the July number.

Business Notes

BOSTON, MASS.—Joseph G. Williams, of the Talmud Society, publishers, has been adjudged in bankruptcy. Meeting of the creditors is called for on September 8.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—C. Rose Smith is to open a new bookstore at 1415 Locust St. about September 15th.

Personal

SUMNER C. BRITTON has recently become connected with the Pictorial Book Company of New York.

EDWARD ANTHONY, author of the New York Herald's famous "Book Factory" columns, has been appointed fiction editor to Farm and Fireside and is to edit for them a monthly humorous page.

The Weekly Record of New Publications

THIS list aims to be a complete and accurate record of American book publications. Pamphlets will be included only if of special value. Publishers should send copies of all books promptly for annotation and entry, and the receipt of advance copies insures record simultaneous with publication. The annotations are descriptive, not critical; intended to place not to judge the books. Pamphlet material and books of lesser trade interest are listed in smaller type.

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent for record. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. When not specified the binding is cloth.

Imprint date is stated [or best available date, preferably copyright date, in bracket] only when it differs from year of entry. Copyright date is stated only when it differs from imprint date: otherwise simply "c." No ascertainable date is designated thus: [n. d.]

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q (4to: under 30 cm.); O (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tf. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ff. (48mo: 10cm.); sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow.

Titles beginning with an unimportant word are inverted to be listed under their subject when possible.

Rare Books, Autographs and Prints

THE Princeton University Press will bring out an unpublished play by Balzac in the Autumn. It is a five-act drama entitled "Cromwell" and the original manuscript will be reproduced in facsimile.

"The Confessions of a Booklover" by Maurice Francis Eagan is announced for early publication by Doubleday, Page & Co. Mr. Eagan's reading has covered a wide range and his comments upon what he has read is full of whimsical humor. The earlier chapters in particular dealing with his first excursions into literature include his discovery of Plutarch and Boccaccio.

The vulgarity of "Tom Jones" is generally excused on the ground of the low tone of manners and sentiment in England in the middle of the eighteenth century. Prof. Wilbur L. Cross of Yale University says "By the side of Mr. Hergesheimer's latest novel ("Cytherea") "Tom Jones" reads like a Sunday-school book."

Professor Brander Matthews owns a copy of Kipling's "Many Inventions" bound by Cobden-Sanderson, the famous English binder who has seldom bound contemporary books. Professor Matthews was so pleased with the book and binding that he sent it to its author and asked him to write his autograph in it. Kipling returned it with three original bits of verse on the fly leaves—a parody of Browning, a parody of James Whitcomb Riley and the following appreciative lines:

"See my literary pants!
I am bound in crushed levants.
Brander Matthews did it, and a Very handsome thing of Branda."

"The Leather Bottle," one of the haunts of Pickwick and known to all Dickens lovers the world over, is for sale. The old inn contains many Dickens' relics. The hanging sign bears a pictured Pickwick addressing the club. The old-fashioned shutters which are fitted to the small windows help to preserve the old world air which Dickens loved so much.

The director of the New York State Library in his last annual report charges that the advance in prices of rare books in American auction rooms is "scandalous" and "is fostered, incited and stimulated by a small group of dealers who prey upon wealth and impose upon the ardor and ignorance of millionaire collectors." A millionaire collector, who has been a heavy buyer in recent years, has taken exception to these charges and has sent this department a long communication with many indications that he resents the imputation that he has been the "prey" of any bookseller, or that he is as "ignorant" as the director would have us believe.

"After the Albany fire," this millionaire collector writes, "the State of New York made great appropriations for rehabilitating the State Library. These were the days when the State Library had wealth and acted like the so-called "ignorant" millionaire. The prices bid in those days by the folks up at Albany became a standing joke among bookmen because they were so much higher than the regular market. At the late Benedict sale Mr. Wyer executed the State Library's bids and he outbid the whole field of contestants. He paid the limit to get what he wanted. The sale was "without reserve." It was a straight sale and the net results did not reimburse Judge Benedict for his costs, notwithstanding he had bought many things in former years at lower prices. The only discordant note at the sale was the announcement made by the auctioneer publicly that he thought it unfair to his client that the libraries should enter into a combine, an understanding or agreement, not to bid against one another and to profit by a deal of this sort. Those who were at the sale saw the drift of competition and generally sympathized with the auctioneer and Judge Benedict. Criticism about combinations comes with bad grace from those who apparently are quite willing to profit from them.

"Beside this criticism itself shows a good deal of ignorance. Every frequenter of the auction room knows that such sweeping charges are ridiculous. Why tar all dealers with the same stick? Some of the things complained of may have been done but all know that if they were it was by the shysters of the trade, the book peddlers and the small fry and that it had little, if any, effect on the book market. These men do not and cannot afford to go in for high priced books. The big men in the rare book business do not put books in sales to establish a new high price. They don't have to do it and the Albany critic should know it.

The director of the New York State Library belongs to a class that has existed since book collecting began—those who are always looking for some ulterior reason for the increase in rare book values. For a generation in England it was Bernard Quaritch, and in New York, George D. Smith. But when these rare book dealers, the greatest of their day, ceased to be factors prices still continued to advance. And prices will advance as long as collectors keep on increasing and rarities to decrease by absorption into great university and public libraries. This is such a simple and transparent fact that the wonder is that the director of the New York State Library does not apparently know it.

"Now books are like many other things. Some people can always be found who pay more than others who shop carefully looking for good values. They do it with clothes, with art objects, and other articles. They foster, incite and stimulate the grasping dealer to keep prices high and to make them higher and we know that they are not all millionaires. Frequently these men can ill afford the imprudence that they practice.

"Now one word about millionaire collectors. The greatest buyers in the United States, taken at large, are not millionaires. The real market is made and sustained by men who make sacrifices to build up their collections. And the real millionaires who buy books and manuscripts cannot be accused of ignorance. Men like Beverly Chew, Marshal C. Lefferts, the late J. Pierpont Morgan, Henry Walters, Grenville Kane, who are really types of many collectors in the United States, could put anybody in the New York State Library to shame in knowledge of the things that they buy.

"And the director of the New York State Library would do well to remember that after accusing rich collectors of "ignorance" and the dealers of trickery it is ludicrous to expect the one class to die and leave their treasures to the State Library and the other class to sit in at the auctions and allow the State Library to pick up bargains.

"I notice that the State Library condemns directories as a 'pestiferous and numerous brood' of 'useless books.' In the matter of auction buying the Albany folks need a directory more than a director to set them right. They are to windward and don't know how to take a tack. It is a sound policy, in my judgment, for institutions to cultivate the good will of collectors, whether millionaires or not, and to enlist the cooperation of the outstanding and real booksellers. This double goodwill will bring good results to any institution which practices it. Such a pronouncement as the State Library has put forth has in it its own undoing."

Hugh Walpole, the English novelist, has long been an enthusiastic Scott collector. In a recent letter to the London Times he calls attention to the fact that "The Fortunes of Nigel" was written just a century ago. He owns the manuscript of this novel which formerly belonged to Ruskin, the corrected proof sheets, the first edition in boards, and all important later editions. He says that "whereas the manuscript is practically without corrections from beginning to end, the proof sheets are thick with additions and subtractions in Scott's own handwriting, marked, too, with many friendly controversies with Ballantyne."

Extensive alterations are being made at the Anderson Galleries to provide for additional gallery space. On the second floor where there were two galleries before, there will be four additional rooms. One of these will be used for book exhibitions. The fourth floor, hitherto unused for exhibition purposes, will have three large and two small galleries to take care of the need for increased exhibition space. They will be skylighted rooms suitable for the exhibition of paintings, fine rugs and other art objects requiring a clear, natural light to show them to advantage. The alterations will provide about 5,000 square feet of additional space and will be completed in time for sales to begin early in October as usual.

George H. Sargent, in an article on "The Almanac and the Flight of Time," in the current number of Antiques, refers to the first American Almanac of which there is no known copy and for which collectors have been on the watch since the collecting of Americana began. Its title is given in Bradford's "Diary": "An Almanac for 1639. By William Pierce, Cambridge. Printed by Stephen Daye, 1639." William Pierce was a mariner, for many years the most noted that had ever come into New England waters, and the friend of the early leaders of the Massachusetts Colony. Daye was the first New England printer. The Pierce almanac antedated by one year the "Bay Psalm Book," the first book printed in New England.

NOTICE.

In advertising for "Books Wanted" three things should be remembered that will help you to find and the other fellow to quote:

1—Have your lists typed, or very plainly written.

2—Arrange the items in alphabetical order by author.

3—If possible give the name of the author, as the title only, unless anonymous, is too indefinite.

Observation of these suggestions is urgently requested.

"MAKING THE HOUSE A HOME"

A little masterpiece in prose - - - $ .75

The Milwaukee Sentinel says: "The same heart interest that has endeared Edgar Guest's poems to a multitude of readers, attaches to this passage from his own life story, so simply, revealingly, and movingly told. 'Making the House a Home' is a beautifully sincere and appealing recital that will touch the tenderest emotions of every feeling heart. Mr. Guest's philosophy of living shines as joyously from this intimate narrative of his own home building as from his verse, which is treasured in countless American homes today."

THE VAN ROON

By J. C. SNAITH

Have you followed "The Van Roon" as a serial? If you have, you needn't be told what a corking story it is. Snaith has scored again as successfully as he did with "The Undefeated" and "The Sailor."

An altogether delightful novel is this. It is the story of a curious and interesting group of characters, seen in a situation that dramatically reveals the traits of human nature. A painting by an old master is discovered, "The Van Roon," and the novel deals with the struggle which arises for its possession. To certain of the characters the painting comes as a revelation of beauty; to others it represents merely the vast sum of money it is worth. Here is a story certain to please the critics and the book buying public alike. $2.00

Plenty of Entertainment in These Three Novels

At Sight of Gold

By Cynthia Lombardi

Author of "A Cry of Youth," etc.

Colorful and amazingly dramatic is the wonderful story that Cynthia Lombardi tells. The rich background is sunny Italy and the social and operatic world of New York. Two women dominate the book; headstrong, unscrupulous Geraldine Moore who forsakes all dictates of honor "at sight of gold," and beautiful Clara Day, who finds triumphs at the world's greatest opera house.

ROGUES' HAVEN

By Roy Bridges

Men flocking to the scent of gold gather like vultures about the estate of old Edward Craike. The ruinous house in its gloomy grounds is guarded by men more like the crew of a pirate ship than the house-men of a peaceful English home What is the mystery? Whence the gold? In this altogether absorbing tale readers will delight in the dash and surprises which attend John Howe's pursuit of his rightful inheritance.

"THE BLOOD SHIP" is a ripping yarn—one of the sort you can't put down once the captain begins to unravel the mystery of its blood-soaked planks and its frenzied skipper. It has the elements that make it a bully story—snap and go, lots of action, the tang of the sea, and it certainly reads like the work of a man who knows ships and shanghaied crews.

ANNOUNCING

RHESA

RHESA is a tale of adventure and romance, of conspiracy and intrigue, replete with the thrills and surprises of exciting events in a momentous historical period. It is powerful in brilliant characterizations of many Babylonian, Persian and Jewish leaders in the events culminating in the downfall of the great Babylonian Empire.

RHESA is unique in that, without lessening one whit the rapid action of a stirring story, it accurately depicts the history, the life of the times, the customs of the people, of that once mighty Empire now regarded as the very cradle of civilization.

KRITTERS OF THE KITCHEN KINGDOM: and how to make them

By AUNT JO and UNCLE GEORGE

¶ This novelty picture-book for the kiddies contains sixteen illustrations in full color, with accompanying verses telling how children can make the most amusing toys with pins, cloves, cardboard, clothes pins and common vegetables and fruits.

¶ We believe that this attractive volume offers unusual possibilities for making unique window displays, and in order to stimulate originality, we offer the following cash prizes for the best displays that appear between September 1st and 30th:

First Prize: TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS
Second Prize: FIFTEEN DOLLARS
Third Prize: TEN DOLLARS

¶ Make an original window display of this unique book! It will bring excellent sales, and—possibly—one of the prizes. Make a photograph of your window—a snapshot will do—and send it to us before October 7th. Competent judges will select the winning displays and award the prizes. Be sure, however, when sending in your photograph that the name of the store and the dates of the display appear on the back of the photograph.

¶ The contest is confined to those dealers who have the books in stock, or have ordered them, at the time of the first announcement of this contest.

¶ A part of Walter H. Page's letters have appeared in "The World's Work," but many of them describing some of the most interesting events of Mr. Page's life have never been published before.

¶ The description of his early life in the South, his memories of the Civil War, his later work in education, and his successful efforts toward establishing advanced education in the South, his work as an editor of the Forum and of the Atlantic Monthly, is as interesting and as fascinating as his letters written during the World War.

¶ The important part he played in keeping diplomatic relations between Great Britain and America during the Mexican trouble in 1913 and 1914, the marvelous picture he shows of England from 1913 to 1915 on the eve of war, his delineation of England's social problems at that time, new letters descriptive of Secretary Bakers' visit to England during the war, and all of the letters written after August 1918 are found for the first time in this book.

The Two-Foot Bookshelf

WHEN the final vote for the best twenty-five books for the bookshelf for a one-room schoolhouse was announced by the American Library Association and the National Education Association, who had been holding the ballot, the papers thruout the country carried the list as a good news story, and in many other ways this list is likely to be discussed and described. This gives opportunity for the bookseller to connect a special display of children's books with an item of real news value.

The New York papers of August 9th carried an article describing the way Columbia University summer school had put the actual books on display in connection with its courses on library economy in the building of the school of journalism. A small two-shelf bookcase or long single shelf of about three feet in length will carry this collection, and clippings describing the event or special signs will make it an interesting feature in any window or children's department.

Censorship Discussion

THE high tide of censorship discussion reached in the New York press last week brought letters from all sides and continued interviews from Mr. Sumner, Secretary of the Vice Society. It seems unfortunate that Mr. Sumner cannot in any way come to understand the attitude of the other people with whom he has to deal, and with every step it becomes increasingly difficult for sensibly minded people to work with him.

Mr. Sumner's attack on the younger writers has also alienated from co-operative discussion the Authors' League, as no such broad statement could sincerely be made by any one who is interested in current literature.

Mr. Sumner's argument is again weakened by the fact that he has recently been badly advised in picking the cases for suit. The fact that this Society had to pay damages of $2500 for bringing a seller of Theophile Gautier's "Mlle. de Maupin" into court is thought by some to have suggested this new move. The fact, however, that it seems impossible to work with Mr. Sumner in his present frame of mind has not relieved the book-trade from the responsibility of maintaining as high standards in publishing as possible, and the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY continues to point out that both publishers and retailers should do their own house cleaning without the pressure of law.

The courts have once pointed out that the gesture accompanying the sale of a book might be obnoxious while the book itself was not. If a publisher cannot handle a book without putting around the sales effort an atmosphere that obviously indicates that he believes the book is questionable, the book should not be published. His fellow publishers will think the less of him for thus lowering the publishing standards.

If the retailer carries books that he cannot handle without endeavoring to increase their sale thru cupboard storage and undertones, he had better keep his self-respect and put his selling effort elsewhere. The recent upheaval has brought us nowhere, and perhaps set the clock back.

Simplifying Paper Sizes

AN analysis of the casual collection of 12mos. on the shelves of a large manufacturer of books showed that of 177 books measured there were 101 different sizes. Not all these variations could have been made in the interest of artistic individuality, and most of them must have been chosen because of lack of information as to the best sizes to suit standard forms of paper. This condition is similar to that which is found in all collections of printed matter, whether magazines, catalogs or material for mail-order purposes.

The Department of Commerce, thru its Bureau of Standardization, has been endeavoring to throw light on this subject, and a special committee has now been appointed to consider the conditions in the paper field covering not only books but circulars, booklets, catalogs, magazines, programs, etc. The efforts of this Bureau have done a great deal of good in other lines, and their work in the paper field should be cordially welcomed by all users of paper.

A program that would simplify the number of paper sizes used and give information to users of paper as to how to get all the advantages possible out of the various ways of folding these sizes would be of great benefit to the trade. It would mean to the mill man economical manufacture and a more continuous operation of the paper machinery, thus decreasing the cost of making. It would take great pressure from the wholesaler of paper, decreasing the amount of space needed, decreasing the investment and losses by depreciation and enable him at the same time to give better service. The user of paper would be able to get better prices, better and speedier service and more uniform quality as well as have the advantage of buying in a more open market.

The Bureau of Standardization has, it should be clearly understood, no power and, in fact, no intention of enforcing its final recommendations. At the same time, its recommendations would be bound to have considerable influence in directing the demands for paper along certain channels, and others would find it to their pecuniary advantage to buy along those lines.

Taking the field of paper use as a whole, excluding for this study newsprint, the paper sizes that are to be most particularly studied in their possibilities for general use are 25x38, 30½x41, 32x44, and the double sheet sizes of these.

The National Association of Book Publishers is planning to co-operate with the government committee in obtaining data as to book needs and has sent to all members a questionnaire, asking for information as to the sizes most needed. After a study of this end, the publishers will then take steps to study the situation in the binding board and binding cloth fields to see if there can be simplification and saving.

Trade Commission Investigation

THE decision of the Federal Trade Commission which will be awaited with especial interest by the book-trade is that in connection with their investigation of the complaint of the Little Leather Library Company against Samuel Silverman et al.

The Little Leather Library Company have been developing for some years a substantial business in the reprinting of classics, and their books and their method of marketing them are well known. In the evidence submitted it appeared that the Silverman company had sought to buy sheets or reprints of these little classics, and, failing to make this arrangement, had made a similar series of their own, the type pages following word for word the type pages of the Little Leather Library. Moreover, in advertising these, the advertisements, according to the exhibits, were made to appear very similar in form to those of the Little Leather Library—a long row of books in photograph, but with the name of the advertiser inconspicuous.

There could be no question of infringement of copyright in this case, but of bad business practice, and if the verdict is given in favor of the Little Leather Library Company, an important precedent will be established, similar to that which Stokes obtained in local court when the "Dere Mable" format was closely imitated.

Funk & Wagnalls Get Lloyd George Book

CABLES of August 13th from London announce the final closing of contracts for a book from Lloyd George, probably the most sought after book of political reminiscences ever published. American book rights have been secured by Funk & Wagnalls, who are not as yet ready to make announcement as the plans or publication date.

The total aggregate amount which the Prime Minister is to receive is said to be £100,000. In Great Britain the memoirs will appear in the Sunday Times, and Cassell has the book rights. The serial rights in the United States and Canada are secured by the New York Times and Chicago Tribune, who will presumably arrange for simultaneous publication in newspapers in all the leading cities in America and Canada.

It is said that the project has been in Lloyd George's mind for a long time and has of late taken more definite form, owing to the publication during recent months of such a succession of books on the war, which the Prime Minister believes often have had scant foundation and not actual knowledge. These books have sometimes acrimoniously criticized him, and he believes that in the interest of historical accuracy as well as in justice to himself he should very soon submit the facts to the judgment of the public. Otherwise, he would have deferred writing until his retirement. Special attention will be given to the events from August 1914 to the final ultimatum to Germany and the later conferences.

English papers point out that while other British Premiers have been authors, as for instance Gladstone, Beaconsfield, Rosebery and Balfour, the production of a book of more or less political character during actual tenure of office is unprecedented. It is said that, sensing possible criticism of his action, the Prime Minister took counsel with two of his leading colleagues and neither saw any valid objection.

The Broadcasting of Books

How W. J. Z. sends stories out across the country

By Louise Hunting Seaman

THERE was once a time when the publicity manager for the Radio tramped New York City streets in dejection, begging the newspapers to co-operate with him, and racking his brain for material.

Now his program book is almost too full for comfort. His organization moves like clockwork. His programs are sent all over the country weeks ahead of time. Few papers do not boast at least a radio corner, and there are several radio magazines.

When the programs were first printed, I noticed several items from WJZ, Newark, that suggested book publicity. The Westinghouse program maker was friendly to my suggestions, and at different times last spring, various Macmillan authors made trips to the Westinghouse broadcasting station in Newark. Marguerite Wilkinson read poems from her book "Blue-Stone." She reported that it was the first audience which had ever frightened her, being invisible. Edmund Lester Pearson read from "The Voyage of the Hoppergrass", Katharine Adams read the Irish play from "Mehitable", Taylord Johnson read from "The Star People", Algernon Tassin read from "The Rainbow String", Margaret Allen read some "English Fairy Tales", and said she wished that they could broadcast Rackham's pictures of the dancing maidens had been at the Radio show. Harold Noice sent a message from Mr. Stefansson to boys, and read a tale of how he and Stefansson shot a polar bear.

By this time it was clear that for proper publicity a regular time must be taken. Publicity for the book was the point. So a program must be drawn up of good reading, and interesting authors or special readers procured later if luck were with us. The "bed-time" story hour was filled with the many newspaper and syndicate men. There was little for the older boy and girl. So Macmillan, whose pride is the "Ladder Library" for boys and girls of all ages, promised to supply half an hour of adventure stories for boys and girls from eight to twelve years old.

Soon it was my turn to read. I had escorted to many people thru the ordeal to be disturbed. All I was worried about was whether my voice would really "carry". I had stood in the little box in the corridor, "listening in" on several voices that needed "extra punch" to be carried to the roof. I had stood in the sending house on the roof and heard such dreadful noises thrown into the protesting air by the amplifier. So I went slowly, and low as I could in pitch, and put all the "push" into it that my pusher would allow. They said it carried well, and I said half an hour was enough. A singer stops between selections, but the reader of an adventure story keeps on steadily from seven to seven-thirty.

MISS SEAMAN READING FROM ROBERTS' "SECRET TRAILS" INTO THE WJZ WIRE AT NEWARK

Many Sundays have seen me strolling past the Newark greens or dashing up to the great red building in a taxi, according to the temper of the Hudson Tubes. Instead of a bare laboratory, the sending room now is a cheerful comfortable place, arranged like a library. There are comfortable sofas and deep chairs, tables with low lamps, pictures and flowers. I feel very intimate with the bust of Westinghouse, and the picture of the great Pittsburgh plant. The fireplace is never used. On the contrary, they run ice water in the pipes of this room. It must be kept pretty tightly closed from outside noise. The faithful "Al", however, is attentive with fans and ice water, and the bright insignia on his white coat, an orange circle with realistic embroidery of the famous roof at Newark, is always a cheering sight.

These, however, are not the vital spots in the room. Here is a mahogany cabinet, which looks like a big victrola case. Three little lights sparkle on its severe front face, which also holds several mysterious small dials. A tube from this comes to the small black cylinder into which one speaks. Last Sunday I was amazed to see the cabinet standing mute and lightless by the wall, and a low table effect in its place. These changes in apparatus are made frequently. There have been six different kinds of "receivers" in a year. We from Macmillan's have met three: The flat round white disk before which one had to stand like a soldier; the "ether-cone" which one held firmly by the hand; and the cylinder (which you see in the picture) which is raised or lowered, allowing you to stand, to sit, to recline on the sofa, as you choose. It is fairly easy to believe that this little thing takes an individual voice to the roof, but when one is told that it also "receives" concerts, even to the work of a village choir, a roomful of Elks, ditto of Princeton seniors, one gazes at it more respectfully.

The Selecting of Material

Into this black box have been sent selections from Colum's "The King of Ireland's Son," Roberts' "Secret Trails," Major's "Bears of Blue River," Neihardt's "The Splendid Wayfaring," Jack London's "Brown Wolf and Other Stories for Boys" (Read by the Editor, Franklin Mathiews, Chief Boy Scout Librarian), Meigs' "The Pool of Stars," Miller's "Sea Fighters," etc. Our program will continue to emphasize history and biography, and where an author or editor is available who has both a good voice and a free hour, he will be invited to read his own work. The programs have to be released so far ahead of the actual reading that it is not always easy to get last minute personalities on the radio pages. However, they always get their announcement on the ether, as elaborate as they choose.

I have seen an actress bring along her publicity man, who gave her ten minutes of good advertising introduction; a society lady receive a five minute introduction, read a telegram in two minutes and spend fifteen minutes having her picture taken; a singer powder and lipstick carefully, as moral support I suppose, for her picture was not to be taken. Generally there is no audience, tho occasionally other "artists" drift in before their hour or linger after it, and visitors stop in who have official permits. The jolly old watchman is very strict about this; your name is asked at the entrance and you are not allowed to walk about the building without an escort.

But there always is an escort ready. The operators are a most friendly, courteous and interesting group of young mechanicians. They are keen about their work: the program part, announcing the artists, calming their temperaments, answering the same old questions, has its elements of humor, and the mechanical part gives them a real chance for important experiment. They are always ready to take people to the roof: that, to me, is the most thrilling part of the outfit.

What WJZ Looks Like

You walk past Westinghouse office fans, subway fans, generators, etc., etc. You climb stairs with curved corners painted white, you pass two enormous generators, then climb up steep steps thru a hatchway, into the wind. Newark spreads below you, a great pattern of wires above. A little cabin houses the precious sending machinery. The antennae and the counter-poise are pointed out, and the ground connection. A man appears with a small receiving set in his hands. He walks along under the wires. "Want to hear how that fiddler hops off?" he inquires. Of course I do, and I listen to him as he "hops off" into the sunset. This is more dramatic than to sit in the little box downstairs, and say, "Hello, the roof! Please put the speaker on the telephone". That is how the operators below test your hopping-off quality.

Inside the cabin effect there's a tall black box containing the vacuum power tubes for the two sets of waves, the voice frequency waves and the radio frequency waves. These tubes burn with an uncanny brilliance, small delicate things that are the heart of the whole system.

On a desk nearby is the log book, in which the roof operator reports the time and quality of each speaker. Between the windows hang operators' government licenses. There is a Victrola and there are duplicates of the official releases, stocks, baseball scores, etc., etc. In case anything should go wrong with the connection between first floor and roof, there is a big Victrola, duplicate sheets of announcements and a fan-like amplifier, by means of which the releases fill the cabin with noice. There stands the navy receiving set that has received conversation in Germany. Would that Macmillan business took me to that roof in the small hours when there is such super-exciting receiving.

That is the romance of book broadcasting. What are the cold practical results in book sales? It is as hard to tell as with most publicity. At least the name of book and author appear on every newspaper radio page. Beyond that, the direct response is scattered and only occasional for a publisher who has no magazine medium or newspaper column like the ed-time story men. But New Jersey women's clubs have been responsive. Several youngsters have made inquiries. And many people have reported their interest and appreciation of the type of material we send. So they must listen for half an hour, which more than they give to printed ads. We may be heard in strange places. In the Newark offices there is a map with colored pins at the places that have reported receiving. Down in the Panama Canal Zone, up by Hudson Bay, ships on the Pacific, ships on the Atlantic, San Francisco, Seattle, Dalhousie, Chaleur Bay, etc. There is a framed letter from the Standard Oil tanker "Hera" off Havre. The radio operator had been feeling mighty far from home, when suddenly he picked up "Old Black Jo", and "A Perfect Day", sung as clearly as if in the next room. The Literary Digest says, "It is a fair presumption that the largest audience ever associated for joint entertainment night after night anywhere in the world is that which puts on its headpieces to listen to the instructive and entertaining programs of the most important station in the Metropolitan district, known to everyone as WJZ, the Westinghouse station at Newark, New Jersey."

Signs As Salesmen

By Ward Macauley
of Macauley Brothers, Detroit, Michigan

THE value that properly made signs may well have as a part of the selling force, is rarely appreciated. We do not always realize that the right kind of sign can easily serve as an efficient salesman that works every moment that the store is open (longer if used in the window), never gets tired or ill, collects no salary after the initial cost, never has a bad hour, and can speak to customers when a human being could not effectively do so.

You enter a drug store. You desire to buy some shaving cream at a rear counter. An aggressive demonstrator meets you at the door, possibly sprinkles your coat liberally with a new variety of perfume (requiring explanations at home later on). She is hard to shake off and with difficulty you reach the counter where you make your purchase. You resent the whole proceeding. Perhaps your patronage is lost as a result of the incident. An effective sign such as this would have accomplished better results if so placed that it must meet the eye of the incoming customer. (See example number 1.)

Let us say, as an example, that the day the new book by the author of "Main Street" is published, six hundred people enter your store. Some of these come for stationery, magazines, business with the office, or for many reasons other than buying books. It would not be possible to stop every one of these six hundred persons and say: "The author of 'Main Street' has an interesting new book just out today." Of course, we must do all of that, to at least all that we can within reason; but at the very best we will do well if we succeed in selling ten per cent about the new book by Sinclair Lewis. But a sign placed at a strategic point will get the eye of the majority who enter. The more distinctive the sign the more care given to its writing and the better planned its position, the better the results will be.

It seems strange that many merchants will spend ten dollars or more in a single insertion of a newspaper advertisement, to the preparation of which they have given little thought, and yet hesitate to spend from 50 cents to $2 for a sign that will begin producing direct results the moment it is put in place.

When we consider a sign as a salesman, we come to see the importance of its appearance. We would not tolerate a salesman wearing a soiled collar, in need of a shave, or with patched clothing. The sign that has become dog-eared and dusty in the service has earned a rest and should get it.

There are really two kinds of signs, those that are more or less static, and those that are timely and have a measure of news interest. The static signs include those that direct to certain departments or tell the kind and price of the books in a permanent table display. It is obvious that we can afford to spend more money on a sign that we expect to use for some time, and a little extra expense here for quality and distinctiveness is usually justified. But it never pays to let any sign, however permanent its message, become too static. Change it, revamp it once in a while. The incidental sign will often pay for itself even if its message is only good for a day or a week. "Mr. So and So lectures at the Chamber of Commerce today. Read his books." "'Shavings' played at the Garrick Theater this week. Read the fine story by Joseph C. Lincoln from which this splendid play was taken." "'Penrod' at the Movie Palace tonight. Get the complete story of Penrod in book form, only 75c". These and a host of others like them are incidental signs that pay for themselves if ever three or four extra sales result—and they always do. Also their constant use gives a store the prestige of being aggressive and up-to-date. A hundred dollars taken out of the advertising appropriation and put into good incidental signs will be money well spent and will bring more direct returns than any other form of advertising can do.

A sign such as this saves the selling force many questions and accomplishes more sales than we are aware of:

SIGN NUMBER 4

SIGN NUMBER 5

But signs of this sort must not be allowed to become moth-eaten.

On the new fiction table, it is well once in a while to remove the sign stating that the display includes the latest novels and substitute one recommending a certain book. It is amazing the number of sales such a sign will make, particularly in busy seasons. A very large sign strongly recommending "A Man For The Ages" sold fifty copies on the day of publication in a western bookstore. Try an incidental sign like any of these on your fiction table:

(See examples 3, 4, 5)

Posters are excellent and serve a most useful purpose, but they do not take the place of individual signs, purposely made by an individual store to convey an individual message.

Of course, signs may be overdone. It is not a good plan to plaster the entire display window and the entire store with them. They should be carefully placed with an idea of the symmetry of the whole salesroom. Their size should also be taken into consideration. A display may easily be spoiled by a top-heavy sign. On the other hand, an immense sign—as large as four full sheets may be effective when used with a display of a large number of copies of one book. The sign can tell quite little about the book, perhaps quote from it, and you will be surprised to find how many people will pause to read it. The psychology of the big sign is the same as the psychology of the big-spread newspaper advertisement, to attract attention and convey an idea of importance through very bigness. This is the way it works in practice.

Signs Cost But Little

There are few window displays of books that cannot be improved by a properly worded sign made especially for the particular display. We know that window space is highly expensive and if a small outlay will increase the pulling value of the space, by all means let us do it. A new book comes in and we hope that it will have a good sale because we have purchased one hundred copies of it. We place them all in the window, but the sales are limited. The display lacks pulling power. The man on the street sees the display, notes that we have quite a number of copies, but he knows nothing about the book or the author and we do not tell him. A card telling him why we thought the book sufficiently interesting to buy one hundred copies will quickly begin to reduce that number. Safely, it can be depended upon to double the value of the display. Is that worth 75c to $1.25? A sign in the window is talking to your customer when you cannot. It is the only form of talking to the man on the sidewalk that high class merchandising any longer countenances.

Instead of regarding signs as merely a very minor part of our business detail, we should give them the most careful thought, be willing to spend money on them, and above all to keep them clean and up-to-date. Don't display signs saying, "Do your Christmas Shopping Early" on December 23rd, or keep your "Hot Weather Reading" cards in view when fall comes around. Watch your signs and they will work hard for you. Remember, a good sign well worded and properly placed may be better than an extra clerk.

Anti-Censorship Organizes

A WAR against censorship was started in New York by the organization of a group of writers and artists, headed by George Creel of the Authors' League. This organization has asked for copies of the briefs in the recent court case and transcript of the expert testimony in regard to the Schnitzler, Lawrence and other books. The new organization is called the "Joint Committee for the Promotion and Protection of Art and Literature." The book-trade is not represented, but the membership of the Anti-Censorship Committee is as follows:

George Creel, Chairman; Eric Schuler, Secretary and Treasurer; Frank Gillmore, representing the Actors' Equity Association; Owen Davis, Eugene Buck, James Forbes and Jerome Kern, the American Dramatists; Joseph N. Weber, H. E. Breriton, E. Canavan and T. F. Gamble, the American Federation of Musicians; Jesse Lynch Williams, Ellis Parker Butler, William Hamilton Osborne and Louis Joseph Vance, the Authors' League of America, Inc.; William S. Cooper, representing the Cinema Camera Club; C. B. Falls, J. J. A. Murphy, Tony Sarg and Walter D. Teague the Guild of Free Lance Artists; Sidney Olcott and George L. Sargent, the Motion Picture Directors' Association; Peter J. Brady and Matthew Woll, the printing trades unions, and Elmer Rice of the Screen Writers' Guild.

The following is Mr. Creel's statement in regard to the matter:

"The purpose of the committee is to unite and direct every possible force in the fight against censorship, no matter what the form or manifestation. The spirit of narrow-minded intolerance, proceeding from the motion picture, has commenced to threaten the drama and literature, and unless resisted, it is only a question of time when every product of the creative instinct will be called upon to run a gauntlet of beadles.

"It is in no sense our contention that art in its various forms is above all law and exempt from the operation of social restraints and disciplines. We do not seek special privileges or claim sacrosanctity. In thus submitting to law, however, we claim the protection of law.

"We say to society: 'It is our right to speak or to write as we please, without having the propriety of our writing or speaking passed upon in advance by an individual or any body, no matter how created or how formed. But, having spoken or written, we do not ask immunity. We are willing to answer for our convictions, only asking that the responsibility shall be duly subpoenaed, the offense set forth in the indictment and the trial held in accordance with constitutional procedure.'

"It is this orderly process that censorship defies, being a denial of the rights of the individual at every point. It is, in its essence, pre-judgment. It assumes guilt rather than innocence. It substitutes the prejudices or opinions of a person, or persons, for the law of the land.

"This law, we contend, is ample for the protection of the public against the indecent and the obscene. In Federal and State statutes and municipal ordinances the penalties for these offenses are set down plainly. All that censorship does—all it can ever do—is to multiply confusion, irritation and expense, adding to the vast standing army of snoopers that bids fair to outnumber our civil population and bringing all law into contempt.

"Putting aside every legal aspect of the matter, there are still other phases of censorship that make it as absurd as it is odious. When it comes to the thing called morals, for instance, there are no fixed standards and exact definitions, for the change in these standards and definitions is as inevitable as continuous.

"Not only does every age have its own interpretations of vice and virtue, but every race, every creed, and, it might almost be said, every community. Our grandmothers shrank from the mention of legs, and exhausted effort in guarding the ankle from view; Ibsen's plays were barred from the London stage for fifteen years; 'Adam Bede' was shunned for a long while because the plot turned on a seduction; the first tights nearly brought about the suppression of the theater, and the introduction of the waltz was fought as an indecency that would wreck the home.

"Censors, however, not only establish fixed standards and definitions, but also determine effects. Working with a cocksure certitude that appals, they assume knowledge of the mental and emotional states of a whole people, and make hair-trigger decisions as to what will excite to lust or lawlessness or loose living.

"Innocence is to rest entirely on ignorance. The evils of life must be ignored, also the fundamental facts of life. This stands proved by the action of the Pennsylvania motion picture censors in barring that section of film showing a prospective mother making baby clothes. Even the stork is taboo. Such an attitude if honest cannot stop short of supervising everything that is written, spoken, painted, photographed or craved.

"The whole business of censorship is worse than extra-legal, stupid and futile. It is as a matter of fact, more conducive to nasty thinking than any of the nastinesses it assumes to curb. We are opposed to the entire process, and intend to fight it in every city and every State."

Questions of Film Titles

THE Federal Trade Commission, according to a report from Washington, is taking a hand in the matter of the use of book titles in film productions. The producers are accused of using the title of a book in connection with a film which scarcely follows the subject matter of the book at all. The Commission states that in one case it visited two theaters in Washington exhibiting films bearing the same book title. One film was found to accurately interpret the characters of the book, while the other bore no resemblance whatever to the book. In the opinion of the Commission, the title was employed solely in a deceptive sense. Further confirmation of the lack of protection that can be had in the film world is shown in the case that James Oliver Curwood had against the producers recently when he sold them the film rights on a short story written before the days of his fame, and they took the title and the value of his name and wove around it a plot having little to do with the material in hand.

Costs Up 2100%

THE Government Commerce Reports for the last of July state that the German press is in a bad situation, owing to the difficulty of passing on to the consumer the enormous increase in cost. Printers' wages have increased about 2100% over the pre-war; newsprint paper, which was .20 mark per kilo in 1914 is now 8 marks or more, that is 40 times. It is estimated that the cost of printing machinery and ink also increased about 40 times over pre-war. On the other hand, the subscription prices of German newspapers have on the average increased only about 19 times, and it has not been possible to increase the advertising rate to compensate for the cost. The Frankfurter Zeitung, probably the best known German newspaper outside of Berlin, now costs 30 marks per month as against 3 marks in 1914.

Mail Order Selling for Bookstores

By William S. Thompson

Manager of the Mail Order Department, G. P. Putnam's Sons

PART IV

THE OPERATIONS INVOLVED

The physical processes involved in mail order selling after the printed material is on hand, are reproducing letters and cards, addressing, folding, enclosing, sealing, stamping and mailing.

If the bookseller is in a town or city where there are addressing and mailing concerns which do this kind of work, on either the piece rate or contract basis, he had much better hire it done than try to maintain a permanent force for it. If he is in a place which is too small for at least one of these, his list will probably be small enough to enable the work to be done by his regular force, with perhaps the addition of one or two or more temporary helpers. Circularizing, to be effective, must usually be finished and mailed on a certain day. Delay is likely to cost money, so schedules of this kind must be rigidly adhered to and in such cases the addressing and mailing concern will be found a great convenience, because its workers are usually experts and capable of getting thru a great deal of work in a comparatively short time, whereas the bookseller's own force is not accustomed to such work, and incapable of much speed. Experience counts in this as in any other manual operation. There is always a best way to fold a circular, or to assemble the pieces and put them in the envelope.

The Addressing

All operations involving the use of the lists, specially those of Buyers and Prospects should be done on the bookseller's own premises, even if people are sent in by an agency for that purpose. The lists in any form, either on cards or on addressed envelopes should never be sent out except to be mailed at the Post Office.

If owing to lack of room, it is a positive necessity for the bookseller to send his list out to be addressed, or after addressing in his own shop to send the addressed envelopes out to be filled, it is quite in order to send along a trusted employee to watch the work until it is finally delivered to the Post Office.

Hand addressing is quite sufficient for all ordinary purposes. Typewritten addressing need only be used when the circular matter is to go to a small specially selected part of the list to sell something at more than the ordinary price. In case the addresses are typewritten the letter should be filled in, but typed addresses and filled in letters are, in the writer's opinion, quite superfluous, and an unnecessary expense in all but very exceptional cases.

Folding may be done either by hand or by one of the small folding machines which have been placed on the market. It is usually done by hand even by agencies except in large quantities. Enclosing must be done by hand. The writer has knowledge of no machine for enclosing which has as yet been sufficiently perfected to admit of its being placed regularly on the market. There are several efficient and inexpensive machines for sealing and for stamping, and one or two which both seal and stamp.

Handling the Stamps

There has been much discussion over the comparative advantages of mailing under 1c. and under 2c. stamps. In ordinary circularizing the 1c. stamp is sufficient. The 2c. stamp usually brings a few more orders to the thousand circulars mailed but not enough more to cover the additional $10.00 postage, and a profit on top of it. A good general rule is to use 2c. stamps on any offer of sufficient importance to justify typing the envelope and filling in the letter, and 1c. stamps in all other cases. When 2c. stamps are used the bookseller's ordinary correspondence envelope is sufficient. With 1c. stamps what is called a pennysaver envelope should be used, one which seals like an ordinary correspondence envelope, but which is open at one end, for postal inspection.

If circularizing is to be done in considerable quantities the bookseller will do well to get from his local Post Office a permit to use precancelled stamps. They save much postal time in the handling of third-class mail, as they do not have to go thru the cancelling machines.

When any quantity of circulars are to be deposited in the Post Office, and especially when it is desired to mail circulars so they will be received on a certain delivery, it is well to consult the Post Master or the Superintendent of Mails, and take his advice as to the hour when such mail should be deposited at the Post Office.

In fact, the Post Office officials are generally ready and able to offer definite suggestions to a heavy mailer which will result in expediting his mailings considerably. A bookseller who contemplates mailing in quantities will do well to cultivate the friendship and take the advice of the local postal officials.

If, after he is well started in mail order work, a bookseller desires to make the moderate investment necessary for the purchase of a multigraph, thousands of letters can be reproduced at small expense. If he also buys a simple addressing machine and puts a duplicate list on stencils, he will be in a position to address his list or any part of it he may desire, quickly, accurately and effectively. There is a machine which uses a stencil which may be cut on the ordinary typewriter, and the selective attachment provides for twenty-four different list classifications. At the start the bookseller will do well to avoid the purchase of any machinery and confine himself to the bare essentials. It will take some time, several months, perhaps, to get a new list into the best possible shape altho it will be in usable form within a much shorter time.

There are half a dozen books at least announced for publication this fall which would be excellent subjects for mail order promotion by booksellers, both before and after publication. Many thousand additional copies of any one of them could be sold in this way if the booksellers of the country had the lists thru which to sell them. In these articles more emphasis has intentionally been laid on the compilation and care of the list than on any other single phase of the question, simply because the success of mail order selling depends first and foremost on the list to which the printed matter is mailed.

A publisher can, under present circumstances, spend almost any amount of money in elaborate printed matter without securing an adequate response from booksellers, because most of their lists contain only a small fraction of the prospective buyers in their respective communities, and because, in general, they do not appreciate the advantages of talking thru the mails to the unsuspected markets all around them.

These articles have been based on practical methods used by the writer in years of mail order bookselling and promotion. He hopes that they may induce even a few booksellers to reach out effectively by mail beyond the circle within which they have been accustomed to transact business.

The French Book Exposition at Stockholm

Paris Publishers Get a Hearty Welcome

FOR the first time, outside of France, French publishers put into practice this spring their recent efforts toward cooperation, writes Georges Girard in L'Opinion, Paris. The exposition at Stockholm was planned with the object of promoting the cause of French books in general rather than that of books published by such and such a publisher. Renouncing methods of self-seeking, the publishers decided to have no special exhibits from each firm, but to group the works sent in according to their subjects: no special stands for houses X, Y or Z, but rooms for books of literature, of medicine, educational books, scientific books, etc. so that the public might be able to get a bird's eye view of French production in each field. It seems that they have not had cause to regret this policy: results prove that it brought great material and moral benefits.

On the material side, all forecasts as to the success of the exposition have been more than fulfilled. The most optimistic members of the Swedish committee estimated before the opening that the maximum of paid admissions would be 500; whereas more than 3000 paid admissions were registered during the ten days of the exhibit, the closing of which was put off to the extreme limit of the time during which the rooms were available. And all these visitors bought, after looking. Record was kept of 15,000 orders, amounting to 50,000 francs, without counting the purchases made outside of the exposition, which were particularly important, thanks to the opportune initiative on the part of the Swedish booksellers. To sum up, the statisticians, who are always ready with their figures, calculated that one person entered each minute, that one out of every two gave an order and that 1200 francs worth of orders were taken each hour. Are not these figures impressive?

The few French publishers—especially music publishers, whose consignments were very small—who had neglected to interest themselves actively in this manifestation must undoubtedly have regretted it. Commercially, then, the exhibitors made a good thing out of it. But they also served the French cause well and can be proud of this. For this exposition the French book called forth the most welcome expressions of sympathy.

Of the material installation it must be said that the kindness of the Swedish booksellers and the disinterested assistance of numerous persons guaranteed the success of the undertaking from the start. The Palace of Fine Arts, one of Stockholm's most beautiful buildings, had considered it an honor to entertain the French Book in its richly decorated halls. The salespeople behind the counters were daughters of the city's best families and students from the French school, all of whom had graciously offered their services. Finally, the booksellers, not content with welcoming heartily their French brethren, had decided to share actively in their work.

But even if all this augured well for the sale of the books, it could not have been foreseen that this exposition of a French product would call forth such flattering and interesting manifestations as it did. The example was set high up. On the opening day, in fact, the King Gustave V, accompanied by the heir to the throne and by the diplomatic corps, among which were found, notably, the ministers from Hungary and Turkey, honored the exposition by his visit, stopping for some time before each stand. On the following days groups of technical and professional bookmen came and members of the publishers' syndicate, of the booksellers' association, the binders' syndicate, the typographers' syndicate, and also professors and students from many schools and universities. Fraternal banquets were given for French and Swedes. On the twentieth, a ball given at the hotel of the French legation brought together nearly 300 persons, diplomats, writers, scholars publishers, Swedish artists, personages of note from the French colony and organizers of the exposition. The French minister, Mr. Delavaud, had asked "that the ladies would wear a costume suggesting a well-known character of French literature, and the gentlemen some decoration or insignia representing the title of a French work." Everyone tried to carry out this idea to the best of his ability.

Two results of the exposition very pleasing to the French were the interest shown in French books in many other cities of Sweden during the time of the exposition, and the many press notices favorable to France in the Swedish papers. It was really a long-awaited first step toward an active policy on the part of French publishers, and it probably will be followed by other similar undertakings. The French exhibit at the Florence Book Fair this summer has been modeled on the Stockholm exposition.

"Scientific Selling and Modern Advertising"

HARPER and Brothers are about to publish a very practical and scientific book on the subject of "Scientific Selling and Advertising" by Arthur B. Dunn. The author is a business counsellor, lawyer, and lecturer on Security Salesmanship of New York University. He has sold millions of dollars' worth of securities, drilled and educated salesmen, conducted large sales organizations, and made a careful analysis of the steps that lead up to a sale.

Dr. Dunn tells how to acquire the five points necessary to the general make-up of the successful salesman:

Interest in the customer.
Knowledge of one's goods.
Faith in one's goods and one's House.
Right method of presenting the proposition.
Self-confidence.

Why does a certain type of salesman work for twenty or twenty-five dollars a week all his life?

Because, according to Mr. Dunn, he has not obtained a sufficient knowledge of the commodity he is trying to sell.

"It is here that most salesmen fall down," he says. . . . "Many salesmen have come to my office and, after getting a description of the article or security and a line of sales-talk, have been eager to get right out and try to sell. Many of these salesmen have not lasted a week, and a larger number has not lasted forty-eight hours."

The author here stops to tell salesmen in the different main lines what they should know about their respective products.

Reading further, one learns that there is only one point more important than knowledge—the scientific method of presenting the product. A thoro discussion of the great subdivision of salesmanship—advertising—comes under this head. Advertising and salesmanship are treated as co-partners in this close-up of the buying and selling world.

"In order to make a sale you must first get interested attention to your article. Next you must get the confidence of your prospect so that when you educate him as to the merits of your article, he will believe what you tell him. You must arouse his desire, and you must get his will to act (volition). When this is accomplished, your sale is completed."

How to achieve the above steps is clearly explained in "Scientific Selling and Advertising." On one of the first fly-leaves of the book, one reads the following slogan:

"If the truth won't sell it, don't sell it."

Using the Bookman List

"THE Bookman publishes each month a very interesting list of the most recent fiction together with very brief but incisive comments on each," writes Ward Macauley of Detroit. This list not only must be of considerable service to the book-trade because of the help it gives Bookman readers in selecting their fiction reading, but it can easily be made of direct help in merchandising the books it recommends. Reproducing the comments on small cards to feature in window and inside displays will bring excellent results. Customers who perhaps cannot be won by a merchant's recommendation, no matter how sincere his expression of judgment, may respond to the professional opinion of well-established critics.

"Books that the Bookman especially recommends are starred, and this starred list should prove a fruitful aid to the bookseller and to the publisher also, in increasing the sale of books of sufficient worth to achieve a place on this list. A bookseller may well pride himself upon the number of starred books that he is able to keep on his list of best sellers. It may well be that "Starred by the Bookman" may become a slogan in publishers' advertising.

"A sign worded as below, with various sizes of Dennison paper stars pasted on it to visualize the idea of the starred list, did yeoman service in one bookstore, no less than six sales for 'Mr. Prohack', the first book on the list, resulting in a single day, and varying results from all of the others were noticed each day. Using the critic's judgments to help sell books is certainly in the interest of good book-selling."

More Retail Advertising

IF the retail bookstores are to do their full part in backing up the general campaign for more book use, they should be busy in August making definite plans for display and circular advertising in the fall lest the fall business come and the executive desks be smothered with the details that every bookseller knows so well. A bookseller knows what his gross sales were last year for the last four months of the year. He can afford to spend 2% of that total on his advertising. In fact, he cannot well afford to spend less than that. The Dry Goods Economist estimates that the large department stores sometimes spend as much as 3% on gross sales in all departments for advertising tho that would be an exceptional proportion. With the amount in mind, a budget could be made allotting a certain amount to newspaper display advertising, a certain amount to catalogs, addressing and circulars, neither one being a complete substitute for the other. No retailer should rely wholly on the general publishing advertisements to sell his books.

Logical Emphasis on Fiction

Perhaps those who know that even a large consumption of fiction may seem a small total compared to other lines of merchandise will not be willing to grant that the fiction reading has become a craze as yet, but the bookstores are working to their own best interest when they put careful planning into the handling of the fiction so that those who newly acquire the fiction habit may get continuing satisfaction from the experience. Time was when a bookstore considered that almost anyone could sell fiction, for it sold itself. The better bookstores now are more likely to put in charge of fiction one of the best trained salesmen and to designate him or her as a fiction expert to be given all possible help in obtaining the best information about books and to expect that the customers will get the best possible guidance along the lines of their tastes. A well directed fiction reader is a customer for life. A poorly directed fiction buyer may be seeking other lines of diversion all too soon. A recent advertisement of the Red Book Magazine quotes President Sills, of Bowdoin College, as saying, "Some forms of literature attract one type of reader, but the novel is universal in its appeal. And so there is great need of clean fiction, which, like the poetry of old, shall win in the mind from wickedness to virtue, or, in other words, shall aid in building up the character of the American people."

Booksellers' Convention Dates

THE Executive Committee of the American Booksellers' Association has fixed the fourth week of May as the date for the Convention instead of the second week, as has usually been the custom. There will be three days, the 22nd, 23rd and 24th, and Detroit booksellers are already making very adequate plans.

Reaching the Summer School

HAL KOHN, the bookseller of Newberry, S. C., devised a good publicity scheme for summer school students at Newberry College this summer. He got from the college a list of prospective students, and sent to each a postal card. On one side was a view of Newberry College Boarding Hall, a view chosen as very likely to be of interest, and on the other was this typewritten message:

"Something tells me that you contemplate attending OUR Summer School. I just want to say that if you do come to Newberry College this summer, (and I hope you will) that you have a warm welcome to my little store and I am anxious to do anything in my power to make your stay more comfortable.

Hal Kohn"

When a Feller Needs a Friend - - BY BRIGGS

BRIGGS' PEOPLE TAKE ALONG SOME BOOKS IN THE TRUNK.—NEW YORK TRIBUNE

A Week's Gleanings of Book-Trade News

LORD DUNSANY enters for the first time into the field of fiction on the publication of his "Don Rodriquez" by Putnam this fall.

RAYMOND M. ALDEN, whose famous story "Why the Chimes Rang" has been on the book counters steadily for so many Christmases, is a professor of English at Leland Stanford University. Bobbs-Merrill have another book from him this fall entitled "The Boy Who Found a King."

"VANDEMARK'S FOLLY" is to be sponsored in London by Hutchinson & Company, who have taken all the other Empire rights except Canada.

"WITHIN THE TIDES," translated by M. Jean Aubry, is the newest volume to be added to the complete edition of Joseph Conrad that is coming out in French.

A COUPLE of years ago, Mr. Mencken made public announcement that he would be willing to try to find a publisher for any really meritorious manuscript that had gone the rounds unsuccessfully. A young Detroit lawyer submitted a manuscript called "Zell." It was one of several hundred received. The author was using anonymity to find out whether he had talent for writing before he broke connections with the law. His success in the new field makes him drop the pen name of "Henry G. Aikman" and to sign his new book from Knopf, "For Richer, For Poorer," by his own name, Harold Armstrong.

NORMAN DOUGLAS, one of the brilliant new writers in the field of travel books, is adding a volume of Italian wanderings to his list under the title of "Alone," published by McBride.

THE APPEARANCE of "Lulu Bett" in theaters thruout the country has made it possible to put this volume with the pictures from the play into the Grosset edition.

CROWELL'S VOLUME, "Our Foreign Born Citizens," presents an interesting list of over a score of people who have enriched America by coming over the Atlantic, men who have passed away like Agassiz, Bell, Mergenthaler, and others living like Rihbany, Morgenthau and Gompers.

WITH THE skies at their best for amateur observation, Macmillan's book, "The Sky Movies", by Gaylord Johnson is especially helpful for parents and children.

FUNK & WAGNALLS have published an elaborately complete book on "Etiquette" by Emily Post, a volume of over 600 pages well indexed.

THE THIRD VOLUME of "The Outline of Science" has come to the book counters. The chapter contributed by Sir Oliver Lodge on "Psychic Science" is likely to attract special attention. "The Romance of Chemistry" is here, a chapter on "Meteorology" and "The Beginning of Applied Science," the marvels of Electricity, of Wireless, of Radio and of Flying."

FLAMMARION'S new book appears simultaneously in four languages. It is the second of a trilogy and entitled "At the Moment of Death," published here by Century Company.

THE "tramp poet," Harry Kemp, is now to publish the story of his wanderings. Boni & Liveright will publish this under the title of "Tramping On Life."

AMONG THE well known books that have come back into print since the pressure of war conditions has passed is Dr. Grenfell's' standard book on "Labrador, the Country and People," which Macmillan have ready with a new introduction.

STOKES are to have the American publishing of a new novel by Jane Austen. One could hardly hope for a more distinguished author on a fall list, and London has already hailed the book with great interest.

VAN WYCK BROOKS'S biographical and critical sketch on Rousseau, to be published by Huebsch this fall, ought to set many people to a rereading of "The Confessions," which it is hoped may be still escaping censorship at that time.

PERCY HAUGHTON, who put Harvard football on the map, has been persuaded to put his wisdom in book covers, and Marshall Jones Company will bring it out in two forms, the full book at $3.50 and a brief pamphlet for grandstand sale at 50c.

THE BIOGRAPHY of Alexander Graham Bell, who died last month, will be written by his son-in-law, Gilbert H. Grosvenor, editor of the National Geographical Magazine. For several years he has been arranging the data for this work.

An Uncorrected Galley

POETIC JUSTICE

Poets always pay for their crimes—if they are published at all.

Detective writers, on the other hand, never lack for publishers. That murder must come out is the first principle of the publishing trade.—Keith Preston, in Chicago Daily News.

STILL HANDLES WRITING PAPER

Humour lurks, one is glad to think, even in the quiet by ways of the trade. I have just heard of a small stationer in a remote country town who contemplated adding bookselling to his business. but found himself prevented by circumstances from realising his ambition. "Well." enquired a sympathetic visitor, "have you extended your business yet?" "No," was the rueful reply, "it just remains stationery!"

JACOB OMNIUM, in The Bookseller, London.

THE MINUTE MEN OF 1922

(Dedicated to Messrs. Louis Untermeyer, Sinclair Lewis and the good, gay critic of Baltimore.)

Ye harriers of England that guard our native shores
And man our lit'ry barriers against Britannic bores,
Lift high your local standards and face the alien horde,
For where they win a lodgment 'tis you that pay the board.

Against you scribes and lecturers that swarm across the sea,
Array the tribe Kiwanis, and stalwart Rotary!
Recruit our local sinew (supported by our bone).
And strike a blow for "Main Street," a poor thing, but our own!

Beware of vain dissensions that tend to split your ranks;
Without that Volstead infantry, what price your vaunted tanks?
So let the lord of Baltimore swig down a stirrup seidel
While patriotic "Pussyfoot" consents to hold his bridle.

Pro aris et pro focis—for woman's clubs and teas!
Lift high your local standards that waver in the breeze.
And foil those foreign authors that filch your tea and buns,
Ye harriers of England, that guard our native sons.

—Keith Preston, in Chicago Daily News.

The Club Women's Part in Children's Book Week

NO group of book buyers in the community can be so important to the Children's Book Week movement as the mothers, especially those organized into clubs where they can be reached in groups. Their interest in children's reading is natural, does not need to be created but might easily be stimulated.

The General Federation of Women's Clubs has been very earnestly interested in the program for two or three years, and the Chairman of their Library Extension Committee, Mary L. Titcomb, of the Hagerstown, Maryland, Library, has been particularly helpful in getting the subject before the Clubs. Last year Miss Titcomb drew up a suggestive program for clubs to use during that week, and this year is again sending out other plans for discussions.

They first suggestion is for talks on "The Importance of Illustrations in Children's Books." A list of books to illustrate such discussion has been made for the purpose by Isabelle B. Hurlbutt of the Washington County Library, Hagerstown, Md. This list includes suggestions of books that can be discussed under any of the followinng sub-headings:

a. "Some Pioneers in the Art of Illustrating Children's Books," including Walter Crane, Randolph Caldecott. Kate Greenaway, Leslie Brooke and Boutet de Monvel.

b. "Beautiful Examples of Illustrated Children's Books."

c. "Modern Illustrators of Children's Books."

d. "The Use of the Foreign Picture Books,"

Other subjects suggested are:

"Books for Adults About Children."

"Recent Poetry Books for Children."

"Modern Classics in Adventure Stories."

"Some Successful Translations and Retellings of Foreign Stories."

Copies of this program are being sent to all the State Federations and to all groups undertaking the observance of Children's Book Week last year as far as their names are known.

Booksellers and librarians can obtain copies of this list either thru Miss Titcomb or thru the Children's Book Week Committee at 334 Fifth Avenue, New York City. A general observance in some form of Children's Book Week by the Women's Clubs of the country would be a most constructive effort.

Book News Syndication

A NEW plan for syndicating general book news has been launched by the Bigelow Press Bureau of 707 Brompton Place, Chicago, with Jerald Warren Bigelow as Editor-in-Chief. This Bureau plans to syndicate book reviews and news of the book world "so that he who runs may read." They call their material "The Book Tatler" and will push the syndication especially thru the Middle West and in cities not now having the advantage of regular literary pages. "The Book Tatler" will be a weekly half page, to be used by each paper on some day that they shall designate as "book page day." The editors plan to have it independent and newsy.

Stationery and Books

THE new fall stationery catalog of the American News Company shows a very well planned effort to keep books to the attention of those in allied lines. In five pages of colored matter the catalog pictures five different stands for holding books to display, and stationers are asked to give a thought to books as a department that they can very profitably add to their business. The display stand for 12 books can be had for $3.50, for 20 books $4.50, a revolving stand for 16 books $7.50, and full particulars about the popular books for this type of selling are given.

Books on House Building

AS there has been a good deal of discussion recently over the use of books in connection with periodical circulation by means of special price offers, it is interesting to see a magazine endeavoring to serve its customers' special interests without the offer of cut prices. The House Beautiful Magazine of Boston has issued a list of recommended books covering architecture, home building, interior decoration, gardening, antiques and household management. They recommend this list as being useful for people planning reading courses on these subjects and for personal collections for those interested in these fields. The list is priced at current rates.

Bookshop Fraud

A. L. SUGARMAN, who has been conducting a shop under the name of "The Bookster" at 148 Lexington Avenue, has disappeared from the address, and there are reports from two or three dealers of checks without funds having been sent in payment of books purchased.

New Chautauqua Reading List

FOR the next season's reading, the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle has announced four important books. The titles selected, which will be printed in a special edition for the subscribers to the Chautauqua Circle, are "Queen Victoria" by Lytton Strachey (Harcourt, Brace & Company), "Social Ideals in English Letters" by Vida D. Scudder (Houghton Mifflin Company), "The Pacific Triangle by Sidney Greenbie (Century Company) and "The New World of Islam" by Lothrop Stoddard (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

Luther H. Cary, well-known to all the book-trade, made an interesting address on the past and future of the Chautauqua Reading Circle at the Rally Day exercises on July 22nd. He spoke of the nearly half century's work of this movement and of the thousands of friends the plan of systematic reading had made. He called on the many graduates of the course to help in enrolling more names this year, so that the number might not be simply 5000 but 100,000 by steady development, and that such readers should be enlisted not for one year or for the four years' regular course, but for a lifetime of systematic reading.

Personal Notes

JOHN L. WHITE is no longer connected with the Stanton & Van Vliet Company. Announcement of his successor will be made later.

MISS A. M. BLAKE, bookseller of Mexico City, has gone to Spain for six months, her shop being closed until February, 1923. Her address is Gran· Vid 15, Madrid, where correspondents may address her relative to any rare Spanish books or other antiquarian researches desired.

DAVID J. O'CONNELL of Funk & Wagnalls Company, President of the New York Booksellers' League, has accepted the Democratic nomination to represent the Ninth Congressional District in Brooklyn in the House of Representatives. If there is any luck in odd numbers, Mr. O'Connell should be due to win again, as this is his third candidacy, and he won so triumphantly in his first.

Business Notes

MADISON, WIS.—J. W. Gilman has sold his interest in the Brown Book Shop to the other partner, Marmion Brown.

The Weekly Record of New Publications

THIS list aims to be a complete and accurate record of American book publications. Pamphlets will be included only if of special value. Publishers should send copies of all books promptly for annotation and entry, and the receipt of advance copies insures record simultaneous with publication. The annotations are descriptive, not critical; intended to place not to judge the books. Pamphlet material and books of lesser trade interest are listed in smaller type.

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent for record. Prices are added except when not suppled by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. When not specified the binding is cloth.

Imprint date is stated [or best available date, preferably copyrght date, in bracket] only when it differs from year of entry. Copyright date is stated only when it differs from imprint date: otherwise simply "c." No ascertainable date is designated thus: [n. d.]

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folo: over 30 centimeters high); Q (4to: under 30 cm.); O (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tf. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ff. (48mo: 10cm.); sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow.

Rare Books, Autographs and Prints

HENRY James Forman's forthcoming novel, "The Man Who Lived in a Shoe," has for its leading character Randolph Byrd, a resident of lower New York, and an old-fashioned scholar and bibliophile with a library of old and rare books.

The current catalogue of Maggs Brothers of London is devoted entirely to early manuscripts and books on old medicine, alchemy, witchcraft, pharmacy, cookery and tobacco, and a few portraits and autograph letters of eminent physicians. The catalog is illustrated and annotated and describes many very curious and interesting old books.

The Copinger collection of Thomas a'Kempis's "Imitatio Christi," numbering some 1,540 different editions, many of association interest and of great rarity, have been presented to Harvard University's library by James Byrne of the Harvard Corporation. The Harvard collection of this famous book now, with these editions, ranks next in importance to that of the British Museum.

Henry Danielson, the London bookseller, announces the publication of "Arthur Machen: A Bibliography," with an introduction by Henry Savage which is somewhat of a novelty in bibliography. The author has annotated this hand list with some pungent and often striking original criticisms. He relates how and sometimes why he wrote this or that volume, and owing to the personal touch here present the discerning reader can obtain a very interesting insight into the author's creative literary mind.

Charles F. Heartman is back from his Canadian fishing trip and has issued two catalogues for sales to be held by the Heartman Auction Company, Inc. at Perth Amboy, N. J., on August 24. The first consists of acts, laws and resolves, mainly of the State of New Jersey, and Session Laws of Massachusetts, and an interesting collection of anti-slavery broadsides and a few early newspapers. The second includes early American almanacs, early pamphlets on aeronautics, the early West, Lincolniana, and a few first editions of American authors.

William Beer, librarian of the Howard Memorial Library of New Orleans, is compiling a bibliography of periodical literature of America prior to and including the year 1800. Albert Matthews some ten years ago published a check list of New England magazines prior to the nineteenth century. Mr. Beer has now undertaken the larger bibliography and his researches have shown that outside of New England there was also considerable periodical literature, the issues embracing not only literary and general magazines, but political and Revolutionary periodicals as well as small magazines for children, although the latter class did not assume importance until after 1800.

Charles Sessler, the Philadelphia rare book dealer, is now the owner of one of the most important Keats manuscripts in this country. This is the original poetical letter written by Keats to Charles Cowden Clarke, the Shakespearean scholar, editor and critic, of whom Keats said he first "taught me the sweets of song." This poem, which is closely written on four quarto pages, completely in the handwriting of the poet, and dated "Margate, 1816," is one of the best known poetical letters in English literature. It was printed in the edition of Keats's "Poems," in 1817, and contains the poet's characterization of the forms of poetry, the sonnet, epigram, ode and epic, and there are also tributes to Milton, Spenser, Tasso, Mozart and Handel.

Announcement has been made of the organization of the American Society of Bookplate Collectors and Designers. The purposes for which the society was formed are: To bring bookplate collectors and designers into closer touch with each other; to publish semi-annual exchange lists of those members who desire to exchange their bookplate or bookplates for those of others; to publish an art book in the form of a monograph containing a review of the work of some designer, with examples of his or her work; and to form three collections of bookplates, two of which will be used as travelling loan collections for the use of libraries, colleges, clubs, etc., the other to be a permanent collection at Washington, D. C.

The National Library of Berlin is beginning a collection that is bound to attract international attention. It is that of languages and dialects, ranging from the talk of the Georgia plantation to the lingo spoken in the remotest islands of the South Seas, and including the words of the world's most famous men. It will be preserved in the museum of voices soon to be opened in connection with the phonetic department of the library. The collection, which is already started, is the work of Prof. Wilhelm Doegen, phonetic expert. The first phonographic records include all of the known dialects of the English language, and others in different tongues are to be added. Gen. von Hindenberg and Rabindranath Tagore have registered their voices. The latter's record ends with a quotation of the most obscure Sanskrit. English dialects are reproduced through the quotation of the same verse in the Bible. The records are of copper, bearing an engraved likeness of the speaker and his autograph. Prof. Doegen estimates that the records will last 10,000 years.

The current autograph catalogue of James F. Drake of this city lists a four page quarto letter of Washington's written November 12, 1799, to John Gill, in which he says: "I am just returned from Difficult Run, whither I went to examine your land, and to see how it was situated in connexion with mine.... This account you may rely on as fact; for I not only examined the premises with attention, but measured with accuracy (carrying a surveyor with me).... From this relation, which upon inquiry you will find literally correct, you must perceive, that that part of lot No. 10 alone, which lyes on the upper, or West side of Difficult cannot answer my purpose, nor would be an equivalent—and you must be further convinced, that from the scarcity of money, and fall in the price of land—indeed property of all kinds—it is not for my interest to cancel the bargain which is in existence..." It was evidently while engaged on this work that Washington caught the cold that a few weeks later resulted in his death.

Isaiah Thomas's "History of Printing," was published in 1810 in two volumes. Two years afterwards William McCulloch, one of the leading printers in Philadelphia, wrote to Thomas making some corrections and additions. From September 1, 1812 to the first months of 1815, he continued to make additions, the whole contained in a manuscript volume of 296 pages entitled "Additional Memoranda for the History of Printing by Isaiah Thomas, communicated by William McCulloch." These communications deal largely with the history of printing in Philadelphia and Thomas wrote a prefatory note to the "Additional Memoranda" in which he stated that the material was calculated rather for private perusal than for publication. When the new edition of Thomas's work was issued by the American Antiquarian Society in its "Transactions" for 1874 some of these additions were used as part of the narrative. The society has now printed the "Additional Memoranda" in its proceedings, Volume 31, Part I, which has recently been issued. These letters show how much was omitted in the second edition of Thomas's work, and while there is much that only remotely concerns printing, they give a lively picture of Philadelphia in the eighteenth century and are well worth the attention that they have received.

What Is A Catalet ?

AN 8-page booklist comes to hand from Boston in envelope size which is headed "Goodspeed's Book Catalet." The responsibility for this new word rests on Mr. Goodspeed, who believes that whether the word is a justifiable one for the dictionary it is a justifiable one for the bookseller and that its oddity will serve to call attention to the little list and give a chance to get readers interested in a series of lists intended to include material that a shop cannot afford to list in a larger and more expensively printed catalog.

To Bashful Publishers:-

Don't be coy, gentlemen—let the Chicago book consumers know that you are in business!

Here is the world's greatest book field—literate Chicago. More than a million omnivorous readers, eager for books.

They buy books, certainly—all the books about which they are convincingly told. And they devour tons of literature—canned—in the libraries, because publishers are so shy and tentative in pushing their wares in this up-and-coming literary metropolis.

This greatest of undeveloped book markets is economically reached and influenced by the Wednesday Book Page of The Chicago Daily News—the firmly established "guide, philosopher and friend" of the Chicago reading public.

Among the 1,200,000 daily readers of The Chicago Daily News—embraced in its 401,698 yearly average daily circulation—Wednesday is popularly known as "Book Page Day." They look to The Book Page for book news, book reviews, gossip about bookish people—book information. It is Chicago's book directory.

Experienced publishers are aware of this as is shown by the fact that in book advertising lineage The Daily News leads all other Chicago newspapers by an overwhelming margin.

This, however, lest you forget: The surface of the great Chicago book market is as yet barely scratched. It offers rich returns to intensive cultivators.

The market is here. the medium is—

A BETTER MANUFACTURED BOOK IS A BETTER SELLING BOOK

THERE is no question of this—the quality and appearance of a book play a vital part in its salability.

Some people buy a book because friends recommend it. But you know that the profit in the book business comes from those sales made in the book store, where the quality of printing and binding greatly influence the sale.

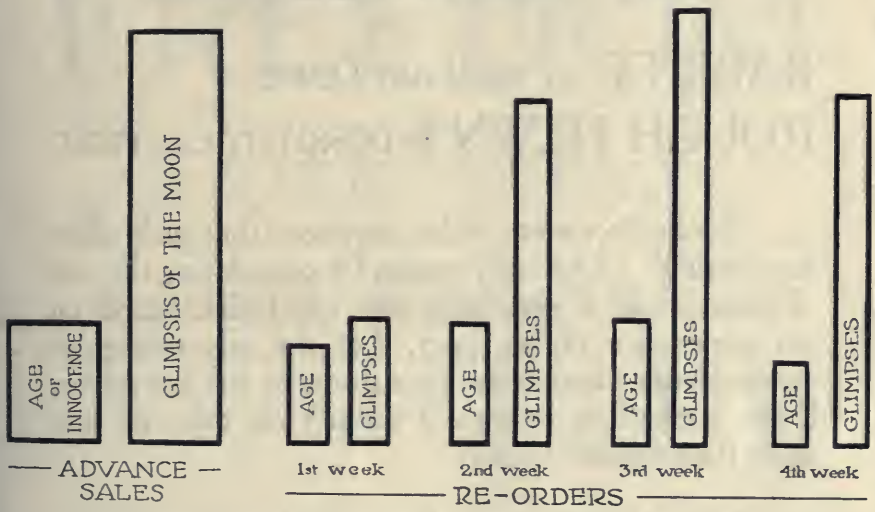
RE-ORDERS show what the PUBLIC wants clever salesmen can put huge stocks of a book on the retail booksellers' counters. But the public makes its own choice. The book the public wants is the one the bookseller sells out quickly and has to re-order again and again. Everybody knows that Edith Wharton's prize winning novel, "The Age of Innocence" had a remarkable sale. Here is a comparison of the sales for the first four weeks of "The Age of Innocence" and Mrs. Wharton's new and greater triumph, "The Glimpses of the Moon."



Several booksellers, starting with huge advance stocks have sold out and reordered as many as six times. More than 50 have re-ordered from three to five times. Over 400 leading dealers have re-ordered twice. All in the first month of publication.

THE GLIMPSES OF THE MOON

is the public's choice this season. In a nation of novel readers Mrs. Wharton has indeed aroused an intense desire to look beyond the glamour and glitter of modern society and to see actually the lives, the aspirations, the diversions and the futile, but furious existences of fortune's favorites. Here, indeed is "the mirrors of Fifth Avenue," with all its startling reflections. $2.00

An Open Letter to the Trade:

New York, August 21, 1922

We have withdrawn from the Curtis Publishing Company Premium Offers:

BABBITT By SINCLAIR LEWIS

ROUGH HEWN By DOROTHY CANFIELD

Booksellers seem to be convinced that such offers are harmful. Our only reason for considering the use of these books as premiums was our belief, based on our experience of last year, that the advertising increased sales through the bookstores at full list prices. If the booksellers believe it doesn't do this, we are more than willing to stop.

Our salesmen made the original arrangement in good faith and with our full knowledge. If these premium offers are a bad thing, they are bad this year, and since enough booksellers seem to think them bad for their business, we are glad to say we will stop them at once, and do it now. So we have, to-day, arranged with the Curtis people to cancel the arrangement for their use of these titles.

We have the two big novels of the fall—we hope you will get your share of the large business there is to be done on these titles. They are the best books these authors have written.

THIS FREEDOM

By

A. S. M. HUTCHINSON

Author of

IF WINTER COMES

Latest Revised Figures: Two weeks ago we told you that 53% of the representative American booksellers who had sent us their opinions believed that THIS FREEDOM would outsell "If Winter Comes." A last minute analysis shows that these figures should now be revised from 53% to 71%!

Early British Reviews: THIS FREEDOM was published in Great Britain on July 25th, and was reviewed by almost all of the leading British newspapers on the day of publication. Note the general tenor of the following reviews:

"An equally interesting novel with 'If Winter Comes' . . . in fact, another genuine triumph."—Clement K. Shorter in The Sphere, London.

"A stronger and better book than 'If Winter Comes.' "—London Daily Telegraph.

"A worthy successor to 'If Winter Comes.' " —The London Daily Mail.

"A greater book than 'If Winter Comes' in every way."—Claudius Clear in The British Weekly.

"A great work, one to read, and reread, and read again."—London Daily Graphic.

"A worthy follower of 'If Winter Comes.' " —The Westminster Gazette.

"A better book in every way than 'If Winter Comes.' "—Glasgow Evening Citizen.

"A thoroughly sound piece of work and full of human interest."—The Pall Mall & Globe, London.

Have You Ordered Enough Copies? Our advance advertising campaign has created a great demand for THIS FREEDOM, and many dealers have already taken advance orders for a large proportion of their stock. Remember that your window display on publication date is sure to bring a prompt response.

AUTUMN BOOKS

¶ We have made a large first printing of Benét's Young People's Pride and our salesmen's preliminary orders show us to be entirely justified. We suggest that you watch stock on this title carefully as its early publication will necessitate quicker re-orders. Down the River has created quite a little stir. We are purposely holding off bringing this out until September 9th as the interest already aroused from the copies which we are distributing to several influential people will give it unusual sale's activity at publication time. The Island God Forgot is a novel of adventure and mystery—a top-notch story of this type. It will have a popular sale. The jacket is excellent. The book's appeal will be capitalized by advertizing to fit its type of reader. William McFee's introduction to Ocean Echoes is bound to give it a good start immediately. This unique autobiography will be added to the select list of sea classics.

¶ In September bear in mind Benchley's new book, and then, too, all Freud enthusiasts will be waiting for the imposing Outline of Sex which should solve all ununderstandable inhibitions.

was recently selected as one of America's five greatest writers by "The Literary Digest"—the only woman author to be so honored. (Joseph Hergesheimer was first on the list, and Miss Cather fourth). Burton Rascoe in last Sunday's New York Tribune called her "the one woman writer of indubitable genius that we have."

ONE OF OURS

25,000 copies already printed

her first novel in four years, is eagerly awaited by the thousands of admirers of My Antonia—which, by the way, includes most of the booksellers of the United States. A vast audience must inevitably read ONE OF OURS in addition, because its canvas is bigger than any Miss Cather has attempted before. Its appeal is honestly to the heart of America—to "a hundred thousand American homes." will be reviewed in The New York Times and in the Literary Review of The New York Post by eminent American novelists in the "100,000" class, who themselves have new novels scheduled for publication this Fall. These reviews and others, are sure to create discussion and sales.

ONE OF OURS

ONE OF OURS

will be published September 8. The first edition will consist only of 345 numbered copies as follows: thirty-five on Imperial Japan Vellum ($25 net); and 310 copies on Perusia hand made Italian paper ($10 net). Each copy is signed by the author. Second and subsequent editions, cloth, $2.50 net.

N.B. A handsome photograph of Miss Cather, mounted, 8 x 10, has been prepared in a limited quantity for dealers' window display. Copies will be sent while they last at half cost, 40 cents each.

NORTHCLIFFE

BRITAIN'S MAN OF POWER

Alfred Harmsworth, owner of the London Times and other newspapers reaching millions of people daily, former Chairman of the British Mission to the United States, England's exponent of "the big stick" and the very apostle of efficiency, was one of the most picturesque of the world's self made men. W. E. Carson has written a biography which is not only an inspiration to all with red blood in their veins, but a record of achievement destined to outlive this generation. Northcliffe's rise to power reads like a romance.

THE MAN WHO DID THINGS

THE MAN WHO Made and Unmade Cabinets
THE MAN WHO Was the Genius of the Allied War Council
THE MAN WHO Roused England to Highest Efficiency
THE MAN WHO Was the Most Influential Journalist in the World
THE MAN WHO Was Aggressively American in His Methods
THE MAN WHO Was Hated and Feared by the Kaiser

Brooklyn Eagle—"The most commanding figure in the Empire."
Chicago News—"The energy of Lord Northcliffe is a subject of most fascinating interest."
Philadelphia Ledger—"Not one page that is not a valuable contribution to the history of our time."

IT is well worth your while to read Sophie Kerr's latest novel, ONE THING IS CERTAIN. But it is well for you to understand beforehand that here is no mere sentimental love story, but a powerful and oftentimes startling study of a group of people truly representative of a certain phase of American life. The tragic clash of inexperience and pride, the vivid study of American youth handled with deftness and understanding—the whole against a background of custom and tradition distinctly our own—in these you will find the strength of Sophie Kerr's first novel since PAINTED MEADOWS. As for the title; "One thing is certain and the rest is Lies; the Flower that once has blown forever dies."

Kelly Bill Improved

THE sponsors for standardized price legislation have taken advantage of many expert criticisms of the Kelly Bill as heretofore presented, and the new Congress will be called upon to consider it, according to Edmund A. Whittier of the Fair Trade League, in an improved form. This form has been drafted in conference with the Department of Commerce and has, according to Mr. Whittier, the backing of Secretary Hoover.

An important change is the elimination of all detail of registration, simplifying the bill to about a third of its old length. As it will stand revised, the manufacturer who is interested to standardize the selling price of his product for the retail market shall print or stamp permanently upon the article the retail price. This having been done, selling these goods at another figure in retail channels can be complained about as against national statutes at the hearings of the Federal Trade Commission in the same way that any unfair business practice can be complained against. If for good reasons the retailer wishes to close out stock on hand, he has simply to notify the manufacturer, and, not hearing from him, the stock on hand can be closed out as he sees fit.

This simplification of the bill eliminates several features whose application to books have been extremely puzzling to the publishers, as the registration of several thousand books a year is quite a different matter from registering one new patent on a safety razor every ten years, and the red tape of handling ultimate clearance has been simplified to the last degree. Behind this bill the publishers and retailers can and do rally, and if it can be passed as other legislation supporting higher business standards has been passed, the book-trade can find a firm path out from its worst handicap.

Charles E. Butler of the Booksellers' Board of Trade is carrying on the fight and should have voluntary help from as many booksellers as possible. We are printing on another page a full page statement from Mr. Butler, in which he asks for volunteers for local work in every state in the Union.

Senate Finishes Tariff Bill

THE Senate debate on the tariff closed with the discussion under great pressure on Saturday, August 19th. There were no further changes made in the later sessions other than those indicated in the record printed in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, August 12th, and these rates will now go into the conference between the House and the Senate.

Differences were introduced by the Senate over the House bill, but it is believed that the Senate schedules are likely to carry in the conference, where attention will be much more generally directed to more debatable subjects. It is not thought that the House will again go back to putting rare books and foreign language books into the dutiable class as it had originally planned, and, as the duties on new books and bindings seem adequate to cover all reasonable needs of the American industry, there would not seem to be any special argument that would change the situation.

The fact that book bindings are now taxed separately and at a higher rate than books will cause confusion at the Custom House, and the invoicing of volumes in leather bindings from England will have to be done carefully in order to indicate what part of the value is book and what part binding. There will also be the difficulty of knowing whether a book has been bound more or less than twenty years, as good leather bindings show little wear, and there is no dating to follow as there is in books.

Respect For Publication Dates

MANY times we have had occasion to emphasize the peculiar importance in the book-trade of carefully respecting announced publication dates. A letter printed in this issue from Harcourt, Brace & Company explaining their difficulty with regard to "Babbitt" and the lack of co-operation from a prominent retailer brings the subject again to the front.

There are several varieties of merchandise that require trade co-operation in order that no dealer shall take unfair advantage by advance sale. This situation exists in the release of prominent films, in the marketing of new musical records, the releasing of important news stories to the papers and in the displaying of monthly magazines. The importance of a real respect for this feature of marketing is very generally recognized, and any breakdown of this method in the book field shows a lack of business conscience and of business vision on the part of the retail bookstores.

Too early release by accident is bound to happen occasionally when some receiving clerk does not notice the announcement on the bill or a too energetic fiction manager puts books on the counter which were intended to be held in the bin for a while, but such unintentional things can straighten themselves out. When one bookstore fails in such observance, however, and another follows, both are equally culpable, as two wrongs cannot make a right. Sometimes retailers take too much from hearsay and think others have broken the publication date when such is not the case.

With the generally troublesome conditions in freight deliveries which are existing today and are likely to increase in the fall, it will be impossible for important books to reach distant points in the country without early shipments, and this means that many dealers will get the books before others, the large cities probably being the last to be served, as delivery conditions are more normal there. This will put a new strain on the good sense of such retailers as are likely to be overborne by their competitive instincts, but it is to be hoped that this first example will not be followed by any epidemic of this short-sighted practice.

Underwriting Editions

ONE of the interesting suggestions that was brought forth at the last Booksellers' Convention was that of John R. Anderson, the well-known old bookman of New York, who suggested that retail bookstores with good outlets for substantial titles should co-operate in arranging for the reissue of such books as are out of print, this to be done by an underwriting system, so that limited editions of 500 to 1000 copies would be printed from plates of publishers who have titles in demand and who would be willing to have the book thus reprinted.

Mr. Anderson is now sending out letters to the trade and says that very interesting replies are coming in. One bookseller writes: "It seems to me that this was the most valuable suggestion at the recent convention."

A prominent publisher said: "We believe it will afford the publishers a chance to sell editions of books that are really good and still available and enable the bookseller to make good profit on the results."

Professor William Lyon Phelps has become interested in this same idea and is preparing an article for the New York Times on the reissue of old books. To select the proper titles, there would have to be some method of voting, so that the manager could see just what books would be subscribed for. Among titles on which Mr. Anderson said he had been offered satisfactory terms were Lafcadio Hearn's "Japan," Laut's "Pathfinders of the West," Mahaffy's "Survey of Greek Civilization," Morley's "English Men of Letters."

Mr. Anderson said that he would be glad to receive correspondence from booksellers interested in this plan. It would supply them with a class of books that they could promote to a good sale, because the titles are needed and could be offered at a price that would compare with prices set on good remainders.

This reprinting might be likened to the famous series of Chatto & Windus in England, who reprinted a great many titles that had been dormant on other lists.

Another Student Poll

CANVASSES conducted by summer schools have now begun to come in, and the Columbia school has voted Booth Tarkington its favorite novelist, with George Eliot second, and A. S. M. Hutchinson third, and "He Who Gets Slapped" as the favorite play of the season. For individual books, "If Winter Comes" received the largest vote, "The Story of Mankind" second, and "Alice Adams" third. The strong vote for George Eliot was perhaps the most unexpected result of this canvass, as the demand for her novels has not been a prominent feature in publishing for some time.

Suggestion of Lottery

SOME of the recent advertising copy of the Haldeman-Julius Company of Girard, Kansas, has carried a reference to a contest involving free trips to Europe, a contest into which those who bought collections of their little series of ten cent classics could enter. The Post Office Department has considered this as a lottery, as the contestants do not learn the exact terms of the contest until after the purchase. All matter having reference to this offer will accordingly be unmailable.

The New Price Standardization Bill

AN ACT TO PREVENT DISCRIMINATION IN PRICES, TO PROVIDE PUBLICITY OF PRICES AND TO PROTECT GOOD WILL

[The Kelly Bill in this revised form will be introduced in the next Congress]

BE it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled that in any contract for the sale of articles of commerce to any dealer, wholesale or retail, by any grocer, producer, manufacturer or owner thereof under trademark or special brand hereinafter referred to as the "vendor" who shall, for the purpose of preventing discrimination and protecting his good will, clearly mark on each saleable unit of his product or the container thereof the price at which such unit shall be resold, it shall be lawful for such vendor, whenever the contract constitutes a transaction of commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations, or in any territory of the United States, or in the District of Columbia, or between any such territory and another territory, or between any such territory or territories and any state or the District of Columbia, or with a foreign nation or nations, or between the District of Columbia or any state or states, or a foreign nation or nations, to prescribe the uniform prices and manners of settlement at which the different qualities and quantities of each article covered by such contract may be resold: PROVIDED, that such vendor shall not have any monopoly or control of the market for articles belonging to the same general class of merchandise as such article or articles of commerce as shall be covered by such contract of sale; and that such vendor shall not be a party to any agreement, combination or understanding with any competitor in the production, manufacture or sale of any merchandise in the same general class in regard to the price at which the same shall be sold either to dealers at wholesale or retail or the public. PROVIDED FURTHER that if the purchaser shall in good faith be unable to sell such goods at the published price, that the purchaser shall first offer such goods to the seller before he may sell the same at less than the published price.

Sec. 2. That the provisions of this Act shall not apply in sales of such article or articles of Commerce to the United States, or any political subdivision thereof, or in case of sales of such articles to any state or public library, or to any society or institution incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, educational, medical, scientific, philanthropic or literary purposes, made in good faith for use thereof by such society or institution.

The Passing of the Book Schedules

A Pen Picture of the Senate in a Busy Tariff Session

ON Friday, August 4th, the Senate of the United States met further to discuss tariffs. During that session the most important schedule to the book-trade came to vote as far as the Senate was concerned, and a picture of the progress of reaching and passing such schedules has interest.

As the session opens, Mr. McCumber questions the fact that there is a quorum, and after the roll call it is found that 58 Senators are present.

The Senator from Florida finds that he has been made to say in yesterday's Record "Chicago" when he meant "Atlanta," and the chair allows him to correct.

Senator Ladd makes a report on the different aspects of the Ford proposal in regard to Muscle Shoals.

Then come petitions and memorials, bulwark of the people's rights.

Senator Myers presents remonstrances of "sundry citizens of Pablo, Montana against the enactment of compulsory Sunday observance in the District of Columbia." Senator Willis presents a petition of citizens of Toledo "praying for a protective tariff based on American valuation." Senator Ashurst presents the opinions of some cattle growers on tariff." Then comes the introduction of bills. Two tariff amendments are ordered and put on the table.

Senator Gooding now gets the floor as first speaker in connection with the tariff bill and proceeds to flay Mr. Munsey and his New York Herald for their stinging attacks on high tariff. Into the records are introduced several columns of matter about real estate in Austria. A few minutes more and the presiding officer wants read in a list of our loans to foreign governments. Mr. Gooding's attack continues, but Senator Harrison begins to pick flaws. Senator Calder regrets the attack on Mr. Munsey. Senator Harrison introduces a news clipping showing that Senator Gooding has sold a million pounds of wool at a sale.

Parliamentary discussion and rulings begin to get thick. The presiding officer asks the clerk to read a proposal for curtailing all tariff debate to an hour per Senator. When Senator Gooding is finally quieted, the agreement to proceed with the tariff schedules is arranged, and the clerk begins to read the Senate's amendments.

The section that covers calendars and cards was amended to increase the rate from 20c. to 25c. per pound. Senator Bursum gets the floor and explains that he has been trying to get it several times and now wishes to discuss the wool schedule and not postal cards. A half hour eloquence on the wool schedule, but when a vote is brought back to the cards the agreement is made. Cigar bands go up from 30c. to 35c. per pound; but one Senator believes that there are not enough people present to pass it, so the quorum is counted and fifty are there.

Senator Smoot is handling the amendments. He has a marvelous knowledge of everything from cigar bands to decalcomanias. Senator Walsh of Montana can see no adequate reason for increasing the already high rate on cigar bands, but Senator Calder explains that 20,000 men in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are interested in lithography, that they make wages from $39 to $42 a week and that the same sort of work in Germany carries a wage of $2.35 a week. Labels and flaps are considered and cigar bands using metal leaf. Fashion magazines are set at 8c. a pound, higher than the present scale of 6c. but lower than the first proposal of 12c. Senator Willis becomes interested when the decalcomanias are reached because the potters of Ohio are decalcomaniacs and only about one sixth of the amount needed is produced in this country. Much argument goes on between Senator Smoot and Willis on this subject. Lithographs and cards of all possible sizes and thicknesses are considered and moved up and down a point or two. Senator Shepherd believes that all lithographic calendars and pictures are "for the adornment and beautification of humble homes" and there is no need of increasing their cost by duty, especially as the entire imports in 1920 were but $600,000.

The writing paper schedule is finally reached with much debate between Senator Smoot and Senator Walsh over the need of increased protection. Envelopes are reached, and Senator Walsh protests against any increase over the present 15%, especially as the production of envelopes in this country has more than doubled in five years. Jacquard designs are reached. It becomes too complicated for Senator Walsh when Senator Smoot goes into jacquard's peculiarities. Wrapping paper is reached, and Senator Smoot asks for an increase of from 23% to 30% ad valorem in order to afford an opportunity for this industry to live. Blotting paper is reached and passed with slight increase, and paper not specially provided for is set at 30%.

The clerk now reaches the book schedule, 1310, and Senator Smoot asks for a complete change from the paragraph as written and a new paragraph beginning "Unbound books of all kinds," and providing for 15% and 25% ad valorem duties and 30% on bindings as read. As this redraft has been of particular interest to Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, he rises to explain its meaning as follows:

"Mr. President, this is a paragraph in which I take a great deal of interest and the amendment which has been proposed I offered some time ago and had printed. I will say to the Senator, as, of course, he is perfectly aware, that the printer and the compositor are entirely protected under the copyright laws, because no book can be copyrighted in this country that is not printed in this country. The House had so arranged the paragraph as to put books in foreign languages on the dutiable list, where they have never been and never ought to be, and they also eliminated the provision that all books more than 20 years old shall be on the free list.

"I was very anxious to have them restored to the free list. What I desired to do, in the draft I made of this amendment—and it is merely a draft of what is here in print—was to make sure that the duty which it was desired to impose on the binding should fall on the binding alone, and not upon the books—that is, the book more than 20 years old.

"Some of those books, as the Senator well knows, first editions—take the first folio of Shakespeare as an extreme example—are of enormous value. They may have been found within the 20 years. To tax the whole book on the full value of the book would be monstrous, of course. They really ought to come in free; and the purpose of this amendment, with which I had something to do, was to make sure that the tariff duty should be confined to the binding, and I think it achieves that purpose. It must be taken in connection with an amendment to the free list which will be offered in a moment."

As it is directly connected with the paragraph about bindings and the free list, that is also read. Senator Walsh becomes mystified at just what "sheets or printed pages, bound wholly or partly in leather" means, and Senator Lodge explains. Back and forth for 20 minutes goes the interpretation among the three Senators, and it is finally agreed by Senator Lodge that there has been a semicolon omitted, and so eventually the sentence is clarified by the insertion of a few extra words.

Senator Walsh wants to know if textbooks re free, and Senator Smoot explains that they re as are all other books if brought in by ducational institutions and quotes Paragraph 531 to prove this. Senator Walsh insists that tudents should be able to bring them in themelves free, but it is explained that there is no rovision for this. Senator Walsh asks if oreign textbooks are cared for. Senator moot says they are free; Senator Lodge says ney are not, but apologizes and agrees that ney are free as provided in another pararaph. All is now smooth, and Paragraph 310 passes. The attention is then taken over the free list and the paragraph about naterial from foreign governments free is accepted, and the special paragraph about books over 20 years old except when in new bindings. With these two of the several schedules accomplished, the question of adjournment is brought up, and after considerable discussion further tariff is brought forward, and the paragraph about children's books of more reading matter than numerals is settled by increasing the rate from 20% to 25% ad valorem. Booklets are agreed on at 15c. a pound. Post-cards except lithographic are raised from 26c. to 40c. ad valorem except views, which are put on a separate basis.

The book schedules of other sections went thru in the general scurry of the last days of debate.

Church Conventions and Books

By Einar Josephsen

WE have read with interest about Appleton's Book Caravan and Frank Shay's Traveling Book Shop, but have far seen nothing about exhibiting and selling books at church conventions. The amount of business at such meetings, which are held all over the country every year by the arious denominations, undoubtedly quite bstantial, judging rom our own experience up here in the orthwest. And the otential value of ese book displays rom year to year may traceable in the inreasing interest in regious literature. very church convenon week is a "Regious Book Week." least it ought to

"The Norwegian utheran Church of merica," of which ugsburg Publishing ouse in Minneapolis a part, is divided to nine districts, ich of which holds nventions once every her year. A general nvention of pastors nd delegates from l districts is so held every year, that every year has its regular conventions. Last year Augsburg had representative book displays at six district meetings—at Eau Claire, Wisconsin; Duluth and Montevideo, Minnesota; Jewell, Iowa; Brookings, South Dakota, and Fargo, North Dakota. The business on an average was very satisfactory. At two places we had to put up a booth outside the church (the cost of erecting such a booth does not exceed $50). At the other places we were located either in the lobby or in an adjoining room, our aim always being to get as close to the main entrance to the convention hall as possible. This gives us the best opportunity to attract attention. The walls are generously covered with advertising posters. Our brother publishers would be delighted to see how well we make use of their advertising matter. And it always pays to advertise. Then to combine our book display with a general information and service desk we have found a very good plan. We receive and distribute incoming mail and have a box for outgoing mail. Add to this a typewriter and stationery for the free use of the delegates, and the Augsburg book stand, with its convenient supply of railroad time tables and travel literature and its accommodations for taking care of luggage temporarily, has become a very useful feature of the convention.

The books are displayed on tables and shelves and classified as much as possible to make it easy for the customers to get acquainted with what we have brought along. All books are priced, and of good sellers we carry as many as a dozen or more copies. Naturally, most of the stock is religious books, theological and devotional literature, Bibles and Testaments, tho we also always bring along a good assortment of fiction and general literature. The value of the books on sale sometimes runs into several thousand dollars.

The illustration shows a section of our book stand in the Minneapolis Auditorium lobby during the general convention last June. Note the effective use of the splendid posters sent us by the Year-Round Bookselling Committee and the convenient space for displaying the books. In connection with this convention we published a Daily Bulletin, distributed at every morning session. It contained convention and personal news as well as book advertisements, and the publicity it gave us brought good results. The giving away of bookmarks and calendars with our imprint we also consider good advertising. The cash sales during the convention established a record.

The Young People's Luther League convention at La Crosse, Wisconsin, in June, was a great success from every point of view, including book-selling. The convention was held in the magnificent Normal School auditorium. In the wide, well-lighted lobby we had the best opportunity for displaying books and Sunday School supplies we ever had. Apparently our exhibit was a constant source of delight to the hundreds of intelligent young men and women who, from day to day, early and late, flocked around the tables, asking for information about books, discussing them, making notes, buying. In order to create special interest, we had the chairman give a little talk on a few selected titles at the beginning of sessions, which proved to be a very effective way of advertising. It gave certain books a sort of official endorsement. An attractive 32-page Bulletin, a special convention number of our house organ containing interesting articles on books and reading, also helped a great deal to increase sales and make prospective customers for us.

All told, we have found our conventions one of the best means to advertise and sell books and to get in touch with the people, learn their likes and dislikes, and we have always returned to headquarters with new ideas and with new faith in the great mission of spreading good literature among our people.

Parnassus in the Middle West

THE idea of a peripatetic bookshop has taken possession of the imagination of booksellers since Christopher Morley first wrote of the adventures of Roger Mifflin. Frank Shay's traveling bookshop supplies the Cape Cod literary colony with books this summer. In previous summer seasons Miss Mahony's bookshop has toured New England, and the Appleton book wagon has gone "loafing down Long Island." This summer Irving Allen, formerly of L. S. Ayres & Company of Indianapolis has a book wagon which is selling books to the Middle West. The caravan in this case is a Dodge car with a cabinet of about 4 x 5 feet with full length double doors on both sides and two cases of four shelves each inside. The stock for the caravan is furnished by McClurg. Mr. Allen in a letter recently written to the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY says:

"Our first stop was Lake Geneva, where we found a wealthy summer group of Chicagoans, delightful and interested. Here we sold about $175 worth of various books. We would have done better had we had the stuff but were out of a few good ones, "Outline of Science," "Up Stream," "Story of Mankind," and one or two others. Every one has been cordial, and many have bought.

"There is little doubt in my mind that this is a very practical idea, and a remedy for what Will Irwin called yesterday 'the unbooked condition in America.' We had a delightful half hour with him yesterday after his lecture before the Chautauqua. Here at Madison we received our first setback when we learned that our status is in the category of two-horse-and-mechanically-propelled-vehicle-peddlers. That means a license fee in Wisconsin of $75 per year. It is absurdly high for this kind of enterprise, but we hope to purchase an unexpired license for $50 and return transfer it when we are finished with our work."

IRVING ALLEN AND HIS TRAVELING BOOK-SHOP ARE TOURING THE MIDDLE WEST THIS SUMMER

The Austra-Zealand Book-Trade

By A. G. Stephens in the Adelaide "Register"

IN 1911, Australia imported books valued at £693,429, or 2/10 per head of population.

In 1911 New Zealand imported books valued at £230,069, or 4/7 per head of population.

In 1921 Australia imported books valued at £1,032,962, or 3/9 per head of population.

In 1920 New Zealand imported books valued at £524,462, or 8/8 per head.

According to the inscription on the Alexandrian Library aforetime, books are "the medicine of the mind." New Zealand and Australia regularly take the largest doses of that medicine. They are the most book-buying countries in the British Empire. As far as my knowledge goes they are, per head of population, the most book-buying countries in the world. Publishers in Britain and the United States periodically consider figures such as the foregoing, hold up hands of amazement, and emit Blücher's remark on seeing London, "What a field for plunder!" Then they export the books you borrow or buy.

The figures are subject to some reduction because customs' returns include with books a considerable value of music and periodicals. This may be estimated at about one-sixth of the totals. Deduct that sixth, and we have every inhabitant of Australia, from infants in arms to the "oldest residents," purchasing statistically in 1921 printed books with a customs' valuation of 3/2 and a probable buying price of about 4/9. We have every inhabitant of New Zealand purchasing statistically in 1920 printed books with a customs' valuation of 7/3, and a probable buying price of about 11/.

Australia is so wide, New Zealand is so various, booksellers' stocks are so mixed and bookselling conditions are so different, that only an approximate estimate of costs and profits is practicable. A firm in Adelaide and a firm in Kalgoorlie, a firm in Christchurch and a firm in Gisborne, play all rules of bookball with all manner of teams.

Before arbitration, the war, and shipping uprose, it may be said that a good-sized firm under good management in a good way of trade in a good Austra-Zealand city could do new book business at an expense rate of 30 per cent, on London or New York invoice cost if it strictly attended to business [equivalent to a 20-25 per cent cost of doing business on the retail price, Ed.] That includes freight, carriage, wages, rent, insurance, and sundries—all the underfoot and overhead expenses necessary to put books in stock and sell them out of stock. Nowadays an expense rate of 40 per cent on invoices may be considered low [about 27 per cent on retail price, Ed.]

If a bookseller nets 10 per cent annual cash on the invoice cost of his new book purchases he does incredibly well. Usually the profit goes into stock, and stock keeps piling up. The bookseller balances his account by selling stationery, or toys, or sundries, or secondhand books at a larger profit, or by adding a circulating library.

In the new book trade pure and simple there is no profit worth mentioning, and a great risk of loss unless orders are very carefully watched. New books are sold at all nominal rates of gross profit from 25 per cent on cost price to about 60 per cent—with an average which the booksellers try to make 50 per cent. That means that, buying a book at 5/ and selling it at 7/6, with a 40 per cent expense rate [27 per cent on the retail, Ed.], the bookseller gets 6d. for himself.

Usually he doesn't get it. Fiction fashions change, trade competition lowers prices, drapers sell books as side lines, educational authorities alter schedules and leave an array of unsolds, and books that ought to sell turn into stickers that won't sell. A dozen little foxes nibble at the Simon-pure bookseller's profit vine.

The consequence is that there isn't a Simon-pure new book seller in Austra-Zealand—not one. They all come to circulating libraries, or stationery, or secondhand, or, in recent years, pictures and prints and antiques, or toys and oddments. "Without the profit you cannot live." Stationery shows up to 100 per cent or more gross profit [50 per cent on the retail price, Ed.]

Secondhand books you buy for as little as possible and sell for as much as you can get. In a parcel at an auction sale, or in a dead man's library bought at average 1/ a volume, you may find a book or a hundred books saleable at 2/6, 5/, or £1. That little lift enables you to keep a brave front on your new book counter, where the losses come from.

Properly managed, the circulating library coins money for a bookseller. Whether we work the annual subscription rate or the deposit system, with an exchange of 3d. a book, the charge for one reader per novel comes to about 5 per cent on retail price. The cloth-bound novel—the standard circulating library book—was formerly cheap at metropolitan retail 3/6, or 4/ in outlying towns. The 3/6 price was 1/6, or its dollar equivalent below the English or American retail price. The well-manufactured books of some American publishers, sold in their homeland at $1.50 were a particular gift to Austra-Zealand readers.

Publishers' costs and prices soared with the war. The English novel priced retail 6/, with an actual discount of 1/6 to the customer, turned into 7/ net, 7/6 net, and even at 8/6 net—at which prices the best new English novels are published today. American novels have risen to $2 and $2.50.

Luckily "colonial editions" and export prices can bring booksellers' cost down to an equivalent of 3/6 or 4/, ex freight, which adds about 5d. per book. The "marketing" habit further reduces costs of some novels; tho small booksellers still find themselves paying up to 5/ wholesale for novels of which the raised retail price in the cities is 5/6. As a failure to sell two books in a dozen may land the bookseller with a loss, the circulating library is our haven and our refuge.

A circulating library novel in demand will go out once or twice a week. If it is a lucky book it will repay its cost in 10 weeks. After that there is velvet money to be made, and a chance of 12/ per book gross profit before the fiftieth subscriber turns it back at the end of a year asking to be rebound for 1/. Then it may go on earning money for another year before it is sold to the circulating library farther back for 2/ or 2/6.

Quite a number of circulating library novels can earn £1 per volume. Some, in the course of time, can earn £5 for a succession of library keepers. A good library novel eventually dies only when no amount of patient stitching will fasten its soiled leaves together. On the other hand, there are library misfits and misfires, the duds and the short runs. But it is a poor novel indeed that is not worth treble its cost to a circulating library. That low valuation means gross 200 per cent to the librarian. A few high-valuation novels may reach gross 1,000 per cent—but there are always expenses, there is always risk, to bring down the tally. 'Tis a good tally none the less.

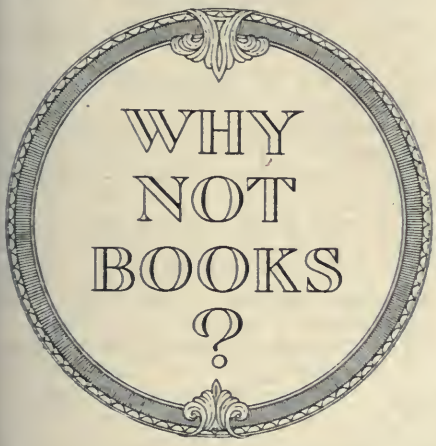
Of the total books imports £1,032,000 by Australia, 1921, £859,000, or 83 per cent came from Great Britain, and £150,000, or 14 per cent. from U. S. A.—leaving only 3 per cent from other countries. New Zealand trade is about the same proportion, transhipping 13 per cent from Australia.

New Zealand's humorous statistics of importation of books directly from Germany further warrants its claim to be the most English country in the British Empire. The figures are, values:—1917, £2; 1918, £15; 1919, nil; 1920, £1. We can afford to make ex-Kaiser Wilhelm a present of that £1 for his coming autobiography.

The American Bookman in England

THE Bookman, the American of that name, has decided to give itself a wider hearing in England, and the July number of the English Bookman carried a full page advertisement beginning a campaign which will be now carried energetically forward. It is interesting to note that the advertisement selects the department called "The Literary Spotlight," an anonymous review of American literary personalities, as the first of its items to feature in seeking a new hearing, also stressing that there will be each month a study with pen portrait of some American author, publisher, or editor, as well as short stories by well-known writers.

Every Real Home has Books



The New Book Campaign Material

A STRIKING new poster in four colors bearing one of the most effective slogans that the campaign has yet devised is reproduced on this page and is now being printed in a large edition to go to the ever increasing mailing list of the Year Round Bookselling Committee. The slogan:

Why Not Books?

Seems to be a particularly good one because it is just as applicable to September and October, when people are actively appearing in the shopping districts again with buying in mind, as it is to Christmas, when it has a very suggestive note to those who are in the mood for buying but who have forgotten the important place that books have as gifts.

Ethel Taylor was selected for the artist, as her summer poster in silhouette, "Books for the Week-end," was considered by many the most effective and usable poster that the Committee had devised. She seems to have again caught the right feeling for a book poster, and coloring makes it even more effective than the silhouette. The girl herself is costumed in red with cuffs of black and white fur, and the chair and the lettering are in a bright and striking green, which shows strongly against the solid dull black background.

A streamer, which bears the general theme of the fall campaigning, "Every Real Home Has Books," is also to be mailed at the same time, together with the Children's Book Week poster and a streamer for those displays. This will put into the dealer's hands at one packing material for three months' aggressive work.

The expansion of the Children's Book Week idea this year is becoming a tremendous stimulus to the whole book promotion program, and the number of groups that are wholeheartedly joining in the effort to give children's reading its complete hearing is a great encouragement.

The Best Sellers

THE interest in having a careful canvass of sales records of new books is apparently increasing, judging from the ready response to the inquiries sent out for records in connection with the best seller list.

The sales for June, as printed in the August 1st Books of the Month show an opening up in the fiction field to make way for new titles. Margaret Deland's book jumped in the first month of its publication to second place, an eloquent testimony to the general appreciation of the importance of her writing. "Gentle Julia," which had taken third place in the first month of its publication, is now in first, and "If Winter Comes," after its long period of supremacy as successor to "Main Street," is still in a strong position ready to introduce its successor.

"Simon Called Peter" has gone from tenth and eighth place up to fourth place, and "Maria Chapdelaine" has held its own. A very interesting feature is the prompt appearance of Mrs. Burnett's "Robin" while "The Head of the House of Coombe," to which it is a sequel, is still keenly active. The two books apparently will move forward as a pair into the fall season. Three new summer titles appeared, "The Moon Out of Reach," "Secret Places of the Heart" and "The Covered Wagon." "The Sheik" is the only book that has held a place in the first twelve for a full year.

In non-fiction, changes are less frequently made than in fiction, and Wells and Van Loon have alternated in first place for the last two or three months, with "The Outline of Science" now coming strongly toward the top. There is a good suggestion for publishers in the steady interest in health books, "Outwitting Our Nerves" having been prominent for a full year or more, and "Diet and Health" running almost up to the "Outline" books.

"A Book of Samples"

UNDER the modest title of "A Book of Samples of Paper" a widely-known corporation of paper manufacturers has just issued a handsome, cloth-bound quarto volume of remarkable value to any one interested in the finished effect of type and illustration on every kind of paper. The book consists of upwards of 600 pages, made up of a great variety of papers, including thin cardboard, with explanatory text, and what is most valuable, a series of four illustrations produced in every known process, from rough news screen to six-color lithographic plates.

The result is probably the most remarkable collection of printing samples in existence.

It is said that the producers of this "Book of Samples," the Champion Coated Paper Co., invested more than fifty thousand dollars in its production, covering a period of three years in getting it into shape. The book itself proves it.

A New Book-trade Tool

THE new book-trade tool which Belle M. Walker, publisher and editor of the Bookseller and Stationer has planned, went to the subscribers' hands last month and has, the publisher reports, received much favorable comment. The Bookseller and Stationer has always carried an annotated list of books in each issue and at the very moderate price of one dollar these have been cumulated in quarterly numbers, the first one being dated July, 1922, the quarter there ending showing something over 600 books entered in the regular alphabet with supplementary lists of new editions and announcements. The subscription price for four issues of the year is one dollar. The notes, which are largely confined to the fiction and juveniles, are specially written at the Bookseller and Stationer office and evaluate as well as describe the books. The main alphabet is arranged by title and author, cross indexed from author and major subject classification under title arrangement. The material will not be cumulated from one quarter to the next as is done in the "Cumulative Book Index" of H. W. Wilson Company, but gives a most valuable index at a very nominal price. This should enable many stores to give a much more prompt and effective book service.

French Book Tariff

A TARIFF protection of three times the present scale has been asked by the French manufacturers of paper on newspapers, periodicals and books. This request of the Minister of Commerce is the result of the increasing foreign competition in paper. In 1913 the average monthly imports of machine-made paper into France was only slightly over 1000 metric tons, but in 1921 this reached 4500 metric tons, and the first four months of 1922 indicate totals of twice that amount. The United States is not a heavy exporter of paper to France, nor as yet are there many books going from this side.

Prize for Book Essay

IN connection with the Children's Book Week observance, the editor of Farm and Fireside, a periodical of countrywide circulation, is offering prizes to any farm boy or girl under seventeen who will write the best short letter about the five books he or she likes best. The contestants are asked to talk about books they really like and not those that grown-ups persuaded them to read. Each contestant, whether winner or not, will receive, free, a copy of The Bookshelf for Boys and Girls.

Help Wanted at Once

From each state in the Union the names and addresses of fifteen individuals who sell books therein.

(Those who see nothing in Bookselling but a "Waste of time being in it," "wish they could get out of it," "a rotten business anyhow," please keep their names to themselves.)

These fifteen individuals from each state, must be prepared to spend a little of their time, and of their income, every day in the year if need be, and for years to come if necessity require. This must be given collectively and not individually, all working as a unit for one big cause. They must be full and not partial believers in the theory of self help, that God helps those who help themselves, and proceed with the job to the limit.

These fifteen individuals shall work only for their own state, its people, its government and themselves, other states being of no personal interest to them until called upon for a united effort.

To such individuals a hearty invitation is extended, to send their names at once—irrespective of anyone else—wherever that individual may be in that state, in city, town or hamlet. A leader, a real one must be discovered for that state, and surely such can be found.

The work planned out for the fifteen to accomplish for their state and ultimately for the whole United States, and the uplift of its people, will be fully explained, when the fifteen names are in hand.

Reply at once, and be one of those working for the benefit of the entire community, and not wholly for selfish purposes. Your calling enables you to do great educational work in your state. Send your name to

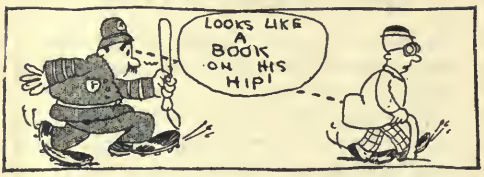
CHARLES E. BUTLER,

Chairman of the Board of Trade of the American Booksellers' Assn., 225 Fifth Ave., New York City.

English Book Exportation

THE fluctuations that have existed in the exporting of books from England since the war are indicated by the figures recently issued for the first three months of 1922, which show a falling off of £332,868 from the value of the exports in the first three months of 1921, tho only £6,424 from 1920.

An Uncorrected Galley



H. J. PHILLIPS IN NEW YORK GLOBE

KEEPING OUR LITERATURE PURE

Now for a literature censorship! Something has gotta be done to keep the American public "next to pure reading matter." Even the bookworm is beginning to turn. The American publishers are letting everything go to sexes and sevens. So say the reformers.

Place a book of smart fiction on the table beside the family album. Remove it three hours later and what will you find? All the family portraits blushing so furiously the album looks like a catalog from the Maine lobster industry.

Books are now being picked on by the reformers as responsible for all the things the saloon and the movies were held responsible for a few years ago.

Too many modern books are mere pathological studies, it is claimed. The aim of the censors is to keep the reading public off the straight and narrow pathology.

The truth is stranger than fiction, but the law is stranger than both.

Possible conversation a few years hence between a follower of modernist fiction and booklegger friend:

Bookworm: What have you in the suitcase?

Booklegger, furtively: Sh-h-h-h! Not so loud! Step over here behind this billboard. I gotta shipment of new novels by the best authors.

Bookworm, eagerly: The real stuff

Booklegger, opening suitcase cautiously an inch or two: Hundred proof! . . . Written in bond . . . private stock . . . no foolin'!

Bookworm, suspiciously: I dunno; I'm a little afraid to take any chance. I bought six last month. They were all fake stuff.

Booklegger: You don't needa be afraid of these. I gottem from Canada . . . No dilution . . . strong as you can get . . . the real kick 'nd everything.

Bookworm: How much?

Booklegger: Oh, $120 a case of twelve books!

Bookworm: All right; I'll take a case. You'll deliver it, of course Booklegger: Nope. You'll have to cart 'em away yourself. Us book agents can't take any chances. Izzy Einstein is on our heels all the while. Raided eleven bookstores yesterday!

There even is a possibility of another homebrew evil: The authors will sell the plot and the reader will add yeast, raisins, and await the continuity.

Most of the real reading will have to be done outside the three-mile limit. Floating libraries will be the thing. No literary person may hope to be well read unless he owns a gasoline launch. The harbors off the Atlantic Coast may be alive with people swimming on their backs and reading the latest fiction at the same time.

—H. J. Phillips in New York Globe.

Mutual Appreciation

THE Borzoi books are carrying on their wrappers a statement about the quality of the make-up of the books, comparing their worth to the Atlantic Monthly. The Atlantic, being pleased to be used as a standard of quality, promptly reprinted this testimony in its own advertising, thus giving additional circulation to Mr. Knopf's statement. This emphasis on the value of quality in bookmaking as a special sales value is an interesting effort of the publisher to turn the beauty of his books into increased selling returns.

The paragraph on the back flap of the current wrappers is as follows:

are in many ways the most interesting in the United States. They are also, without a doubt, the best looking books made to-day in the Eng. speaking countries. Often they cost a little more than other books, but they are worth more, just as the Atlantic Monthly is worth more than many a cheaper magazine. The price is based on the cost of manufacture; the cost of manufacture is not based on the price.

Borzoi Books, consequently, appeal especially to lovers of the best. Most people interested would buy most Borzoi Books whatever their format; but a great many readers buy Borzoi Books for their format alone—even when they are not interested in the contents, and that can be said of very few other American books.

A Week's Gleanings of Book-Trade News

DORAN is to have Stewart Edward White's new book, "On Tiptoe, A Romance of the Redwoods."

Two very brief but very attractive volumes are added to the John Lane edition of Anatole France, "Count Morin Deputy" and "Marguerite." Both are delightfully illustrated with woodcut drawings.

HOUSEHOLDERS can be protected from too severe inroads at the hands of the carpenter or plumber by having at hand "The House Owner's Book" by Churchill and Wickenden, which Funk & Wagnalls have recently put out.

LOVAT FRASER, whose illustrations for "The Beggar's Opera" attracted so much attention, was responsible for a set of brilliantly colored drawings for "Nursery Rhymes," which Knopf has now brought to this country.

IN THE NEW SERIES of classics with colored illustrations, Crowell Company has obtained for its edition of "Romola" the beautiful colored plates that were in the book on Florence in Black's famous color series. The illustrations for "The Last Days of Pompeii" are of the same high character.

AN EXCELLENT REVIEW of Alexander Graham Bell's life is contained in Theodore N. Vail's book published by Harper recently called "In One Man's Life." Mr. Vail is as much responsible as Dr. Bell for the place the telephone occupies in our every-day life.

THE WIDESPREAD DISCUSSION of James Joyce's "Ulysses" has started the sale, so Mr. Huebsch finds, of his previous books, especially of "A Portrait of the Artist As A Young Man," which Mr. Huebsch published here before it came out in London. "Ulysses" is a continuation of the story of Stephen Dedalus of this book.

A BOOK for the public reader along fresh and new lines is Gertrude Johnson's "Dialects for Oral Interpretation," published by Century Company. Besides the wide collection of material grouped under the various well-known dialects, Irish, Scandinavian, Negro, Scotch, etc., there is a most valuable bibliography giving a list of books that contain dialect recitation, a list of authors part of whose works contain dialect material, and then a long list of selections for recitation to supplement those that have already been mentioned in the text."

THE BOOKLOVER is again to appear as a figure in fiction, this time in Henry James Forman's "The Man Who Lived In A Shoe," a New York story (Little, Brown).

"THE SHEIK" was published in a reprint edition on August 1st, in spite of the fact that the $2 edition is still selling rapidly.

ANOTHER PUBLISHER in the field of plays for little theaters is Lieber & Lewis, who is starting a new series of American and European plays. Pierre Loving will edit the series under the name of The Little Playhouse Series.

RUPERT HOLLAND'S "Lafayette for Young Americans" is revision of the book "Lafayette We Come" making it of more permanent interest than the other volume published during the war time.

IN CONNECTION with the publication of Miss Cather's new novel, "One of Ours," Knopf is issuing a fine engraved photograph of the author suitable for display or permanent wall decoration. This is to be sold to dealers at half the printing cost, and it is a most satisfactory photograph of Miss Cather as she is today.

MUCH PROGRESS has been made in making practical the methods of character analysis, and Professor H. L. Hollingsworth of Columbia University is just publishing a volume on "Judging Human Character," an Appleton book. Professor Hollingsworth is the author of "Vocational Psychology," which had such a firm place.

FREDERICK O'BRIEN tells in his "Atolls of the Sun" (Century) of the moving picture house on the Coral Islands where the natives pay a bagful of cocoanuts to see one film. One thinks of the warehouses that would be needed at the Broadway show places if that custom were generally adopted.

A NEW COLLECTION of American patriotic poems has been edited by John R. Howard for Crowell under the title of "Poems of Heroism in American Life." The selection comes down to date, including such people as Joyce Kilmer, Witter Bynner, Henry Van Dyke to supplement the well-known names of the Nineteenth Century.

PUBLICATION DATES

Editor, PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

Because the railway strike might seriously delay shipments, we have been shipping Sinclair Lewis' new novel, "Babbitt" to distant booksellers as far in advance of publication as possible so that they would be sure to have it on September 14th. Our invoices have borne the notation:

"PUBLICATION DATE SEPTEMBER 14TH. PLEASE DO NOT SELL BEFORE."

In accordance with this practice, we filled an order from Younker Brothers in Des Moines, Iowa. We were astonished to learn this morning that they have had the book on sale at retail. We telegraphed them as follows:

"LEWIS BABBITT PUBLICATION DATE SEPTEMBER 14TH ADVISE US WHY SOLD BEFORE THIS TIME."

and they replied:

"TAKE A TRIP AROUND NEW YORK AND CHICAGO AND SEE HOW MANY PLACES IT IS SOLD NOT WAITING FOR PUBLICATION DATE."

We know that the book is not on sale in New York City because neither we nor the jobbers have made deliveries here. We do not believe it is on sale in Chicago because of the character of the houses to which we have made shipment.

We call the above conditions to your attention on the chance that you may care to publish them for the guidance of other publishers who are attempting to serve their customers by advance shipments.

Very truly yours,
Harcourt, Brace & Co.

Obituary

PARK BENJAMIN

PARK BENJAMIN, noted lawyer and author of several books on scientific subjects, died at his summer home in Stamford, Conn. on August 21st, age seventy-three. He was a man of varied interests. After graduation from Union College, he entered the field of patent law, and from 1872 to 1878 he was associate editor of the Scientific American and was editor-in-chief of Appleton's "Cyclopedia of Applied Mechanics." He was the author of "The Early History of the Naval Academy" and "The Early History of Electricity." Mr. Benjamin was the father-in-law of the late Enrico Caruso, and he is survived by two brothers who are widely known in the book-trade, William Ewart Benjamin and Walter R. Benjamin, the latter still in business as a specialist in autographic literature.

HOWARD CROSBY BUTLER

HOWARD CROSBY BUTLER, professor in Princeton University, died suddenly in the American Hospital in Paris on August 15th. He had recently returned from Constantinople, having been engaged in supervising excavations at Sardis. He was an eminent authority on archeology, author of the monumental work, "Architecture and Other Arts." He was also author of "Scotland's Ruined Abbeys" and "The Story of Athens." In the interest of the Metropolitan Museum of Art he superintended the excavations on the site of Sardis, the capital of the ancient Lydian Empire, and succeeded in uncovering the great temple of Artemis at Sardis and brought to light a great treasure of ancient jewelry, inscriptions, pottery and other examples of craftsmanship.

A. A. CHEYNEY, formerly with Burrows Bros. of Cleveland, has joined the staff of Barnes & Noble, Inc.

Business Note

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA.—S. S. Addison, of The Bookstall, Melbourne University, wishes to receive the catalogs and lists of American publishers.

NEW YORK CITY.—Orientalia has been incorporated under the laws of the State of New York. The officers of the corporation are: President—Ananda K. Coomaraswamy; Vice-President—Harold N. Kingsland; Treasurer and Manager—G. M. L. Brown; Secretary—Helen Pinkerton. Additional capital has been provided for the enlargement of the business, and plans are maturing that will make it a thoroly equipped clearing house for all that is worth-while in the literature and art of the East.

The Weekly Record of New Publications

THIS list aims to be a complete and accurate record of American book publications. Pamphlets will be included only if of special value. Publishers should send copies of all books promptly for annotation and entry, and the receipt of advance copies insures record simultaneous with publication. The annotations are descriptive, not critical; intended to place not to judge the books. Pamphlet material and books of lesser trade interest are listed in smaller type.

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent for record. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. When not specified the binding is cloth.

Imprint date is stated [or best available date, preferably copyright date, in bracket] only when it differs from year of entry. Copyright date is stated only when it differs from imprint date: otherwise simply "c." No ascertainable date is designated thus: [n. d.]

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q (4to: under 30 cm.); O (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tf. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ff. (48mo: 10cm.); sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow.

Rare Books, Autographs and Prints

WILLIAM II, it is said, wrote his reminiscences entirely in long hand. This thrilling news is given to the world by Dr. Begdan Krieger, who has been house librarian for thirty years at the Kaiser's old home in Berlin.

The collection of letters written by Robert Louis Stevenson to his cousin, Robert Alan Mowbray Stevenson, the painter and art critic, and including the original manuscript of "Monmouth," the play, and two essays, "Keats and Shelley," and "Nights Outside the Wick Mail," recently sold at Sotheby's in London, were, with the exception of a single item, all bought by Gabriel Wells of this city.

A First Edition Club has lately been established in London at 17 Pall Mall East. Its secretary says: "It is a mistake to assume that the preference for first editions is due to their market value: obviously the truth is vice versa, the market value reflecting an intrinsic worth. To understand this, one must seek to find therein the peculiar virtue of a first edition, and the more one comes to know books, the more explicit will be the answer."

What is supposedly the oldest deed to claim attention at the Register's Office in Brooklyn was recently received for recording. It was dated September 7, 1747, and bears the seal of the British Empire, the title running from Wilhelms Stoothoff to the Dutch Reformed Church of Flatlands. This deed is being recorded to clear a title. It bears names well known in early Brooklyn history, such as those of Major Gerrit Soothoof, Col. Thomas Willett, Capt. John Van Duyckhuys and Capt. Elbert Stoothoof.

One of the interesting international friendships of the last century was that between the English poet and politician, Richard Monckton Milnes and Varnhagen von Ense, German biographer and friend of Carlyle. During the period between 1844 and 1854 the two men were in constant correspondence, exchanging views on matters social, political and literary. A bundle of letters addressed to Varnhagen by Milnes was discovered in 1915 in the Berlin Königliche Bibliothek by Dr. Walter Fischer, who has now published them thru the firm of Carl Winter in Heidelberg with an introduction and annotations.

The Laurentian Library, founded in 1418 by Cosimo de Medici, has for years been in a deplorably congested condition. Its head librarian, Dr. Guido Biagi, has for many years been studying the means to make it serve the Italian public as the British Museum does that of Great Britain, and has finally succeeded in having nine additional rooms opened, in which is to be housed a permanent exhibition of treasures of the library hitherto so huddled together as to be useless for all but scholars. The exhibition is to be known as "Il Museo Laurenziano del Libro e della Miniatura."

The leading article in The Bookman's Journal and Print Collector for August is "The Bookworm's Apologia," by Walter Menzies, in which he sets forth the booklover's point of view. Another feature is a discussion of the publishing of juvenilia, especially in relation to the Stevenson material included for the first time in the new Vailima edition of his work. Wilfred G. Partington, the editor, considers Mr. Pennell's estimate of Rembrandt and Whistler. Mr. Salaman introduces to print collectors the etchings of Edmund Blumpied; Gordon Tell tells of the frustrated friendships of Keats and Shelley, and there are many other shorter articles together with the usual well filled departments. The Bookman's Journal is filling its place as an international magazine for collectors with increasing efficiency as the months go by.

At the sale of various consignments including the property of the late Horace W. Sanders at Sotheby's in London this month, the great attraction was the appearance of a copy of one of the rarest of Shelley items, a pamphlet of only sixteen leaves, the "Posthumous Fragments of Margaret Nicholson," Oxford, 1810, an unbound, uncut, and unopened copy and probably unique in this condition. Five other copies are known, only one of which has ever appeared before in the records of book auction sales, the Forman copy which brought $6,750 at Anderson's in 1920. This copy brought £1,210 and is said to have been bought by a New York dealer. Nothing was said of the previous history of the copy and this is one of the little romances of the sales room. It belonged to the late Baroness Burdett-Coutts, and got hidden and unrecognized in a bundle of music and other things in one of the sales of last spring of the Baroness's literary property. This bundle was knocked down to a London bookseller for less than £1, and was then passed on, apparently without proper examination, to another bookseller for £10. It was this second owner of the bundle who found he had drawn a prize of great value.

W. & R. Chamber of Edinburgh will publish a volume in the autumn that all Stevenson collectors will want. It will bear the title, "I Can Remember Robert Louis Stevenson." The book will be edited by Miss Rosaline Masson, for the benefit of the Robert Louis Stevenson Club. It will embody a collection of personal reminiscences contributed by living persons who can remember him. It will contain one or two portraits of special interest. The contributions are of different lengths and kinds; and, numbering about a hundred, they are from old schoolfellows, some with recollections of the child Stevenson as far back as the fifties; many old Edinburgh friends and associates, among them fellow members of the Scottish Bar; relatives of R. L. S.; literary friends; those who met him in this country in later years, and those who met him and knew him in Samoa. The contributions have been written especially for the book, with the exception of a few selections from lately published books or articles chosen because they were personal reminiscences. Among these is an extract from "Robert Louis Stevenson," by the late Lord Cuthrie, the chief initiator of the Robert Louis Stevenson Club.

A correspondent of the London Times writes: "The Dickens Fellowship of which Sir Frederick Macmillan was recently elected president for the ensuing year, has now added to its good work of helping to keep the great novelist's memory green by acquiring the freehold of No. 48 Doughty Street, Mecklenburg Square, with a view to preserving it as a Dickens shrine in London. Next year, when the Fellowship comes of age, it will celebrate the event by endowing the house as a Dickens landmark and equipping it as a library, gallery and museum. Dickens's tenancy of the house in question lasted from March, 1837, to the end of 1839. It is the only one of his many London residences which still remains structurally intact and unchanged in every way. There it was that the greater part of "Pickwick" and "Nicholas Nickleby," and the whole of "Oliver Twist" were written. B. W. Matz, the founder of the Fellowship, has in his possession the original letter inviting Samuel Lover, the author of "Handy Andy," to celebrate the publication of "Pickwick." Written from Doughty Street it runs: "Write me a line offhand like a decent Irishman (if there be such a thing), and say you'll come." Here it was also that the novelist's daughters, Mary and Kate, were born, and the greatest grief of his life befell him in the death of his beautiful sister-in-law, Mary Hogarth, who inspired the character of Agnes Wickfield in "David Copperfield." Her death at No. 48 probably occasioned Dickens's decision to leave it.

KEEP THIS IN MIND

In advertising for "Books Wanted" three things should be remembered that will help you to find and the other fellow to quote:

1—Have your lists typed, or very plainly written.
2—Arrange the items in alphabetical order by author.
3—If possible give the name of the author, as the title only, unless anonymous, is too indefinite.

Observation of these suggestions is urgently requested.

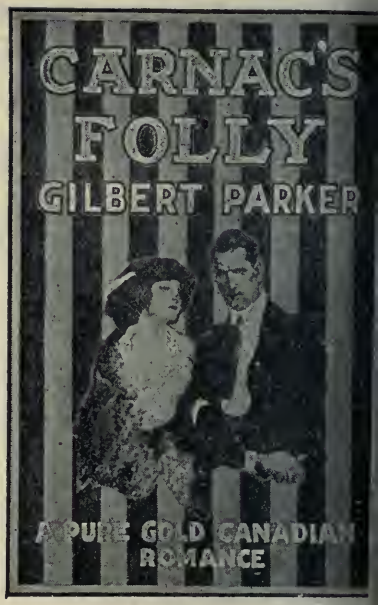
GILBERT PARKER

has written another novel in the series of strong, clean, virile romances of French Canada which have made his name famous.



CARNAC'S FOLLY

100,000 COPIES

The Phila. Public Ledger (Aug. 10th) includes "Carnac's Folly" among the leading Fall books for which a sale exceeding 100,000 copies may be expected.

Sir Gilbert Parker's stories of French Canada stand alone in their field. "Carnac's Folly," like "The Right of Way," "The Seats of the Mighty," etc., will be read wherever Parker's name is known, and that is everywhere. It will be one of the leading Fall Books because it is the latest of a series of great successes, and in itself is one of the most powerful dramatic novels from the pen of a master story teller.

LOVE AND FREINDSHIP

By JANE AUSTEN

"The literary scream of the moment," says "John O'London" in the New York Times of this newly discovered story of Jane Austen's youth, which is followed by an Outline History of England and several other highly characteristic fragments. All are reproduced exactly as written, including mistakes in spelling, grammar, etc. Here's both an important literary find and an uproariously funny book—recommend it to your discriminating customers. With a Preface by Gilbert K. Chesterton. Cloth, $1.75; with chintz jacket, $2.00.

THE GREEN GODDESS

By LOUISE JORDAN MILN
Author of "Mr. Wu," etc.

The author of "Mr. Wu" writes a thrilling novel of a Himalayan principality, based on William Archer's play of the same name, which, as the most exciting melodrama staged in years, has brought George Arliss such distinguished success. You'll find this story as full of tense excitement, thrills and vivid color as "Mr. Wu." With striking picture jacket, $1.90.

TREMENDOUS ADVENTURES

By DION CLAYTON CALTHROP

Full of variety, adventure and whimsical characterizations, this novel set in a Devonshire valley develops from a beginning of charming, old-fashioned romance into a story ultra-modern in its conclusion. With a beautiful color jacket, $1.90.

MY LADY APRIL

By JOHN OVERTON

"A charming tale of Bath in the days of Beau Nash," is the London Times' characterization of this story of young love in those mad, merry days when mystery and high adventure held full sway. Georges Carpentier is the hero in the film version. $1.90.

THE MOUNTAIN SCHOOL-TEACHER

A Novel by Melville Davisson Post

What if Christ appeared in the world today? Men and women everywhere wonder what is the answer to the question, and thousands are reading the extraordinary story by Melville Davisson Post for the answer it gives. "The Mountain School Teacher" tells the inspiring story of how a personality like Christ appeared in a Kentucky mountain village and of the results in the hearts and lives of twentieth century mountaineers. In this story appears a remarkable parallel to the actual events of the life of Christ. It is told with a wonderful simplicity and extraordinary beauty. $1.50

BATOUALA

By RENÉ MARAN

The first three weeks' sale of this book has exceeded our expectations, even though we predicted a phenomenal success. Everywhere it is being talked about. And it is conceded to be as good and powerful in the English translation as in the original.

Here are a few comments on the American edition.

N. Y. Times: "An astounding book."

N. Y. Herald: "BATOUALA is a masterpiece. Unqualifiedly the greatest intellectual or artistic achievement by his race thus far."

N. Y. Tribune: "BATOUALA is superb—a strange, exotic work. It lives mightily."

The Crisis: "The translator has achieved a result almost as starkly simple and magnificent as the original."

St. Louis Argus: "There arises occasionally an epochal literary work, and René Maran, full-blooded African Negro, has given the world a piece of literature which will be read 500 years from now. $1.75

And here is what the critics call

THE BEST MYSTERY STORY ever written:

WHAT BECAME of MR. DESMOND

By C. NINA BOYLE

St. Louis Globe Democrat: "There is no doubt American readers will vote it the best mystery story they have ever read."

N. Y. World: "A mystery story unique beyond measure. We defy any reader either to drop the book unfinished or to guess the finish before it comes."

N. Y. Tribune: "A story of extraordinary ingenuity and genuine human interest."

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "One of the best mystery tales in many moons." $1.75

THAT ARE SURE TO BE IN DEMAND THROUGHOUT THE FALL

A New Novel by the Author of "The Great Impersonation"

THE EVIL SHEPHERD

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Mr. Oppenheim has here written a novel of English life of a melodramatic character, so fascinating and so stirring that the most hardened reader can hardly fail to receive a series of thrills. The same element of suspense that made "The Great Impersonation" so popular is present in this new novel in full measure. One of Boston's leading booksellers said to us the other day, "Watch that new Oppenheim novel —it is going to sell even better than you think it will!" $2.00

A Romance that Tugs at the Heart-strings

THE MAN WHO LIVED IN A SHOE

By HENRY JAMES FORMAN

A charming, whimsical story, with clear-cut characterization and wholesome sentiment, written in a beguiling manner. If you like such stories as "Daddy Longlegs," or such popular films as "The Bachelor Daddy," you will revel in "The Man Who Lived in a Shoe." Second Printing. $1.90

Both these novels will be widely advertised.

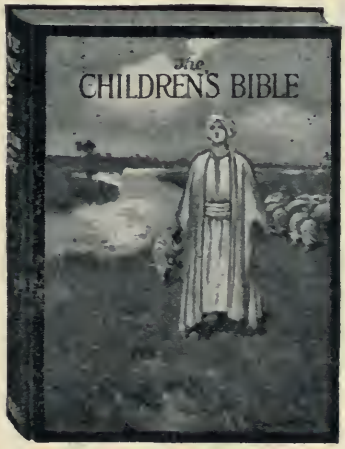
The Children's Bible

Selections from the Old and New Testaments in simple English, arranged by HENRY A. SHERMAN and CHARLES FOSTER KENT

A book that every child should own



To be backed by vigorous advertising

Parents, teachers, editors, booksellers, everyone who has seen "The Children's Bible," agree that it is one of the most significant books for children that has been published in many years. It is not a book of Bible stories retold—it contains selections from the Bible itself, put into such clear and simple English that the child will understand the meaning of the Bible truths.

"The Children's Bible" is beautifully illustrated. In addition to a full-color cover and title-page there are fourteen full-page illustrations reproduced in full-color and sixteen full-page illustrations in duotone. It is a book of rare beauty, printed in large clear type, strongly bound and stamped in gold. $3.50.

The Greatest Dog Story Since "The Call of the Wild"

THE WHELPS OF THE WOLF

By George Marsh

Author of "Toilers of the Trails."

A gripping story of a new Northland never before the scene of a romantic novel, a land as large as Alaska—the Hudson's Bay Country.

You will follow with bated breath Jean Marcel and his great dog Fleur into white barrens, where the Northern Lights pulse thro' the starving moons of the long snows.

Gleaming white-waters, mist-hung ridges, the pitiless beat of the white northers, are all here in this romance of the East Coast of Hudson's Bay and the battle of a man against nature for his heart's desire.

A faithful and dramatic picture of this fascinating country.

A Literary Dark Horse

MR. H. V. Korner, of The Korner & Wood Co., of Cleveland, is enthusiastic about a new English novel which we have just published—"Sea Wrack" by Vere Hutchinson. Published in London a few weeks ahead of its issue here, it has already received extraordinary commendation there, several reviewers going so far as to compare it with Emily Bronte's masterpiece "Wuthering Heights" and all of them speaking in most complimentary terms about its enthralling plot and its powerful, swiftly driving style.

Mr. Korner, raising his original order 75 per cent, wrote us as follows:

> "It seems to me that when you published 'Sea Wrack,' you brought out one of the 'dark horses' of the fall of 1922.
> "It is the kind of book which repays one for sampling so many books, most of which turn out to be disappointments. It seems to me to have everything which makes a book worth while and at the same time popular.
> "We are heavily loaded with new fiction but this book is too good to overlook"

The World's Leading Books On

Sex Hygiene

By Dr. E. B. LOWRY

The Lowry books have such a large sale because they meet every requirement for a sane, clear and correct presentation of sex knowledge. There is nothing morbid or mawkish in them. Dealers are pleased with the splendid results in handling these popular, helpful books. They are quick sellers the year round.

The Journal of the American Medical Association says:
Dr. Lowry's books are excellent and can be safely recommended.

The Journal of Education, Boston, says:
Dr. Lowry's books combine medical knowledge, simplicity, and purity in an unprecedented way. They are void of offense to the most delicate natures.

The Christian Standard says:
We cannot think of any volumes so well designed to open wide the gates and make plain the way to true manhood and womanhood as Dr. Lowry's.

President Eliot says:
The books by Dr. Lowry are excellent.

The Scientific American says:
They have the lucidity of common sense.

The London Lancet says:
The Lowry books are the best books published on sex hygiene.

President Charles M. Stuart, Garrett Biblical Institute, says:
The helpful books on personal hygiene by Dr. Lowry avoid the objectionable qualities of most literature on this subject.

The Baptist Teacher says:
Dr. Lowry's books are to be commended as calm and reverent in tone, unmistakably clear yet delicate in expression.

Dr. Wm. Brady says:
I have gone over Dr. Lowry's books on sex hygiene with a fine-tooth comb, and I am unable to see how the subject could be better presented.

Thousands of similar opinions have been received from the medical, religious and educational press and professions and from readers who have been helped by these books.

A Child's Reading

DO you realize the tremendous importance of selecting books for young people which will not only entertain but will help to mould character as well? Such books are the famous animal classics, Black Beauty and BEAUTIFUL JOE, stories which have never failed to hold the children's attention to the very end. They read and love the story of BEAUTIFUL JOE, the homely and abused little dog who was rescued and adopted by a sympathetic family. And they read it without realizing for a moment that they are absorbing one of the greatest lessons a child can learn—the lesson of unselfishness.

More than a million copies of BEAUTIFUL JOE have been sold

A story that will never grow old, and one that speaks not for the dog alone, but for the whole animal kingdom. Through it we enter the animal world, and are made to see as animals see, and to feel as animals feel.

UNTIL Lytton Strachey wrote of Cardinals Manning and Newman no one had grasped the religious spirit that lit beacon fires in Victoria's reign. It has taken Compton Mackenzie, in his new novel, THE ALTAR STEPS, to rekindle those fires in the ardent and lovable soul of Mark Lidderdale. "All are equal on the altar steps," argued Mark. "Elsewhere man remains divided." The story of Mark's immaturity, his struggle with human passion, his inner experience and his outer contacts is told with the brilliance that went into the writing of "Carnival" and the perfectly genuine, realistic humor that gave distinction to "Poor Relations."

The Best Sellers

IT is something over twenty-five years since the words "best seller," thru the efforts of the Bookman, became definitely connected with the book business so that people in other trades, who use the words, inevitably use it with booklists in mind. There have been many criticisms against the system that gives special prominence to books according to their numerical sale, and yet the plan has vitality. These lists have always been kept up in one form or another, and have brought increased attention to books and created publicity which has made book buyers of many people who would otherwise have no interest in new publications.

The same impulse which adds thousands to the subscription lists of the Pictorial Review, American Magazine or Atlantic Monthly makes thousands of book readers who want to read the books which a general judgment has approved. It is easy to say that numbers do not always make for permanent worth, but many observers have found that over a period of years the judgment of a great number of people as instanced in their reading taste has been surprisingly good. Many of the greatest authors of the past have been the best sellers of their day. It will always be true, too, that many people are turned away from a book because they distrust the judgment of a crowd, and these readers will see that other books which are not in these lists get plenty of attention

Undoubtedly in the judgment of most observers of the book game, the year 1922 is to be a year of extraordinary interest in book sales and book popularity. The recent phenomenal sales of several books and the general quickening of interest in current fiction has reached a climax that will make this fall a memorable one in book circles in a competitive sense. One editor has observed that there is practically no popular author, old or young, who has not an entry in this year's race, and there are nearly 100 books that can be safely quoted as entrants for some position in the running.

In a canvass recently made by the New York Herald, many booksellers sent in lists of what they thought would be the leaders. All of these reports show a feeling of the tenseness of competition and seem to predict large sales. There is much hesitancy to pick winners because of the variety of talent and because experience of previous years, especially of last year, shows that books whose full possibilities have not been at first appreciated, are likely to sweep up into the upper places of high sales.

If the book-trade will take this kind of competition at its true value and not with too much feeling that numerical judgments are final or equal literary judgments, tho they may happen to be identical, a great deal of real interest can be found in the competitive features of this fall business, and this feeling of competition will reflect itself in the general attention to fiction. Certainly the readers who pick from this fall's new titles are bound to find an extraordinary variety in merit and plot interest.

Curtis Premiums Withdrawn

THE American Booksellers' Association at its Convention and in previous reports has expressed the sharpest criticism of the use made of current books in connection with the Curtis Publishing Company's premiums. The Curtis Company last spring and the previous fall offered current novels together with subscriptions, the two for the price of one, or less than the price of one. Some of the publishers believed that the publicity gained was extremely valuable and that the resultant sales in the bookstores made the connection worth while. The retailers argued that such advertising impressed on people's minds that books must be too high in the bookstores and that the final effect was disastrous.

As the fall season drew near, several of the booksellers began to take this into consideration in their buying and cut down or cut off the purchase of titles which had been contracted for by the Curtis Publishing Company. This, about the first of August, led to a conference in New York between the publishers and Simon L. Nye, President of the Booksellers' Association and others; and, in this new discussion of the case the publishers agreed that, as the practice was so strongly criticized by booksellers, they would withdraw from such offers, cancel the fall arrangements, if possible, and refrain from future contracts of the same sort. These contracts were different from other uses of books for premiums in that the Curtis Company had bought the novels at a very special price in return for the general publicity that the book had received and had made a combination offer far below the usual offers of other magazines.

Starving a Library

THE New York Public Library is endeavoring to get the ear of the public and of its city government to voice its pressing need for more funds, and the newspapers are giving prompt attention to the situation, as everybody interested in books or the use of books should stand ready to do in whatever company the subject comes up. There is need of a community interest among all those who use books, and it is only by persistent argument that a city comes to realize that money spent for libraries is money well spent. A striking difference in conditions is shown in tabulated statistics which indicate that New York is spending only 35c per capita on its library service, while Cleveland spends $1.24, Boston 99c and Newark 66c. Worn and dirty books not only hurt the library's prestige but affect the whole public attitude toward books.

THE McClure Newspaper Syndicate, which is releasing to the American dailies "The Kaiser's Memoirs," between September 24th and October 29th, is to release immediately thereafter "The Mistakes of the Kaiser," by M. Viviani, the French War Premier, and following that will release "The Memoirs of Herbert Asquith," which will not only be a reply to "The Kaiser's Memoirs," but will give the other side of the story of Lloyd George and his coming into power. These announcements, supplementing plans for Lloyd George's book, show that from almost every angle the inside stories of the World War are coming into print.

Boston and Robert Keable

IN Boston the counterpart to the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice is the Watch and Ward Society, whose Secretary, Mr. Chase, has for many years been the active agent for the handling of local censorship enterprise. A number of years ago, the Society decided that a certain current book was objectionable, and after its agent had bought a copy at the New England News Company a warrant was issued for the branch manager of the Company, to his decided embarrassment, as he knew little about that particular book and nothing about its pros and cons. After that there was considerable discussion on this method of handling the Society's prosecutions, and Mr. Chase informally agreed that when other books had been examined and warrants obtained the book-trade would be given notice so that it could, if it chose, withdraw the sale of the book instead of going thru the court process.

To the Watch and Ward Society recently came a complaint against Keable's "Simon Called Peter." Mr. Chase took it to the judge and the judge said that he would issue a warrant for the suppression of the book if Mr. Chase asked for it, this in spite of the fact that this book had been presented to a judge in New York who had refused such a warrant. Faced with these conditions, the Boston trade has largely decided to acquiesce to the wishes of the Watch and Ward Society and to drop the selling of the book. This did not, of course, completely eliminate the book from the Boston market, and, in fact, the publisher found it after renewed and heavy advertising one of his most active outlets. Later some of the booksellers pooled their opinions and felt that they were jusified in suggesting to the Society that it was in this case on the wrong track and asked that no action be taken unless some new complaint was brought forward. This the Society agreed to do, and the book is now selling.

A Short History of Bookbinding

IT was one hundred years ago, in 1822, that Archibald Leighton effected the improvement of bookbinding by substituting cloth for boards. Prior to his innovation, publishers issued all their larger editions in boards—that is, binder's board, covered with paper, a method lacking both in style and durability.

Leighton purchased calico, which he dyed and calendered. Calico was not as well adapted to the binder's purpose as modern book cloths, as the web of the material was unpleasing to the eye, and to overcome this defect, the covers were stamped to get a grain effect. Subsequently it was the custom to put an embossed design on the cloth. With these improvements, cloth binding became highly popular.

ARCHIBALD LEIGHTON WHO INTRODUCED CLOTH AS A BOOKBINDING MATERIAL

In 1832 Leighton and a linen draper, named Wilson, had cloth specially prepared to permit stamping the title and other devices on the cloth in gold leaf. Before this improvement the cloth would not take the gold leaf, making it necessary to use a paper or leather label. Not until 1841 was there a binder's cloth maker. Prior to that year, to get suitable cloth, the binders had to utilize separately the services of the weaver, the dyer, calenderer and sizer.

Archibald Leighton was a member of a family which established a bookselling business in London, in 1798, carrying on bookbinding in connection with it, as was then a general practice. The business continues under the title of J. & J. Leighton, Ltd., celebrated dealers in rare books. The Kelmscott editions of William Morris were bound by the Leightons.

[The coming of the centenary of the date when cloth, the most common of all bookbinding materials, first came into use, has suggested the printing of an historical survey of bookbinding methods. This article has been prepared at our request by the research department of the Interlaken Mills of Providence, well-known producers of modern book cloths.]

This introduction of cloth brought into use the more widely useful of all book binding materials and was an important step in the long history of book preservation.

Wherever, at the dawn of civilization, books were made by pens, by stylii or by brushes, the necessity for binding the records was immediately obvious. In India books were made of writings lightly incised on both sides of palm leaves by bone or metal stylii, the incisions being filled with pigments. The palm leaves were cut to uniform size, and strung at both ends on cords thru holes punched in the leaves. This effective style of binding has been in use from time out of mind down to the present day. If a Hindu book collector was luxurious in his tastes, he placed his corded volumes in carved wooden, ivory or silver boxes to preserve them from attack by insects.

The Assyrians, in addition to the use of papyrus and palm leaves, also used clay on which to record legal documents and other records which they wished to make permanent. When a record on hardened clay was required to be conveyed from one place to another, the Assyrians put a cover on it. They took moist clay and rolled it to the required size and thinness, usually about 3/16 in. thick, and wrapped it around the baked clay record, incising a label and address on the thin cover, which, as it dried, effectively "bound" the record. Great numbers of documents thus protected have been unearthed. These are the oldest bindings in existence, and many of them have preserved their contents in perfect condition from four to five thousand years.

The first binding method used in Europe came to the Greeks and the Romans from Egypt with the papyrus plant. Egyptian books were written on rolls of papyrus. The rolls were usually from seven to nine inches wide, but sometimes as wide as sixteen inches, and of variable lengths. One roll measuring one hundred and forty feet is exhibited in Turin, and another in the British Museum is one hundred and thirty-three feet long. Binding these rolls was a simple matter. At the head of the roll a round piece of wood was attached, as on our wall maps. As the writing progressed, the papyrus was wound around the headpiece, called by the Latins an umbilicus. When the record was completed a foot piece was attached, called a cornus. To the latter was attached a parchment label containing the title of the book and the name of the author. This label and the inscriptions on Assyrian "pie-crust" covers were the earliest binder's labels. The roll, thus described, was called a volumen—hence our word volume. Collectors of wealth substituted carved wood and ivory and embossed silver or gold instead of the ordinary wooden umbilicus and cornua. The volumes were tied to prevent unrolling, and kept on shelves, if ordinary editions, or in a book box called a scrinium, if of more cherished editions. There was ample opportunity for the gratification of luxurious collectors in this method of binding.

Bindings for folded books were first used in China, many centuries earlier than in Europe, because the Chinese were the first to make books in folded form. They were the first to bind books in signatures and stitch the signatures thru the back, substantially as they and we do now. These books were bound by their purchasers in various ways—in wood covered with leather or silk; but popular editions were distributed stitched only, without covers.

The first reference to bookbinding in Europe is found in Homer's "Iliad" (the quotation is in Pope's translation):

"The dreadful token of his dire intent
He in his gilded tables wrote and sent."

These "gilded tables" were framed tablets of ivory, thin metal or thin wood, coated with wax on both sides, answering the purposes for many centuries of our school slates, which they resembled in appearance. Usually two of these tablets were hinged or corded together, and protected by a cover fastened on the backs of the tablets, but books of as many as five tablets have survived. One was found not so long ago in a gold mine in Rumania on which the writing, done in A. D., 169, is still legible. These tablets, when bound together, were called diptyches. They were a favorite form of present, and much wealth was expended on covers of carved woods and ivory or engraved or embossed silver and gold.

For ordinary use the binding was of wood, covered with tanned skins of various kinds. Thus, for centuries, during which literature was marketed on papyrus in rolls, there existed numerous craftsmen called compactores or librorum concinnatores, making and adorning diptyches; also, we may suppose, adorning the covers of papyrus volumes or rolls. Numerous references to these craftsmen are found in the Greco-Roman classics. In the time of Cicero, when yet the Christians were a despised sect, the rich collectors of rare books and diptyches emulated each other in heavy expenditures for luxurious bindings and covers. During the middle ages we find frequent references to presentations of richly bound copies of the Scriptures. Thus in A. D. 861 a Count of Fruili bequeathed to his children his Bible bound in wrought gold and divers precious stones." Bookbinders as craftsmen, as well as monks in monasteries, appear to have had ample employment during the Middle Ages.

When typography was invented, the first printed books were bound heavily in thick boards, covered with leathers of various kinds. reinforced with metal corners, closed with metal clasps, and frequently bearing chains, with which they were secured to shelves in churches or schools. With the multiplication of printed books, the bookbinding guilds flourished greatly. About half a century after the invention of printing, the reading public had increased so that there was a demand for cheaper books. Then, as now, the cost of binding was a chief item of expense in book production. To meet the demand for cheaper editions, the best the printers of that time could do was to bind in limp vellum. If the books were large, as most of them were, ties were attached to the vellum covers, for if the books were not tied when not in use the covers would curl uncomfortably. When Morris brought out his Kelmscott editions in mediaeval style in 1890, he used these limp vellum covers, with ties with handsome effect. The first printer who issued small-sized popular editions was Aldus Manutius of Venice. His duodecimos of 1499 were bound in vellum, with a stiffener of binder boards, by which he evaded the use of ties.

It is a surprising fact that for at least three centuries before the invention of printing, stamped leather bindings were being made in Europe, many of them highly elaborate in design. This was, of course, a method of printing, and required, as well, great skill in metal engraving, and the use of a press for embossing the leather. Bookbinding had, in fact, reached perfection as an art and craft long before printing had been invented in Europe. The earliest picture of a bookbinder is that engraved by Jost Amman and printed in Frankfort-on-Main in 1568. In this picture, all the appliances used by the fine binder of our time are clearly drawn. All that has been added since is for the benefit of edition binders—the power cutters, stitching and sewing machines, etc. And doubtless the limners and those who were wont to bind and sell books in London were using the same appliances that Amman depicts when, in 1403, they petitioned the mayor and aldermen to be incorporated as a guild. It is not much more than half a century since the first power paper cutter was introduced. Its first name was guillotine, after Dr. Guillotine, who invented the machine for cutting off aristocratic heads during the French revolution, and thus gave a manufacturer the idea of adapting it to cutting paper.

The period in which limp vellum covers were used for popular editions was followed by one in which a much cheaper form was used —binder's boards, covered with strong paper. The binder's board period was ended by the advent of cloth bindings as related above. Binder's cloths have aided in making books more popular and in spreading education. A book in limp vellum is a luxury today. A book bound in boards is impermanent, and requires rebinding, if it is worth preserving. The Interlaken Mills, and others who are specializing with such admirable results in the manufacture of book cloths, have enabled the publishers to offer to the public bindings of durability and attractiveness at low cost. These cloths are attractive in themselves, with an endless range of colors and textures, and if it is desired to embellish them there is no reason why cloth bindings should not be made highly artistic. This lies entirely with the artists who design the ornaments and the lettering—the cloths offer them an entirely satisfactory medium upon which to work.

The earlier book cloths were confined to solid colors in which the fabric was entirely covered with starches, gums, coloring matter, etc., which made it possible with the smooth, colored surface to emboss, with engraved rollers, patterns which somewhat resembled leather and gradually other patterns were developed, giving character to the material which provided the artisan a better field to work upon when designing covers. These cloths, with their solid, rich coloring in any shade known to the aniline dye manufacturers, are still the finest of all grades of book cloth.

As the public became familiar with the book cloth bindings for the better class of books, a demand sprung up for a cheaper material for more general use, so a lighter cotton fabric was used, filled with starchy materials with a smaller amount of dye, and while the fabric is completely filled to prevent the glue in the binding process coming thru, a surplus of material is scraped off the face so the threads in the foundation cloth can be seen.

The names used to describe different varieties of quality in the texture and finish of binding cloths are usually the manufacturer's names and not general terms, names such as "linens," "vellums," etc. An exception perhaps is the word buckram, which is used by all makers to describe a heavy fibred cloth of very strong texture.

Cloth bindings became recognized as not only a permanent method of preserving a volume, but of attracting purchasers of books, and with cheaper book cloth the paper covered novel became rarely seen on newsstands. It is now the attractively made books in all the many colors which greet the eye when looking for a book to while away the time on a long railroad journey.

A further displacement of paper covers has developed among firms who issue catalogs, and who now recognize the value of getting out their volumes in cloth binding. The psychological effect on those receiving them is of great selling value, inasmuch as the potential buyer is immediately attracted to a catalog which has the same appearance as the books which he has learned to recognize as valuable from early educational experience. Catalogs of this character have another practical advantage—they will stand up in a book case convenient for ready reference.

About seventeen years ago one of the largest publishers of law books conceived the idea that law books bound in cloth would be more serviceable than in the customary sheep skin, if a stronger book cloth could be produced than had previously been made and one whose color and general appearance would not be too revolutionary. Taking the matter up with Interlaken Mills, a fabric was produced by them that immediately met favor with the lawyers and today it is noticed all law libraries have only the very old books in sheep skin, and those are rapidly being rebound in this durable buckram.

The care that has to be taken in the manufacture of book cloth so that it will meet the requirements of the book binder who takes pride in his productions, is probably greater than the average person can imagine. Not only must each lot of goods be of the same shade so that sets of books can be made up in the same color, but the combination of a great many different materials has to be exact or trouble develops in the bindery, such as the glue coming thru to the face, cracks in the bends, and filling coming out, the cloth itself being too stiff or too pliable, and it must take stamping well with either ink or gold leaf. The material goes to the bindery in rolls of about 40 feet in length and a uniform width of 38 inches. On special order widths of 39 or 40 inches are made, but the general deliveries are from the standard width, which the binderies know just how to handle to the greatest economy for each size book.

What Constitutes an Ideal Book Review?

THE literary editor of The Christian Register, conducting a department in that paper for the reviewing of books, was recently impressed by the never-ending flow of books which came flooding to his desk, and he grew curious as to what the publisher really hoped would be the fate of his volumes at the hands of reviewers. So he sent letters to a great many publishers, asking each one, "What, in your opinion, constitutes an ideal book review?" The July 13 issue of The Christian Register prints a number of these replies, extracts from which are reprinted below:

Franklin Spier, of Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., says:

"An ideal book review

(a) Tells what the book is about;

(b) Gives an estimate of its value and the proficiency of its execution; and

(c) Stimulates discussion."

David T. Pottinger, of Harvard University Press, says:

"Book reviews help the publisher to maintain his saving sense of humor by letting him see his work from an objective standpoint, that is, from its effect upon other people. The ideal book review is therefore one that not only indicates the general contents of a book but suggests its relation to other books in the same or related fields. It is not merely an 'appreciation' or a summary of contents, nor is it the formal piece of criticism made familiar to us by the great critical reviews of a hundred years ago. Such reviews help the publisher and even more they help the reading public, because they form a guide to a much larger field of literature than any one man could attempt in the course of the ordinary day's work to view."

Richard Badger says:

"It has been our experience that book reviews are the best possible means of advertising, since the reading public is justified in placing more confidence in what the book reviewer says rather than what is stated in a paid advertisement.

"The ideal book review, to my mind, is the one which first of all briefly summarizes the book and then gives a candid opinion of the value of it."

Dodd, Mead & Company, Inc., says:

"In our opinion, an ideal book review is one in which the author gives his candid opinion of the book, objecting to it if he thinks proper, or praising it if it meets with his approval. The least desirable book review is one that 'damns with faint praise.'"

Wm. J. Colby, of Association Press, New York, says:

"Two qualifications go toward the making of an ideal book review. First, it is incumbent upon the reviewer to give only a first-hand write-up, not a copy of the description on the jacket. Second, an unbiased and impartial review is what readers continually look for, but seldom receive."

Lee D. Brown, Editor, Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, says:

"What makes an ideal book review? That review which bears in mind the fact that it is being written for a certain large body of readers and is intended to convey to them actual news concerning an investment (in time and money) for which they are likely prospects, else they probably would not be reading the book review section. This enlarges the significance of a review to the lover of the rest of the pages in a magazine or newspaper."

B. W. Huebsch:

"If there be an ideal book review, it is the rounded expression of a mind that understands the author's aim and purpose and that perceives his errors without losing sympathy for his aspirations; a mind aware of the extent of readers' ability to receive impressions, and that can deliver its opinion attractively. In other words, the ideal book review should be a sympathetic assessment, interesting in itself, just to author and reader, yet finely revealing the critic's own personality."

Barry Benefield, of The Century Company, says:

"Our idea is that to a people interested in the things of life above the ground, even if ever so slightly above, the publication of a book is a news event—a tremendous news event if the book is tremendous, a paltry news event if the book is paltry. Most publishers believe that all of their books are above the paltry and they hope that some of them are tremendous. They send out review copies to the periodical press in the hope that competent reviewers will discover the real news events among books and tell readers about them, and that as many as possible of those who read the reviews will buy the books, so that worthwhile authors may continue writing, and their publishers may continue publishing.

"The only book review worth writing or printing is one that is first of all interesting, for if it has little interest it will have almost no readers. There are so many interesting things to read that a dull thing is not in the race at all. If a review is intrinsically interesting, it is the more nearly ideal the more accurately it conveys the content and manner of the book reviewed."

A. M. Jones, of the Marshall Jones Company, says:

"The review that enables the reader to gain a fairly comprehensive idea of what the author is attempting to do, and his measure of success in accomplishing it, is helpful. First of all, the review should be sympathetic, then friendly critical of faults and omissions."

A. Page Cooper, of Doubleday, Page & Company, says:

"In answer to your questions regarding our purpose in sending out books for review, I would say that during the last few years the public press has come to realize that the publication of a book is news—just as legitimate news as a murder or a suicide, the importance of the news, of course, being in proportion to the importance of the book. Papers, large and small, all over the country are devoting more and more space to book news and reviews. Our purpose, therefore, in sending review copies of books to the newspapers is to furnish them with the data for making intelligent reports. Our second purpose in sending out books for review, both to the newspapers and the magazines, especially those of importance who engage critics of established reputation, is to make the quality of the books known to as great a reading public as possible thru the medium of the critics' published opinions. An ideal book review depends so largely upon the type of book that a general statement is difficult. An ideal fiction review seems to us to be one which gives the personal reaction of the critic and also something of the flavor and character of the book without re-hashing the plot."

B. W. Smith, of the Atlantic Monthly Press, says:

"We consider book reviews of the greatest importance in assisting the work of publicity,—in fact, of greater advertising value than any space the publisher himself may use to 'praise his wares.' The reader naturally takes it for granted that the publisher has first belief in the worth of everything he publishes. It remains for the book reviewer to approve or censure this judgment. Thus the first, and often the final, public judgment rests with the book reviewer.

"My ideal review clearly states the essential characteristics of a book. The purpose for which it was written, its peculiar literary quality, for whom it will have a special appeal,—all these facts the ideal book review sets forth in such a way that a busy person need not take the time to personally examine the book in order to decide whether it is a volume he will wish to read and own."

Maud B. Chandler, of the Woman's Press, New York, says:

"An ideal book review, of course, is a book review which makes the reader want to go out immediately and purchase the book. A book review is not, to my way of thinking, a literary criticism, because literary criticism involves comparison with other books. I think I am inclined to agree with William Lyon Phelps that only the books which are worthy of being brought to the attention of the readers of the magazine should be reviewed. Technically speaking, a review should contain not a complete outline of the contents of the book, but a description of those points in the book which make it interesting and profitable,—in the case of fiction, a new variety of plot or a new way of making it interesting; in the case of non-fiction, a new treatment of a subject or a new subject."

Edmund R. Brown, President, the Four Seas Company, says:

"If book selling were not in its present deplorable state, our sole object in sending out books for review would be to secure for the authors, and for ourselves as publishers, a valuable mass of critical opinion. Under present conditions, this object is strongly permeated with a commercial hope of bringing the books to the attention of readers who might otherwise never know of their existence. An ideal book review, in my opinion, is one in which the critic considers the book honestly, intelligently, and interestingly. If he honestly weighs each book by a critical standard of comparison with the best books of the past, and therefore finds the great majority of current publications of light weight, he will in the long run serve authors and publishers as faithfully as he serves literature and life. But he ought to do this impartially always—whether he is a scholarly analyst like Mr. George Brandes, or a boob-bumper like Mr. Mencken. These two men are good examples—because both are opinionated, or often mistaken, but both are honest, intelligent, and always interesting."

S. L. Trotter, of J. B. Lippincott Company, says:

"The principal purpose of sending out books for review is to bring them before the public in such a way as cannot be done in any other manner. In other words, to let them stand the fair test of the reviewer's opinion in order that those interested may obtain an unbiased description.

"To many book reviewers and critics the work entailed in the creation of a book-page or literary-section may be regarded from their own viewpoint as forming one of the most enjoyable of indoor occupations. Their place in the world of letters is distinctive and their service to the world's readers indisputable. New writers from the four corners of the earth, from Australia, from India, from across the Atlantic, and from every State in our own Union, look to them as mediums thru which they may at least hope to attain the fulfillment of their most dearly cherished desires, and thru which their efforts may be presented to the reading public.

"The ideal book review is one which covers the book from every angle, is not too long yet gives the reader a thoroly clear idea of just what the book is about, at the same time rendering an unbiased judgment upon its faults or merits."

V. M. Schenck, of the Pilgrim Press, says:

"An ideal book review is one written by an editor who is conscious of his responsibility, not alone to his constituents but also to the publisher who has submitted the book to his judgment. Such an editor will prove himself a careful and thoro reader, sufficiently enthusiastic to laud that which is worthy of praise, and sufficiently courageous to criticise with severity when such criticism is called for. The review editor who is careless in his workmanship is unworthy of his place, and unfair alike to his paper, his constituency, the author, and the publisher."

Thomas Seltzer:

"In my opinion the best review is one which conveys clearly the feelings the reviewer has experienced in reading the book. I have in mind chiefly fiction, poetry, and works of pure literature. Let the reviewer give his instinctive, unsophisticated reactions, and perhaps a brief paragraph or two explaining the reasons for his reactions. Don't let him attempt close analysis or comparative treatment. This is the part of the critic who has more space at his disposal than the reviewer and more time for thought and study. All the reviewer can do with his limited time and space is to guide us to good books and warn us against books that are not good. And by letting us know how he felt about a book we can judge if we want to experience the same feelings. If the reviewer has good taste, good judgment and adequate power of expression—a big 'if,' I admit—then he will lead us right and will produce the ideal review.

"Above all, the reviewer should avoid smartness. The author has taken a year or two to write his book, the publisher has gone to great expense in publishing it. If the reviewer cannot praise he at least can avoid adding the sting of satire or frivolity to his condemnation. And leave the publisher and his jacket alone if it does not meet with your approval. He has only tried in a weak way to express his feelings about the book, knowing that you, Mr. Reviewer, can do it much better, and hoping that you will. On the other hand, if you have something good to say about the publisher, by all means say it. It warms the cockles of his heart and is sometimes his only reward for publishing a book which his practical judgment told him not to but which he liked so much he could not part with it."

John W. Hill, of Fleming H. Revell Company:

"The proper way of reviewing a book is for it to be read by some one who is an authority on the subject covered, and for him in turn to give an intelligent synopsis of the book, so that the reader can tell at once if the bock is one which he cares to own. Publishers send books to get an unbiased opinion of these trained reviewers, and in turn advertise what these reviewers think. Among the religious press, those papers who pay close attention to the reviewing of books seem more prosperous than the papers who neglect this field.

"It would help the publisher a great deal if the readers who are benefited by the review in their paper, would take time to write and express their opinion of the good that is being done by the Review Department. This would encourage the publisher to go ahead and extend his Review Department."

Harcourt, Brace & Company:

"The ideal book review is one which shows clearly that the writer of the review has read the book all thru, knows the subject with which the book deals, and has been interested in the book. This review may not be entirely favorable, but when it is written in this way it carries a sense of conviction and stimulates a certain amount of interest in the person who reads it."

Alice Sawyer, of E. P. Dutton & Co.:

"Undoubtedly publishers have found book reviews valuable because most readers look there for impartial opinion as to the best books of the sort they are seeking. The book review therefore has a function which advertising cannot fill.

"An ideal book review, we should say, is one that gives an accurate picture of the book and in judging it takes mainly into account the purpose of the author and the usefulness of the book. A reviewer for a magazine covering a special field can be of the greatest service to both publishers and readers thru keeping his readers in touch with the best books written in their special field so that they will hear of anything of interest and value to them and get exactly what suits their needs."

R. N. Linscott, of Houghton Mifflin Company:

"We send out review copies in order to disseminate a knowledge and aid in the appraisal of new publications, stimulate interest in reading and thereby sell more books.

"My own conception of a good review is one in which the reviewer conceives the publication of the book before him as a news item of interest to a certain number of his readers, and presents it to these readers in such a way as to permit them to decide whether or not they will want to read it. As a corollary to this, I believe in the frankest possible expression of opinion by the reviewer, as a book page has, of course, no value to the reader, the magazine, or the publisher unless it is read, and to insure that it should be read, it is essential to have a lively and provocative handling of the reviews.

"American reviewing as a whole is both capable and honest. Its failings are due primarily to two classes of reviewers, the lazy who content themselves with re-writing the publisher's own descriptions, and the overconscientious who dissipate space and energy by attempting to praise every book instead of concentrating on those of outstanding interest."

Grant Overton, of George H. Doran Company:

"The ideal book review is written by the person who, whether he is particularly interested in the subject of a particular book or not, understands what the author tried to do and tells how far he succeeded in doing it. The ideal book review is so written that the ordinary person, after reading it, knows whether or not he wants to read this book. A book review should be, above all, informative. If, in addition, it is appreciative, that is very pleasant; but enthusiasm without facts is, in my opinion, not good."

Thomas V. Donaldson of Yale University Press:

"We feel that a good review does more to start people talking about the book than almost any other form of publicity. And when people talk about a book, they buy it. When they buy it, the publisher advertises to stimulate the buying impulse. But the first step is to get the people talking and if anything outside the book itself can do that, it is the review.

"An ideal book review is hard to define except in negatives. It should not be a clever bit of writing with the book as a distant background or a peg on which the critic hangs his varied thoughts. The book's 'the thing'—not the review."

Rosa E. Hutchinson, of Macmillan Company:

"One of our chief aims as publishers being to encourage the reading of good books, we are surprised when a testy scientist accuses us of wishing to sell books rather than to promote knowledge. We do not find the two aims mutually exclusive, and we appreciate having our books reviewed by editors who share our ambition to have people know of the new books that are worthy of their time and attention.

In our judgment an ideal book review gives some idea of the ground covered by the book (not, however, giving away the entire plot, if the book is a novel) and an estimate of the way the material is handled and of the author's style. The criticism should be based on some acknowledged standard rather than on private likes or dislikes, and should take into account what the author is attempting to do as well as his actual accomplishment. It should be sincere and should be prompted by a sense of responsibility and fairness to both author and public.

It adds to the interest and value of a review if the critic relates the special volume under discussion to other work of the same author, or work in a similar field by other authors."

Children's Summer Reading

THE New York Sun has been carrying on Fridays during the summer an interesting series of illustrated articles by Annie Carroll Moore, director of children's work of the New York Public Library, and Miss Moore has supplemented interesting talk about children's reading and children's reading interest with definite suggestions of worth-while books, and the series has been admirably illustrated with pictures from the books and given prominent display featuring.

AT LEAST two firms of publishers in this country, says the London Book Post, are issuing novels with wood-cut jacket designs. These designs in plain black and white, or in black and one other color, show up exceedingly well amongst the rather "pretty-pretty" designs to which the public have become accustomed.

The Foundation Books for a School Library

THE list for an ideal library for a one-room schoolhouse has attracted so much interest and comment and furnishes such an interesting bookshelf for promotion purposes that there have been many demands for copies of the list since it was printed in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of July 22nd. We are reprinting the titles in this number arranging them this time not in the order from one to twenty-five as they were voted on, but re-arranging them according to the age of the child readers, which is probably the form in which they will be most easily promoted. In arranging them in this way the reading ages marked against the titles in the American Library Association's "Graded List of Books for Children" have been used, varying from "Mother Goose," recommended for the first and second grades, to books suitable for the seventh to ninth grades. More than half of the books are standards which are made by various publishers and of which there are numerous good editions in the market. Already several bookstores have put up bookshelves showing this grouping, and the chances of getting attention to it by window displays, by circulation of the list, etc. are very great. The booksellers by filling out the list with editions they are carrying can reckon the total cost of the set and canvass thruout their districts for sales. The American Library Association is reprinting the list in a 4-page leaflet, which will be sold at a moderate price. There has never been a better chance to dramatize the latent interest in the problem of children's reading, and it has already been shown that the public is greatly interested.

Good Book-making

THOSE most interested in types and their most perfect use will have been in Boston during the past week to see the extensive display at Mechanics Hall connected with the Graphic Arts Exhibit. Perhaps those in the book field will have some regrets that the greatest attention in the use of types is not so much connected with books as with advertising and publicity. The master printers turn back to the books of early centuries for their models, but the greatest demand for their ability and skill is in connection with other things, tho books, too, are making steady progress.

The Craftsmen Number (August 20) of the American Printer is worth careful examination and preservation by those who want to see what American printers can do. There are a score of pages contributed by American master printers, showing a great variety of types in their most careful possible use One of the most beautiful pages is contributed by the Proctor & Collier Press of Cincinnati, Ohio, a reprint of "A Note by William Morris on His Aims in Founding the Kelmscott Press," set in Collier old style, a new type specially designed for the Press by Frederic W. Goudy. There is also a beautiful page with colored initial done by Edwin and Robert Grabhorn of San Francisco and a selection from Emerson set by the Marchbanks Press, and many others. To this special number Frederic W. Goudy, greatest of contemporary type designers, has contributed an essay on "Design and Beauty in Printing," which deserves careful reading by every lover of typography. From this we quote:

"Printing, per se is not an art: it is now, as it was in the first century of its invention, merely a method more economical and more expeditious than that employed by the scribes, for the diffusion of knowledge; it is a craft that widens and deepens the very foundations of literature and makes secure the world's inheritance of the knowledge of classic Greece and Rome. When, however, printing utilizes the beauty of the means itself to the end of communicating a fine or beautiful thought; when the words of the great writer are so richly clothed that the raiment becomes both an interpretation and a tribute to their worth; when on the typography we may dwell with pleasure for its artistic beauty, printing becomes more than a mere craft.

"Similarly in the printed page, beauty is the sum of refinements, proportion, arrangement of line and decoration, fine types, adequate presswork and careful composition etc., combined into one whole that delights and makes visible man's admiration of the thought the print conveys. When the beauty of the thought can be reflected or transferred to the typographical expression, the thought takes on new beauty thereby; but when the typography arouses interest and pleasure for itself alone, at the expense of the author's thought, it becomes a typographical impertinence.

There can be no physical resemblance between typography and the author's thought, but just as with words and music, so the typography and matter may be brought into concord. The impression made by the typography would then resemble in kind that made by the matter, and the two impressions, being similar, mingle in one complex emotion of pleasure."

It is interesting to note, as the fall season has developed that many publishers have been using the effect of fine typography in their announcement catalogs as well as in their books, and it would seem as tho money spent in that direction would be money well spent. Among the catalogs that might be selected for notice are the fall announcements of Henry Holt & Company, Harcourt, Brace & Company, A. A. Knopf, Inc., and Little, Brown & Company.

The fall season always brings to hand many of the most beautiful children's books and altho the larger part of these have not yet come to hand by September 1st, some are already on the bookseller's counters. The type page and general planning of the new edition of "Little Women" from Little, Brown & Company, deserve great praise, and as this careful typography and illustration are connected with a popular priced edition, the effect is doubly valuable. The beautiful Bible illustrations by W. L. Taylor and others that have appeared from time to time in the Ladies' Home Journal have been used in connection with a new "Children's Bible," which Charles Scribner's Sons have added to their well-known series of illustrated color books. The cover illustration from the twenty-third Psalm is especially effective. Among other color books Lamb's "Tales from Shakespeare," which David McKay & Company are publishing, is strikingly beautiful, especially the decorative title page by Jessie Willcox Smith has planned to go with the other full page drawings by her.

A pleasing octavo is the Atlantic Monthly Press's publication called "The Ladies!" by Barrington. The title page is admirably balanced, and the photogravure frontispiece suitable. The use of the banded design on the back of the cloth cover is especially effective.

As would have been expected, Mr. Knopf has taken special pains with his leading book for the fall, "One of Ours," by Willa Cather. The type page is of the best, and the careful presswork, which is credited to The Plimpton Press, gives clear value to every letter. The first printing was limited to 310 copies on Italian paper, so that the first edition in ordinary novel form is marked definitely "The Second Printing." This great restriction in the number of books that can be called first edition will be probably regretted by future collectors.

Another volume in The Amherst Books, published by Marshall Jones Company, is the book entitled "Germany in Travail," continuing the admirable make-up and presswork of this series.

A book from Macmillan with attractive type page and which is credited to the Condé Nast Press is "Through the Shadows" by Cyril Allington similar in format to "Maria Chapdelaine" and most attractive in binding as well as contents.

Mencken in England

ANOTHER stimulus to the general discussion on the need of censorship comes from a cabled interview from London, where Henry L. Mencken has been visiting. Mr. Sumner, judging from the quotation, has unexpected corroboration for his views on the conditions in this country:

"More obscene books are appearing in America than in any other country. New York is besotted with alcohol. Drinking among women has become a nuisance for the first time in our history. The sense of law is disappearing from American life. Social classes are being formed and the democratic challenge has become feeble."

Mr. Mencken is quoted further:

"America is rotten with money. Our net profits from the war are greater than the English public debt. America is drunk with the sense of the power of money. The commonest workman lives on a scale beyond the normal imagination. Strikers ride around in automobiles. You can't tell which are the strikers' wives and which are Follies girls. There are even wealthy college professors. And still the United States of America is only half civilized."

"Why Not Books?"

THE immediately favorable comment on the new fall poster of the Year Round Bookselling Campaign has emphasized the need of the fullest possible cooperation to put this completely before the public in every possible manner. Many different plans for doing this are suggested.

The committee is supplying to publishers photographs of the poster so that they can reproduce it in cuts of various sizes for their promotion matter, catalogs and advertisements. The slogan has also been hand-lettered within an attractive circle in the same form as the summer slogan of "Take Along a Book," and this is being supplied in small form to publishers to use in advertisements.

A good suggestion that has been made is that this poster, reproduced in column width, would be an admirable vehicle for a group of booksellers to use cooperatively for retail advertising. The slogan, "Why Not Books?" followed by the name of the booksellers and repeated day after day, would make good fall or Christmas book promotion. Some enterprising bookseller ought to arrange for the billboard use of this design. With the bold colors that have been used, it would make a striking billboard advertisement, and has just the right motive to stimulate business.

Still another good use that has been suggested is the use of the post-card reproduction to send to customers as a follow-up suggestion after the sending out of the general catalog. It can be easily imagined that, after sending a good Christmas catalog to a group of customers the last of November, an attractive card saying "Why Not Books?" coming in the mail about the first week in December would be a very pertinent reminder that books have an important place on every Christmas shopping list.

New York Shipping Settlement

IF the work of the merchants of New York has its full effect from the recent conferences with the leaders of the Longshoremen's and Truckmen's Unions, there ought to be much better conditions for both shipping and receiving in the future, and strikes, which have in the past so seriously tied up transportation, avoided. Under the new agreement between the groups representing unions and merchants, all shippers and consignees in the Port of New York or Jersey shore will from now on be free to load or unload their own freight if they so desire without hindrance from loaders or longshoremen. They shall not, however, undertake to load part by themselves and leave the balance for the loaders except on due acceptance of such a plan by the latter. The shippers or consignees may change their present plan of handling at any warehouse or dock but must state their intention of doing so permanently. The loaders undertake to furnish impartial service to all, and, if they fall short of the needs, the shippers and consignees shall not be discriminated against for having furnished their own service. Any differences that arise will be settled by a committee that has been appointed.

Rates from platforms of warehouses are to be 1½ cents per 100 pounds, from sidewalks, piers, docks, 2½ cents per 100 pounds. This goes into effect for 90 days and becomes permanent thereafter unless either party by 30 days' notice asks for a revision. Steamship companies have agreed to see that these points are enforced on their premises.

British Bookselling Lull

"PRINTERS report great activity in book production despite the high prices that still obtain," says the London Book-Post, "and, of course, in these circumstances paper makers give us the same news. From various publishers, however, we have been hearing of an exceptionally poor spring season and a deplorable June and July. 'In thirty years' experience,' writes a representative of one of the oldest publishing houses, 'I do not remember such a lean summer.' Generally in similar circumstances there is a strike on or a general election, or a war, but just now no one can put his finger on the malign cause.

We incline to attribute the dullness of the book-trade to general economic causes which were bound to follow an event such as the great war. Various circumstances prevented us from feeling the pinch in the first two years of peace, when in fact there was an appearance of prosperity. But since then, altho outwardly life has become almost normal, the economic pressure has become greater on the ordinary citizen who forms the bookseller's standby. The income tax mulcts him of say a fourth of his income, the value of which has greatly lessened with the increased cost of living. Some economy must be effected. To the majority the luxury of books can be most easily dispensed with.

True there are happenings even in the book world which seem to disprove this. There is, for example, the phenomenon of the 'best seller.' Nothing can hinder the progress of this periodical and baffling visitor.

Australasian Book-Trade Prospects

OUR latest reports from special correspondents in three provinces of Australasia, speak in hopeful terms of what we used to, and probably for years will, call "Colonial" trade, says the London Book Post. There are distinct signs of book-trade revival, and we believe that publishers who deal in the class of books that Australasians like, will find very shortly a good demand. In this connection publishers should note that there can be no big sale of fiction in the Dominions "unless the price is right." For example, a novel reduced from 7s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. will have no demand for the simple reason that it is sold in Australasia at the same price as the first Colonial edition. For good novels at 2s. 6d. and 2s. there is once more a big market.

It is a mistake, however, to think that the literary taste of Australasia is confined to novels. Books of essays, and especially essays dealing with outdoor life, simply and sincerely written, command a steady sale all over the dominions. The best scientific, historical and sociological books are only restricted in sale because English publishers rarely think it worth while to prepare cheap colonial editions.

As for India, our correspondent in Calcutta reports that the supply of English books—all sorts—does not in his view nearly meet the new demand that is springing up. There is, for example, a considerable demand for English and American fiction, which seems to be quite a new feature. We are told at the same time that the demand for English educational books has greatly increased and is not adequately met.

Our correspondent is inclined to think that the unrest in India has no foundation in hatred of England, but is only the violent expression of the desire of Indians to be treated according to the standards they have learned in the educational institutions in India from English teachers. He expects the outcome will be that the demand for English books will be greater than ever.

Selling Books in Groups

IN the selling of children's books, many dealers have often felt it good business policy to carry box sets of three to a dozen volumes, as many purchasers often feel inclined to buy in units larger than the single book and can be easily persuaded to make the larger expenditure. It would seem as tho this idea might be developed further to cover other books than those in a definite series or uniform style, and that libraries of from ten to twenty volumes for children of different ages might be advertised on booksellers' lists or by grouping on the display tables. Such promotion would also emphasize the library idea for children and put into parents' minds the thought that the children should naturally be developing well-rounded collections of books rather than be supplied hit or miss at birthdays and Christmas. The successful working out of this idea will supply a nice problem for the booksellers with imagination.

They Would Steal to Get Them

THE current report from the Grand Rapids Public Library has some interesting data about its rental collection, and its experience may throw light on the problems of other rental libraries. Unlike the commercial circulating library, the public library does not take a deposit from a subscriber and therefore runs the risk of having the books disappear. The losses from its rental collection were much higher than any other class of books in the library, and the librarian "wonders whether the reading of certain classes of modern fiction produces an extra moral hazard. To be able to apprehend persons responsible for improperly taking rental books would afford an opportunity for a most interesting and valuable study in psychology and morals."

During the year:

11	volumes of	B. M. Bower were stolen (three of "The Skyrider").
6	"	by E. Phillips Oppenheim.
6	"	by John Fox.
5	"	by James Oliver Curwood.
5	"	by Zane Grey.
5	"	by Arthur S. Ward.
3	"	by Isabel E. Ostrander.
3	"	by William MacLeod Raine.
3	"	by C. N. and A. M. Williamson.

The librarian also lists authors who were represented in the collection by equally large numbers of books and with not a single copy stolen:

Dorothy Canfield's "Brimming Cup."
A. S. M. Hutchinson's "If Winter Comes."
Sinclair Lewis's "Main Street."
Booth Tarkington's "Alice Adams."
Joseph C. Lincoln's "Galusha, the Magnificent."
Mary Roberts Rinehart's "The Amazing Interlude."

It would seem that the western novels of adventure had the greatest lure for the thief, and it may prove that, in spite of all the kind things that have been said about the old dime novel (during its day in the sun as a consequence of the New York Public Library's special exhibit) that there is something demoralizing about the story of wild adventure.

Obituary Notes

W. H. HUDSON

W. H. Hudson, one of England's men of letters, died in his home in London August 18th. Mr. Hudson was also famous as a naturalist; indeed many of his best known books are largely descriptive of out of doors, of bird life, etc. "Far Away and Long Ago," one of his best known books, describes his boyhood in South America. When Mr. Hudson came to England he contributed to magazines while he studied nature in England. His first book was "The Purple Land Which England Lost." It was published in 1885 and was about Uruguay and its brief conquest by British troops. This book established Hudson's reputation as an author. His best known works include "Argentine Ornithology," 1888-89; "The Naturalist in La Plata," 1892; "Birds in a Village," 1893; "Idle Days in Patagonia," 1893; "British Birds," 1895; "Birds in London," 1899; "Nature in Downland," 1900; "Birds and Man," 1901; "El Ombu," 1902; "Hampshire Days," 1903; "Green Mansions," 1904; "A Little Boy Lost," 1905; "A Crystal Age," 1906; "The Lands End," 1908; "Afoot in England," 1909; "A Shepherd's Life," 1910; "Adventures Among Birds," 1913; "Far Away and Long Ago," and "History of my early Life," 1918; "Birds in Town and Village," 1919; "The Book of a Naturalist," 1919; "Dead Man's Plack," and "An Old Thorn," 1920; "A Traveler in Little Things," 1921.

The Weekly Record of New Publications

THIS list aims to be a complete and accurate record of American book publications. Pamphlets will be included only if of special value. Publishers should send copies of all books promptly for annotation and entry, and the receipt of advance copies insures record simultaneous with publication. The annotations are descriptive, not critical; intended to place not to judge the books. Pamphlet material and books of lesser trade interest are listed in smaller type.

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent for record. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. When not specified the binding is cloth.

Imprint date is stated [or best available date, preferably copyright date, in bracket] only when it differs from year of entry. Copyright date is stated only when it differs from imprint date: otherwise simply "c." No ascertainable date is designated thus: [n. d.]

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tf. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ff. (48mo: 10cm.); sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow.

Titles beginning with an unimportant word are inverted to be listed under their subject when possible.

Rare Books, Autographs and Prints

A. EDWARD NEWTON'S last volume, "A Magnificent Farce," is nearing the end of its third edition.

It will be late in October before book sales get in full swing at Anderson's and the American Art Galleries.

The newly discovered manuscript of Jane Austen's consisting of two short novels will be published in this country by Frederick A. Stokes Company on the fifteenth of this month.

William Jaggard, of Stratford-on-Avon, claims the honor of the publication of the first English encyclopedia for his ancestor's work entitled "The Treasurie of the Ancient and Modern Times" published in two folio volumes in 1613-19.

The Bookman's Journal announces an edition de luxe of John Drinkwater's "Preludes" printed on hand-made paper and bound in full vellum, limited to 125 copies, each signed and numbered by the author, only 100 of which will be for sale.

Thomas B. Mosher, of Portland, Maine, has issued his new annual catalog. In addition to the careful description of new books and books in stock, it contains a series of selections from privately printed sources of great poetic beauty and, as Mr. Mosher says, "is well worth keeping for itself alone."

The Manchester Guardian tells the story of how the poet Tennyson nearly lost the manuscript of "In Memoriam." He had been staying for a few weeks in lodgings in Camden Town and left the manuscript in a cupboard where the landlady kept her provisions. Coventry Patmore was sent in haste to recover it but he was positively assured that such a book had not been left in the cupboard. Patmore insisted on making the search and found the manuscript precisely where Tennyson said he had laid it.

The Bookman's Journal for August contains a list of English authors whose first editions were advertised for during the four weeks ending July 22, compiled from English trade papers. It includes fifty-one authors, represented by ten or more want advertisements, who were as follows:

W. H. Hudson	69
George Moore	40
John Masefield	37
Arhur Machen	30
Max Beerbohm	29
Walter de la Mare	26
John Drinkwater	26
John Galsworthy	25
D. H. Lawrence	24
Samuel Butler	22
Oscar Wilde	20
James Joyce	20
J. M. Barrie	19
Thomas Hardy	18
George Gissing	17
Richard Le Gallienne	17
Joseph Conrad	16
Rudyard Kipling	15
Robert Louis Stevenson	15
George Bernard Shaw	14
Arnold Bennett	14
Edmund Blunden	14
Andrew Lang	12
William de Morgan	12
Arthur Symons	11
William B. Yeats	10
H. G. Wells	10

The record will be continued regularly in The Journal hereafter.

There has been much said and written, pro and con, about including Stevenson's early play "Monmouth" in the new Vailima edition of his works. The controversy gives special interest to an autograph letter written by Stevenson to his cousin, Robert Alan Mowbray Stevenson the painter and art critic, recently purchased at Christie's in London by Gabriel Wells of this city "I entirely agree with your stricture on the form of the play" says Stevenson to his cousin. "So I send you the program, the division and the first sketch for scene I of "Monmouth: A Tragedy." The plot was arranged and the programme written yesterday the scene was scribbled off in about an hour and a half this afternoon so you must excuse it Don't you think Henrietta will make a nice character? If you wish to change plot or anything vital, write at once; if you wish to shift anything, I'll take VII or VIII. I wish to have every word of it in blank verse, and indeed do not understand that part of your letter. Too much dramatic action for blank verse? Do you ever read the "words of nameless a fellow called Shakespeare"—to quote Nahum Tate in the preface to his King Lear? I find myself utterly unable to write dramatically: I go off into long soliloquies, descriptions of scenery emotions, etcetera. Is not the motto cute? . . . You see that I made a sort of beginning for II, which is simply sickening: only keep in the joke about the "little black box"—of course you twig the allusion. Do mind and make Lambourne and everybody moral—no Swinburneism. . . . If you manage to make any characters say aught witty, humorous or bright, for heaven's sake do so; I can't. . . . Make one of the conspirators tell how the crowd at Ringwood greeted him; one fellow cried, "He'll get the little black box now!" "twig the goak!"

The rummaging that is now going on among old libraries all over England for rarities of early English literature, stimulated by the recent high prices, is bringing to light many old books that has suffered from old age and bad treatment. Many of these old books are coming into the London binderies and the experts are busy cleaning, restoring and binding them. A correspondent of the London Mail writing of this work of restoration that is going on says: "The sixteenth century tome which has lain for years in a cellar, with torn pages, stained by damp and crumbling the mildew, will return from the 'hospital' without a trace of its former decrepitude, good for another 400 years of life The cleaning treatment consists in immersing the stained sheets in a bath of pomegranate of potash. This removes all of the stains, but turns the whole sheet brown, and it is followed by a bath of very weak sulphurous acid to restore whiteness. The leaves are then treated with size, which revitalizes them, and are finally toned down to match the color of the rest of the pages. Besides damp stains, some books—especially those printed during the nineteenth century, when there seems to have been something amiss with the composition of the paper—became pitted with masses of small brown spots known as 'foxing.' These, unless removed, spread rapidly and pass on the disease to other pages Mildew is the most deadly of book diseases, and, unless checked, it will eat its way from cover to cover and quickly cause the leaves to crumble away. If the pages of a book are torn, the edges frayed, or if mildew holes have appeared, a delicate operation must be performed and the missing, or diseased parts replaced by grafting on new paper. In such a case the first care of the surgeon is to see that the new paper matches the old, not only in texture and grain but also in the watermark. For this purpose he keeps filed under date, a collection of old paper which he has gradually accumulated, often by taking the fly leaves from old books which in themselves are of no value. Suppose the corner of a leaf is missing. The book surgeon cuts his paper to a size slightly larger than is required to replace the missing portion so that it will just overlap the frayed edge. Having pasted this in position, he scratches away with a sharp knife the overlapping strip on each side and teases the edges until the two papers are grafted together with no sign of a join. If the letter press or a design has been injured, this is then inserted by pen and ink from a perfect copy of the book, care being taken that the color of the ink exactly matches that of the original. The binding next receives attention. Corners are built up, new leather is grafted on, lettering or design renewed, and perhaps a new back is supplied. The object of the book surgeon is not to transform an old book into a new one, but simply to preserve it in its original form from further decay and so prolong its life."

A very good looking bit of Stevensoniana for collectors comes from the Mayflower Press, New Rochelle, N. Y. In excellent format is reprinted "Stevenson and Margarita, A Love Story" by Will H. Low, with a foreword by Arthur N. Hosking who also provides a frontispiece in a new etching of R. L. S. Of this portrait Mr. Low, himself an artist and a friend of Stevenson, says it is "an uncommonly good presentament of his eyes which were his most remarkable feature." The slender tome, limited to two hundred copies, including an extra proof of the portrait for framing, is offered at $10.

Lord Tennyson has presented the original manuscript of "Gareth and Lynette" to the Bodleian Library. This poem stands now as one of the first of the "Idylls of the King" altho it was one of the last to be given to the world. The first series was published as early as 1859, whereas "Gareth and Lynette" did not appear until 1872. The manuscript, which is in the poet's firm and beautiful hand, shows few corrections. It is written in one of the tall, narrow manuscript books which the poet liked and affected. Lord Tennyson has given this manuscript of his father to the Bodleian with the understanding that it shall not be used for the purpose of variorum readings, this being in accordance with the poet's wishes. The poet Tennyson's manuscripts are very rare in this country. The manuscript of "Maud", nearly complete, which was sold in the Gunther sale some years ago, is now in the important collection of Jerome Kern, of this city. Henry E. Huntington owns several of the manuscripts of the poems of the "Idylls of the King" which were acquired in the Bixby collection. William Harris Arnold also owns several manuscripts of shorter poems.

WHAT AMERICA'S GREAT NEWSPAPERS SAID O

THIS FREEDOM

Mr. Hutchinson Follows "If Winter Comes" with a Stronger Novel

This Freedom, by A. S. M. Hutchinson; Little, Brown & Co.

Today finds "This Freedom" in the windows and on the handiest counters of the book stores from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Its welcome, thanks to the great success of "If Winter Comes," is heartier and more general than any other novel has received in recent years.

Is all this warranted by the novel itself, or is it the echo of Mr. Hutchinson's triumph with his earlier novel and the result of organized publicity? We believe it is well warranted, and that "This Freedom," standing on its own feet, deserves to be rated as the novel of the year. Had Mr Hutchinson never before been heard of he could not have escaped fame with this book in the hands of the public Many novelists can write a good first novel, few indeed can write a novel that has the high qualities of "If Winter Comes," and fewer could follow it with one that has the tremendous power of "This Freedom."

John Clair Minot in The Boston Herald

MR. HUTCHINSON'S newest book is announced as being more important than "If Winter Comes." I fancy it is.

It is a problem novel, and the problem is one much argued today As the jacket puts it, "Can a married woman have a business career and still do her duty by her husband and children?" Much more "important," as you see, than any problem suggested by his novel of a year ago. It has the great merit of staging a situation that we all know to be vital. He has done a great service in utilizing his immense popularity to stimulate reflection on an important subject. Agreeing with him or not agreeing with him is quite beside the point. The book is more significant than "If Winter Comes."

Katharine Fullerton Gerould in The New York Times.

THIS FREEDOM. By A. S. M. Hutchinson. (Boston. Little, Brown & Co.)

THIS volume is destined to be the season's chief bone of contention, the most hotly challenged and debated, quarreled over, wrangled over, praised and exalted for its farsighted wisdom and splendid courage, denounced and flayed for its blindness, its bigotry its deliberate falsification of life.

The sheer craftsmanship of this book, the rich and varied artistry of its development, lift the author forthwith from the class of interesting contemporary novelists into the foremost rank of English fiction. It contains scores of incidents and episodes that are little miracles of narration, haunting and inimitable.

There are few novels in which the characters so grip the reader's heartstrings that, knowing they are headed toward disaster, he comes to dread the turn of each page, fearing what will meet his eye To have achieved precisely this effect constitutes one of the chief claims of "This Freedom" to an enduring place among the novels of real importance.

Frederic Taber Cooper in The New York Herald

"This Freedom" is a great story and worthy successor of "If Winter Comes." Personally I do not think the latter Mr Hutchinson's best story. I give "The Clean Heart" first place. But "This Freedom" is going to raise a whole lot of argument and will do a deal of good. Just one word more. Mr. Hutchinson, of course, writes beautifully. He is reminiscent of both Dickens and Carlyle. He has some of Dickens' finest qualities, but also his vices. His constant repetitions in "This Freedom" are unnecessary and tiresome. His rhapsodies are Carlylean. His characters are Dickensian. Can one say more? W. O. T.

W. Orton Tewson in The Philadelphia Public Ledger

THE BEST SELLER OF THE FAL

THE OUTSTANDING NOVEL OF THE YEAR

NOT the dearest critic of A S M Hutchinson can accuse this author of being a repeater His every new book is something different. Especially is this fact evident in the case of his "This Freedom.

We make no pretense of being a prophet of best-sellers We have no intention of trying to say how far "This Freedom should go in the book markets To us the new story appears to be a far more consistent piece of work than was "If Winter Comes," and to possess, in addition to a cumulative interest, the value of an earnest and intensely practical thoughtfulness. Mr Hutchinson meets our definition of an author who is really called to the writing.

E. W Osborn in The New York World

A tremendous task was that undertaken by Mr. Hutchinson, but he was more than master of it. The theme was a mighty one, but the author never allowed it to escape him, and his story in consequence is a keen and searching adventure into a realm of psychology that few have had the courage to essay.

For skilful craftsmanship, beauty of style, character revelation and analytical ingenuity, "This Freedom" is one of the most notable creations in the field of fiction of the decade. The novel deserves a place high among the important documents which should stand as posts to mark the progress of the world to a better understanding of itself, to a more profound conviction of its obligations.

Mr Hutchinson has here an amazing novel, powerful in its sweep and an interpretation of life as mighty as an epic.

P A Kinsley in The Philadelphia Record

THIS FREEDOM

By

A. S. M. HUTCHINSON

Author of "If Winter Comes," etc.

"This Freedom"—The Logical Successor to "If Winter Comes."

"THIS FREEDOM"—the very title of the new Hutchinson book is a challenge. It needs must be a challenge—the book which follows such a phenomenal success as "If Winter Comes" had. The curiosity of the multitudes this fall will be centered on "This Freedom."

And will the public like being reformed? It will, unless I am an even poorer guesser than I suspect, purr with delight. It will buy "This Freedom" in even greater numbers than it bought "If Winter Comes."

Every one is going to read it and talk about it, if only because it is a challenge.

The Adventures of MAYA THE BEE

By WALDEMAR BONSELS

Illustrated with head and tail piece in black and white for each chapter and with four full-page colored illustrations by

HOMER BOSS

Maya was not a bee like other bees. From the very hour of her birth she made up her mind that she was not going to work and make honey, day in and day out. She would go out and see the world for herself and have adventures and experiences.

And she did. She had adventures in plenty, more, sometimes, than she liked. She met many different kinds of insects, learned many things about the way they lived and about the way they thought and felt. And she learned a little about human beings, also. She had such an interesting life that in reading about it in this book we can hardly catch our breath at times. We laugh and we cry, we are happy and we are sad. For Maya is not an ordinary bee. She is a great character and we begin to love her. And what happens to her is very important. 8vo $2.50

WHEN you hear the books of this autumn discussed you will always hear THE JUDGE spoken of. This novel by Rebecca West has its roots so deep down in common human experience that none who reads it can either forget or keep silent. That is what will count—and not, primarily, the fact of beautiful prose, an exquisite love story, a tragical tenderness in dealing with the figure of Ellen Melville. "Every mother is a judge who sentences the children for the sins of the father." Such work as THE JUDGE is rare in any year and any language and any country.

Thousands are asking -

"Who is Uncle Henry?"

A famous American, a real humorist, a great philosopher, a genius—one who knows people and politics—who has lived among the secret chambers at Washington and the people of the street! But who is he? The mystery has spread like wildfire since Uncle Henry's articles first appeared in Collier's, The National Weekly.

"Uncle Henry is one of our master satirists," says Irvin S. Cobb, in his introduction to

"Uncle Henry"

on Love, Marriage and Other Perils

with Introduction by

Irvin S. Cobb

In this volume, says Cobb, "he has flanked and enfiladed the bogusness of so many present-day issues, problems, and notables that one hesitates to pick a particular chapter as being better than the rest. One finds a way out of the dilemma by heartily commending the entire table of contents."

Like all other books published by us—Reynolds Atlas, The Daily Dozen, Bare-Handed Selling etc.—Uncle Henry will be widely advertised in various publications reaching nearly eight million readers a month.

A KIPLING ANTHOLOGY
PROSE AND VERSE

There has long been a demand, by lovers of Kipling, for two small books such as these. One book of prose and the other of poetry, these volumes comprise the most familiar quotations of the most widely quoted author in the world today. With them—one may enjoy the best of Kipling without searching through the numerous volumes of his collected works. These books should prove as profitable as the "Pocket R. L. S."

THE LAST MILE
By Frank A. McAlister

This first novel by a young Princeton man is certain to attract the attention of the critics and the discriminating reading public. It is a story of the restlessness of a young war veteran—a novel of bewildered youth groping for the light. It isn't morbid though, it's natural, it has high satire in it and ends with a laugh.

FOURSQUARE

By Grace S Richmond

In this book Mrs. Richmond has achieved success in a new field. She has given a picture—a lifelike and intensely interesting picture of a great and human teacher. She has built her novel on the foundation of all progress — education. As she made the profession of medicine human and revealing through the portrayal of human character in "Red Pepper Burns" and that of the ministry in "Red and Black," so now she wins our interest in the trials and triumphs of a great teacher—Mark Fenn.

"Foursquare" will be advertised in the quality magazines —including The Atlantic Monthly, The Bookman, The World's Work, and the newspaper advertising will steadily continue country-wide throughout the fall season. If you are not already supplied—a card to our Trade Department will bring you imprinted, two-color "Foursquare" postcards and an attractive three-color window display.

By JULIAN STREET

ON SEPTEMBER 15th

A new novel by one of the first-rank authors in America will be published—Rita Coventry, by Julian Street, author of "Abroad at Home," "American Adventures," "Mysterious Japan."

FIVE DAYS LATER

a lot of husbands and wives will be doing a good deal of thinking and a good deal less talking about Parrish's relations with Rita; a lot of bachelors will be watching their step; newspaper critics will be saying that this is "not the great American novel," but that it is an amazingly human picture of real people in a perfectly lifelike dilemma.
—and there isn't a flapper anywhere in it!

Price Levels English and American

DURING the past year's discussion on copyright and tariff, the question of American price levels on English books has often been mentioned, and a rather broad view of the average conditions is pertinent to future discussions on these subjects.

In the March-August number of the Book Review Digest, which lists books of importance to the library world, there are 260 titles of English authorship listed, on which the American and English prices are given. The total list price in this country is $894.15, in England 3,165 s., exactly 28c. to the shilling. This average difference is less than many have estimated, and one-third of the books are lower in this country than in England. As public libraries can purchase in this country at discounts averaging about 20%, and, as the English trade does not recognize library discounts, this group of 260 books could be purchased in this country at a lower price than in London.

Books of English authorship come into this country in different ways. The majority of those that come to be published here are manufactured in this country, as is necessary to meet the demands if the market is at all active. On such books the American price seems almost invariably a close equivalent of the English. In fiction, for instance, the commonest English price today is 7s. 6d. with a number of titles 8s. 6d. The commonest American price is $2 with a number of titles $1.75. This means that the average of over 100 volumes of fiction would be almost an exact equivalent. Books of memoirs, biography and travel which promise good editions are also manufactured in this country.

Besides these, there are books on which no large market can be assured, and these are brought into this country in two ways. If in sheets, the duty in the Custom House is 15% on the English cost, and the books are rebound in this country in the American cloth style, which is usually more attractive and more durable. In some cases where there is a very small sale in prospect, the books are brought over in the English cloth binding. In this case, owing to the unfortunate interpretation of the tariff administration laws, the duty is not based on the English cost but is 15% on the English wholesale price, or one-third off the English list price. This more than doubles the duty. In this case the publisher is at considerable disadvantage.

Prices both of English books in America and American books in England must sometimes be set according to what the different markets will bring. Sometimes a guinea book in England could find no market at all here at about $6, and the English publisher, if he can see any profit, finally offers some at a very low price to induce some one to handle it at about $4. The same is true of American books in England. Sometimes publishers have different conceptions of what the form of a book should be, and in this case the prices are of little value for comparison.

American publishers have many conditions that are quite different from those in England. All printing wages are very much higher. The average office salaries run about double, distances for the traveler are tremendously larger, while the discount to the retailer is at least 5% greater. His advantage to offset these increased expenses is that his market has greater possibilities, and, when the lucky book really reaches out to its possible market, the returns are more rapid and more profitable than in England.

Bibliographic Checklists

THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY begins in this issue one of its most important enterprises in the series of bibliographic checklists of American first editions, a series which will run thruout the coming year and which should prove of real importance to the American book-trade and to American collectors.

The editors will appreciate co-operation on the part of users of the list in making corrections and in suggesting authors whose names should be included.

Business Conditions

WITH the coal strike ending and the difficulties on the railroads aparently clearing up, the country is settling itself for active fall business, and, in spite of the discomforts that the coal strike is to bring, the progress in general fields of business is too apparent to be offset. If the book-trade had a good year in 1921 when other business was slack, it seems destined for a very active year when other lines are picking up. Reports from the travelers as to August business have been very encouraging, indeed, and many publishers report that last year's totals for the year are being eclipsed. With this condition the transportation problem for merchandise is increasingly important. From now on, coal will be given precedence on the railroads even over coach travel, and miscellaneous freight has got to take its turn.

It will take careful estimating and trained foresight to anticipate the needs of retail stores, but only by such care can the advantages of a good fall season be realized this year. Travelers who are urging such considerations to retailers are not making merely selfish suggestions. Whether bookstores can estimate rightly or not on all of the new titles, they can make good estimates on standard stock items and on books of proved worth, so that at least on the general stock the public can be served with reasonable promptness. The transportation problem is not an easy one to settle, and too much stock coming hastily by mail is a profit-eater for the bookseller.

Appreciative of Help

THE Year Round Bookselling Committee in getting its list ready for fall campaigns has been checking its mailing list and hearing from many dealers with regard to the material. Hardly a day goes by but some one hears about the posters and wants them to help in displays and book promotion.

A dealer wrote from Johnstown, N. Y.:

"The posters were found helpful immediately upon putting them in the window."

Another dealer writes:

"We appreciate your efforts in behalf of the retail bookseller, and want to be on the mailing list for posters and other mailing matter. We assure you that we will give prominent display to such matter."

Some dealers have found certain material more usable than others. A Philadelphia dealer in technical books writes for three or four more of the "Find It In Books" poster, which is particularly applicable to that business. Another bookseller explains that his store serves a varied clientele of American and foreign born and that the posters with their pictorial appeal are of great help in getting attention to his business. Another correspondent emphasizes the decorative value of the posters as permanent features in the book department, and there are many reports of individual posters that have become a permanent part of the fixtures in many stores.

The correspondence comes from almost every state in the Union and every type of city as well as from other countries. One of Canada's leading stores writes:

"We very much appreciate your efforts in behalf of bookselling, and would be glad to hear from you regarding all new promotion matter as issued."

The Chief Librarian at Croyden, England, who had asked for samples of the posters writes:

"It all strikes me as being excellent and effective and at the same time admirably restrained and in irreproachably good taste. Naturally, as a librarian, I hope these things will lead to a greater use of libraries, but all good readers are book buyers, and my experience proves that those people who use libraries are the people who most patronize the booksellers. Our interests, therefore, are quite mutual."

Powell Book in London Suit

THE British North Borneo Company, which holds a Royal charter to administer to the affairs of that territory, has brought into court in London a complaint against E. Alexander Powell's book, "Where Strange Trails Go Down," which Scribner, having issued here last year, had just put out on the English market. It complained that there were serious libels, and the defendant offered apologies and has withdrawn the book from sale in England. Mr. Powell had written that the North Borneo Company administered the powers granted it in a disgraceful way and allowed its planters to treat the natives badly and to exploit the territory for dividends.

H. G. Wells, M.P., will probably introduce some novel ideas in Parliament.—Life.

Building On Yesterday's Mistakes

A Few Pointers by a Man on the Buying Side of the Retail Book Counter to those on the Selling Side of it

By Michael Gross

"EACH succeeding day should be the scholar of the one which preceeded it," said an ancient philosopher, and the advice is as sound at the present time as it was when uttered. Unless you can build on yesterday's errors—profit by the experience you gain from day to day—your progress up the hill of retail selling to the goal called Business Success will indeed be slow.

To illustrate the point, let us analyze a few every-day sales happenings that you will no doubt recognize as being familiar.

There was the lady who came into the store early yesterday morning. You were very busy at the time arranging in alphabetical order a batch of new books. We are willing to concede that five minutes after eight is rather early for a person to want to buy a book. But maybe there was an early train to be caught. Also it is well to remember that, in these parlous times, many merchants would prefer customers to walk into the store at midnight rather than not walk in at all.

Feeling annoyed at having been interrupted, you made the intruder wait until you gently patted all the "G" titles into their proper place. By that time the customer had become a little peeved on her own account and was impatiently tapping a coin on the counter. This action irritated you still further so that, instead of the cheerful "Good Morning" to which the prospective buyer was entitled you emitted a surly "What can I do for you?"

Your obvious resentment of her presence in the store had, naturally, made the customer feel there was nothing you could do for her. As a matter of fact, she had originally come in to do something for you—buy one of your books.

And so the sale was lost

Now, if out of that experience you gained the knowledge that no task you may be doing can possibly be more important than immediately going forward to wait on a customer who has just entered the door: if you learned that a buyer gets absolute "right of way" and takes precedence over everything else that may be engaging your attention at the time he appears on the scene, your employer will no doubt forgive you for the sale that was sacrificed to bring the lesson home to you.

Let us take a second instance. There was the old man who came in the other day—the one who said he could never get beyond the first ten pages of a Conrad book. Of course, you flew gallantly to the defense of your best-beloved author and put up quite an argument to convince the venerable gentleman that he was all wrong. You quoted whole paragraphs out of "The Nigger" for his edification and successfully knocked down all his objections as fast as he hurled them at you. Finally you won the argument—won it hands down, without the shadow of a doubt. But you lost the sale, for the old gentleman, vexed at having his opinion so stubbornly opposed, went out in a huff without buying anything.

Did this experience teach you that the worst thing a sales-person can do is get into an argument with a customer over what is purely a matter of opinion? Did you learn by it that you may suggest, recommend, or even, on occasion, advise, the purchase of a certain title, but under no condition must you try to batter down the conviction your customer may have about any book or author. Always keep in mind the vital fact that you are behind the counter to sell books—not win intellectual battles.

And do you remember the young lady who came in late yesterday and asked for a copy of "Cytheria"? She pronounced the name as if it was spelled "Sigh-to-ra-a," but instead of handing her the book without any comment you felt it your sacred duty first to say: "You mean 'Cyth-e-rea,' don't you?"

Your correction of her pronounciation made the customer feel somewhat embarrassed, particularly in view of the fact that there were three or four young men standing within hearing distance, while it accomplished absolutely nothing toward making the sale. As a matter of fact, the uncalled-for query may prevent further sales altogether, for you may be sure that when this same purchaser wants another title, and is in doubt about the proper pronunciation, she will go to a store where her lapse is not commented upon by the person behind the counter.

Then there was the man who wanted to know whether a certain "best seller" that had been advertised as a story of California, dealt with the present time or an earlier period. You had to confess that you did not know. Naturally, the buyer felt disappointed at your answer. He had made a special trip to the one place where he thought he could surely get information about books—a bookstore—and the information was not forthcoming. Yet you could so easily have posted yourself regarding the contents of this particular book, as well as any other for which a demand existed.

Every publisher is more than willing to send you full information regarding any title on his list. The various magazines devoted to books carry advertisements written especially to give those behind the counter of retail stores the main selling points of popular issues. The newspapers devote whole columns to describing the contents of the "best sellers." With this wealth of information at your command, are you going to lose another sale to-morrow because you are unable to answer a customer's query regarding a subject about which you are expected to have full knowledge?

And how about the sale you lost because you insisted on recommending a cook book that you thought was better than the one your customer asked for? Did this experience teach you that, unless you are asked for an opinion on a buyer's choice, it is best not to express any? There has been so much publicity given to the phrase: "Beware of Substitutes," that, subconsciously, a customer is put on his guard when a salesperson suggests something else. Nor does it help any if the clerk behind the counter is certain that the article he is recommending is really far superior. The surer he is of this fact, and the more strongly he urges his own selection, the more suspicious does the buyer become that the clerk is trying to "put something over."

If you will get into the habit of analyzing carefully every sale you make or lose—and not rest satisfied until you have discovered the reason for either the victory or the defeat in each instance, it will not be long before you will find yourself profiting by your mistakes and embodying your successes into a definite sales plan. We all make mistakes but the successful person in any line of endeavor is the one who is constantly on guard not only to keep from making the same mistake twice but to force the one made to yield a valuable lesson for the future.

English Book-Trade News

(From Our London Correspondent)

PUBLISHING is more or less at a low ebb in summer. Those who are concerned with the making of books have either started for or soon will be on their vacation. It seems, in spite of efforts to the contrary, that the issuing of books is kept to the two old seasons, spring and autumn, with a fair sprinkling of fiction in the summer. Miss Dell's new novel, "Charles Rex," came out in August, but, of course, seasons may come and go, but they make not an atom of difference to this popular writer. Time was when publishers would have been horror-struck at the thought of publishing a serious book at that time of the year, but quite a number of important works are appearing just now, covering biography and travel, and they are getting a good deal of space in the papers.

Guedalla's "Second Empire" was issued only the other day by Constable and has achieved an immediate success. Everybody is reading it, which proves you may publish an important work in the middle of the summer, altho there is not much summer with us; it is mostly rain. But England is beautifully green.

"I can commend Mr. Philip Guedalla's new book, 'The Second Empire,'" says the London Sunday Pictorial, "the best thing of the kind since Lytton Strachey's 'Queen Victoria.' This brilliant study of Napoleon the Third is more fascinating than any novel."

Another important book to be published this week is "The Wonderland of the Eastern Congo," that is, the region of the snow-crowned volcanoes, the pygmies, the giant gorilla and the okapi. The author is T. Alexander Barns, and Sir Harry Johnston has written an introduction.

Here are some books which are doing well:

"The New Decameron," a collection of short stories.

"Da Silva's Widow," by Lucas Malet.

"The Altar Steps," by Compton Mackenzie.

"The Amazing Quest of Mr. Ernest Bliss," by E. Phillips Oppenheim.

"Some Things That Matter," by Lord Riddell.

"Irish and Other Memories," by Duc de Stacpoole.

"British History in the Nineteenth Century," by G. M. Trevelyan.

A new magazine, The Golden Hind, a Quarterly Magazine of Art and Literature will be published in October. The editors are Clifford Bax and Austin O. Spare, and the contributors will include T. Sturge Moore, Charles Shannon, Frank Brangwyn, Walter de la Mare, and W. H. Davies. Each number will contain, besides verse, essays woodcuts, etc., at least six auto-lithographs by contemporary artists. The price will be one guinea to subscribers, or six shillings a number. Chapman & Holt are the publishers.

AMERICAN FIRST EDITIONS

A Series of Bibliographic Check-Lists*

Edited by Merle Johnson and Frederick M. Hopkins

Number 1.

(NEWTON) BOOTH TARKINGTON, 1869—

Compiled by Henry C. Quinby

A SET of Tarkington as given comprises ten complete novels, three sets of "boy" stories combined into book arrangement, one collection of political yarns and six separate short stories in covers, and five plays. The key volume to the set is the correct "The Gentleman from Indiana." The Doubleday-Page (Garden City) books, from "Penrod" to "Alice Adams" were printed in succeeding editions without distinction; we leave it to future bibliographers to trace differences, if it be possible.

THE GENTLEMAN FROM INDIANA. New York, 1899.
Line 16, p. 245, reads "so pretty," later corrected to "her heart."

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE. New York, 1900.
Publisher's seal, page after text, 14 mm. high, 13 mm. in diameter.

THE TWO VANREVELS. New York, 1902.
500 copies, signed, with duplicate illustrations on "vellum," bound in white boards; 500 copies uncut in brown paper boards. Ordinary edition bound in green cloth.

LORDS OF THE HOUSETOPS. New York, 1921.
Contains GYPSY, pp. 124-130.
DULCY. New York, 1921.
Contains A Prologue, pp. vii-xiii.
THE WORKS OF BOOTH TARKINGTON. Autograph Edition, Volume VIII, Garden City, New York, 1918.
Contains besides the first appearance in book form of HARLEQUIN and COLUMBINE, seven other short stories, reprinted from magazines.
Volume IX, 1918, contains three short stories not previously printed in book form, THE KISSES OF MARJORIE, MR. BROOKE, and LORD JERNINGHAM.
Other plays by Tarkington:
MR. ANTONIO, POLDEKIN, THE GHOST STORY and THE INTIMATE STRANGERS have been published in periodicals.
GETTING A POLISH, CAMEO KIRBY and UP FROM NOWHERE, all with Harry Leon Wilson, co-author, and THE WREN, altho produced, have never been printed.

WITH this number begins a series of check-lists of American first editions, which should be of great use to booksellers and collectors and form a working basis for an increased knowledge of the American literary material. Collecting, to be of constructive value and of real interest, must be based on as accurate information as possible, and such information on any large number of contemporary American authors has not previously been easily available.

The series will run continuously for a year, a tentative list of authors to be covered having been made out which will be printed as the data gradually is gathered together. The editors of the series are Merle Johnson, whose bibliography on Mark Twain has proved so valuable, and who published the bibliographical check-list of James Branch Cabell, and Frederick M. Hopkins, who has been well known for many years in connection with the rare book and auction business of New York and is the editor of the rare book pages of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

In compiling these, the editors are following the plan of asking the co-operation of well known collectors, especially those who have made some favorite author their especial hobby. These collectors have given to the lists the benefit of their comment and corrections, and will be given credit for their valued assistance. Henry C. Quinby is responsible for valuable help in the preparation of the Booth Tarkington list; and the list on Stephen Crane, which will be Number Two, has been compiled with the assistance of O. L. Griffith.

These check-lists are not intended to be substitutes for more elaborate bibliographies. The position is taken that in all collecting the most important things to gather together are the principal books and that what is most needed is a brief list of these books with the places and the dates of publication. With such a list in hand, browsing among old bookshops becomes more interesting, and similarly such a list will save many books from being lost in the miscellaneous stocks of the second-hand dealer when he buys in libraries. Wherever collectors have found special marks necessary for the identification of a first edition, these will be included, such as the change on page 245 of "A Gentleman From Indiana." The editors will welcome letters from users of the lists who can add further details to the various items, as the material will probably ultimately be put into book form and all such corrections will help clarify the collector's working data. Miscellaneous material is put in smaller type at the bottom of the list, so as to leave the fullest emphasis for the individual bound books. All reference to sizes, shapes and bindings are omitted unless these points are needed to determine the first issue. The dates given would be the ones printed on the title pages, and, if the dates are printed in brackets, this will indicate that they are the dates on the copyright pages.

In the selecting of the authors to be included, attention will be directed toward those authors that are being most prominently collected to-day, so that the material may be of real importance to the trade. The interest in first editions has undoubtedly been on the steady increase in the last few years, and it is believed that the availability of more detailed information on American authors will direct more interest into this field. English bibliographies have been much more available, and information about American bibliographies ought to stimulate collecting.

Their Western Exposure

The Putnam Burlesquers Hit the Trail

ON September 9th a group of authors is staging an extended literary junket to the Pacific Northwest, the main object being the Round-Up at Pendleton, Oregon, the super-spectacle of roughriding and frontier day stunts. The host of the trip is George Palmer Putnam. The personnel includes, Wallace Irwin, Charles Hanson Towne, George S. Chappell (Dr. Walter E. Traprock), Ruth Hale, Hubbard Hutchinson, Walter Trumbell, and John Held, Jr., the illustrator. It is understood the trip is primarily a sort of coming-out party for "My Northern Exposure," the new Traprock book which is to be published on September 22nd, and for Charles Hanson Towne's novel "The Chain." Out in Oregon the party will be joined by Frederick O'Brien, who comes up from California, and by Charles Wellington Furlong, author of "Let 'er Buck." Mr. O'Brien expects to return with the literary junketers to New York and spend the winter here.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the entertainment of the party, which include a three day sight-seeing stopover at Yellowstone, and elaborate entertainment at Portland, Seattle and Tacoma. At Portland, John T. Hotchkiss of the J. K. Gill Co. is the leading spirit in planning for the reception of the Easterners. They have been asked to participate in the laying of the cornerstone of the new J. K. Gill Building, an event in which, Mr. Hotchkiss says, the editors of all the large Pacific Northwest newspapers will share, together with the itinerant authors. When Mr. Hotchkiss wired Dr. Traprock asking him if the party would lay the corner-stone, Traprock replied: "While the fatu-liva bird in my 'Cruise of the Kawa' laid square eggs, I find that no member of the party ever laid a cornerstone. We are willing, however, to try anything once."

CHARLES HANSON TOWNE ROLLING HIS OWN

However, they declare emphatically that they won't try even once any of the bucking bronco stunts at the Pendleton Round-Up. "They are rough-writers, not rough-riders," said Mr. Putnam. "The Pendleton Round-Up slogan is 'Let Er Buck.' Our slogan is 'Let Er Book.'"

But when it comes to bucking, the sentiment of the rough-writers is summed up in the rhyme perpetrated by Walter Trumbell:

Traprock and Putnam, Hale, Irwin and Towne
Are off for the West, that land of renown,
And if placed upon mustangs are trusting their luck.
Will assist them in efforts at passing the buck.

DR. TRAPROCK THROWING THE BULL

BRENTANO'S have just published a special poetry catalog for their retail stores which is interesting as an example of special promotion and of the extent of the stock carried in this field. The 40 pages contain an alphabetical list of over 600 volumes of poetry, arranged by author, about 20 books of critical works, over 60 anthologies, rhyming dictionaries, and poetry in other tongues.

A New "Fable For Critics"

Rhymed Criticism of The Lowell Variety

SOME books have an interest to the book-trade for their sales and still others have an added interest because they start the book discussion that is likely to lead to sales in other directions. Such a book is to be published anonymously by Houghton Mifflin this fall under the title of "A Critical Fable."

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN AND COMPANY
Boston and New York
Published September, 1922

As will be seen by the rhymed title page, which is reproduced herewith, and a rhymed preface, the book should be considered as a sequel to James Russell Lowell's "A Fable for Critics," and in its hundred pages of rhymed verse it takes up the discussion of our present-day poetry and poets and supplies not only criticism but the same abundance of quotable rhymes that made its prototype remembered. Besides the opinions expressed, which will be likely to stimulate a renewed interest in our modern poets, the book is likely to bring forth rejoinders that will build up new interest in curresnt American poetry and the anonymity of the book will naturally start guesses as to the source of the poem. Many of the opinions expressed in the poem seem to be so close to those that have been expressed by a well-known New England writer that it will be a very natural inference that in that direction the guilt lies.

Canadian Authors Hold Campfire Meeting

ON the shores of Lake Windermere, the source of the Columbia River, in the Canadian Rockies, Canadian Authors have planned a Campfire Meeting for August 31st, at which Bliss Carman, Madge Macbeth (author of "Kleath"), Onoto Watanna (author of "The Japanese Nightingale"), Isabel Ecclestone Mackay (author of "The Window Gazer"), Frederick Niven (author of "Hands Up"), Lawrence J. Burpee (author of "The Search for the Western Sea"), and about thirty other Canadian writers are expected. The Campfire will be held at Toby Lodge, the ranch of John Murray Gibbon, President of the Canadian Authors' Association, whose novel, "The Conquering Hero," is located in this district. This campfire meeting is part of a celebration in honor of David Thompson, Canada's greatest geographer, who discovered Lake Windermere in 1807, and from the fort he erected on its shores explored the Columbia River to its outlet at Astoria. Thompson's narrative, recently discovered and published by the Champlain Society, is a mine of information as to the Indians of the Pacific Coast and has already become a classic.

Four tribes of Indians are attending the celebrations, which are centered round a memorial building, to be used as an Indian Museum. These come from Flagstone, from the Kootenay Plains, from the St. Eugene Mission and from the Shuswap Reserve at Lake Windermere. After taking part in a historical pageant, they will perform the rarely seen Drum Dance, and on the following day will put on a stampede for the benefit of their white brethren.

KENELM DIGBY continues the discussion as to what the O. in O. Henry stands for by publishing a letter from C. Edwin Hutchings. "Assuming that you would like to know O. Henry's full name, as originally used, I write to say that I have sent it to Don Marquis, with proofs. —Olivier Henry."

Reminiscences of a Book Scout

By Joseph Jewett Barton

XII. "NO HELP WANTED"

WHEN I arrived home a few evenings ago I found on my desk the following note from an old acquaintance, an out-of-town antique dealer:

"Dear Mr. Barton:
"I wish you would come down as soon as convenient. I have a large number of books which I would like you to see. Please let me know when I may expect you. Very truly yours,
"D. S M——."
"Phone 6926 Hamilton."

So I reached for my phone and asked what kind of stuff it was, and how many books he had. He started off with Smith's "History of New Jersey," first edition, 1765, which has been coming into the market quite often lately. Then he recited a long list of local histories, and as I evidently did not sound very enthusiastic over the phone, he asked: "What is it you are particularly interested in?" When I told him first editions, he said he thought he might have one or two.

I agreed to come over at ten-thirty the next morning—and I am generally on time for this kind of engagement. After we had gone thru his stock and I had selected a few, he said: "I wanted you to come over especially to see a friend of mine, who lives two or three blocks from here This man is a peculiar cuss—he knows nothing about books, and he won't give me a cent for selling them for him. Now, you have to give me ten per cent commission on what you buy. Make your own deal with him regarding prices."

Much to my surprise he led me to an old house that had been pointed out to me several times during the past few years as a house that had a lot of good books in it. "But you can't buy them," was always the comment. To the last man who told me that I said (I rather pride myself upon being a good "getter"), "Why can't I buy them?" and he replied, "Because the owner doesn't need the money and he won't sell." Which is absolutely no reason at all.

The house was all shut up. I don't believe the front blinds or windows had been opened in over twenty years. The paint had entirely disappeared, a terribly woe-begone sort of look it had, tho you could not say it was in very bad repair. It probably was a real house once, built, not thrown together as they do it now.

We pulled the bell several times but without response. Then D— started off to hunt the owner, while I draped myself on the porch railing. In a few minutes he returned accompanied by a tall, loose-jointed individual who had no collar, needed a shave badly and "chawed" tobacco. (I thought that chewing was a forgotten art, but I was shown during the day that it was not.) There were also a couple of dogs in the party. We went into the house and at first sight thru the duskiness all I could see was dust and more dogs; I found there were six in the family, besides the owner.

This man is the last of a family whose ancestors came over in Winthrop's fleet. Thru the early struggles of the Colonies, the Revolution, and in later years, they occupied the highest positions in the State and in civil life.

D—, who seemed to be perfectly at home and master of ceremonies, suggested that I take off my coat and hat and leave them on the dining room table. I say "dining room," but from the looks of things the master of the inn and the dogs all ate together in the kitchen or on the back porch. I couldn't see the sense in taking off my coat; but after I was led to the top floor, with the idea of working down, I wished I had. Nice, black thick dust on everything—half an inch of it, and the first grab I made showed me the wisdom of old D—.

The man I met once down in Virginia had the right idea about mining for books in old attics and houses. He wore jeans and a khaki shirt, and changed into civilized clothes after the day was done.

It was a big house and there were books in every room; some under the beds, others in bureau drawers, most of them in closets. After I had examined a hundred or more, a book-hunter's sixth sense told me I was getting skimmed milk. The dust did not seem to have been disturbed, but I felt as tho a good one had been picked here and there.

I ran across Sabin's American Bibliopolist covering a period of seven years, 1869-1875; the William Harris Arnold's sales catalog of first editions (1901) and Charles B. Foote's collection of American Authors (1894).

Anybody who was interested in the class of books these works list and describe should have had a few of them, but they were not there. A lot of items of minor interest, but nothing rare. Everything was only near right—points were missing, plates or maps gone, title-pages soiled or torn, second and worse editions. Finally I turned to D—, who was pottering around, and asked: "Who has been picking these over before I got here," and he answered that no one had seen them for years. He was a plain, unvarnished perverter of the truth (only that isn't what I called him under my breath).

I gathered up six or seven out of the attic and carried them down to the next floor. That floor had a hall bedroom that was almost full of paper-back novels. I thought I might pick up a few good ones there, perhaps Kipling, Stevenson or Hearn, but I didn't find any. I got a few more books on this floor, then I was introduced to the lower floor and two or three hundred on the covered back porch. Whoever did the picking before me did it hurriedly, or got tired or something, because he didn't dig deep enough.

An old calf bound volume labeled "Sermons" had been passed up, also a clumsily bound volume with no label, which, while not attractive on the outside, was Defoe's political pamphlets, first editions—and the Sermons, ah! the Sermons were sixteen pamphlets by Cotton, Increase and Samuel Mather, and a few more of like ilk, published a couple of hundred years ago.

I gathered up my selections, dropped them on the dining room floor before the owner, and asked "What do you want for them?" He gazed at me for a few seconds, then pulled his glasses down to his eyes and commenced to look them over.

A clever young spaniel tucked his nose into my hand—it was a critical moment, and I should have been trying any power of suggestion I possessed upon the old man; instead I relaxed, thinking perhaps this friendly pup knew better than I, the way to success. Love my dog and I'll love you isn't hard, when one already has a real liking for dogs in moderate quantities; so I rubbed the pup's ears and talked small dog stuff to him in an undertone.

When he had gone thru about half of them the old man stopped, leaned back in his rocking chair and said: "These books belonged to my brother who died several years ago. They are of no interest to me; I don't need the money for them and I'm not going to haggle; make me an offer, and if I think it is a fair one, you can have them." So I communed with myself a few minutes and made him an offer; his face brightened considerably at it, and he said energetically and decidedly, "They are yours."

I staggered down the street with a goodly bundle in each hand, and D— showed me where I could leave them in safety until I got an express wagon. D— said, "That cuss is worth a half million dollars and I think you paid plenty for those books."

But D— nor the half million cuss does not appreciate the wonderful theology in Mather pamphlets, first edition.

And the man who doesn't need the money said to me just as I was leaving, "You had better leave me your card. I think there are some more you haven't seen. I'll write you in a few days."

Shall I need assistance? No!

Tidal Wave of Books

UNDER this rather striking title above, James L. Ford, whose experience in things bookish has been happily recorded in his recent volume of reminiscences, has analyzed the present general interest in books for the New York Sunday Tribune and gives credit to several movements for building up the present increase.

First among the factors in building a larger reading public he places the library movement or the popularization of the library movement that has been particularly characteristic of the last third of a century. Next he speaks of the effect of the cheaper magazine whose influence began to be felt about thirty years ago and whose sales have broadened at such a tremendous pace during this century.

These magazines led the way, Mr. Ford feels, to the best seller era of the beginning of the century. Another great impetus was given to the business, he believes, when the department stores began to handle books, and at the same time the publishers prepared the way for better display of books on counters by giving them more attractive jackets and display material. At about this time came the reprint, taking the place of the old paper-covered novel, which carried the current copyright literature to the tremendous public not before reached.

"Meanwhile," he points out, "the science of publicity, which had previously been confined to the theatrical profession, made its way rapidly and was speedily adopted by progressive publishers. The simple paragraphs of an elder age assumed a new and more interesting form, dealing not only with the books but with their authors, concerning whom all sorts of personal information was set afloat and widely read and quoted.

"Journalists, and even literary men of marked talent, entered into the new profession and there gained better rewards than they had previously enjoyed. Ideas for attracting attention took on a high value in the eyes of publishers, and many a book has been successfully launched on the uncertain sea of public approval by the adroit work of the press agent. A masterpiece of publicity was achieved when the famous Mark Twain dinner inaugurated the sale of the complete edition of that humorist's works."

Business Comparisons

New Side-lights on the Expenses of Retailing

EVERY field of merchandising gets information of constructive value by being able to compare its totals and percentages with those of other lines, and some recently published figures will be of interest to the book-trade. On the question of stock turn and margin of profit new figures have been made for the phonograph business, selected by the National Retail Dry Goods Association. The period covered is the good business year of 1919. Twenty-eight stores supplied the figures. The highest amount of sales was $354,486, lowest $14,138, average $87,229. The average gross profit was 28.5%. The highest shown by any store was 34%. The average net profit was 8.32%, showing that these departments were operated on a 20% cost of doing business. Only four of the stores keep separate accounts of the sale of the phonograph records, but the average profits were about the same as on the combined business of instruments and records. The fact that such departments can be on less expensive floor space in the department store and that there is a possible high mark of average sale owing to the selling price of the instruments seems to make it possible to operate these on a smaller expense basis than many of the departments of the large stores.

Another interesting set of figures giving evidence on current business as well as operating costs is the 1921 report on the retail shoe business for 1921 made by the Harvard Bureau of Research, 407 firms reporting. The figures show that the price crisis of 1920 was more strongly felt in the following year. Most dealers had the greatest difficulty in curtailing the expense of doing business to meet the lessening returns, and the majority of firms showed a net loss for 1921 and a total reduction in sales volume of 9% over 1920. The data on stock turn showed that the firms which turned their stock 2.3 times or better showed a net profit of 6%, whereas the firms which turned their stock 1.5 times or less lost 4% on the business, an interesting indication of the importance of turnover. Many booksellers find they can easily turn their goods three times, and four times is frequent.

The booksellers also have reason to be satisfied that 1921, which seemed to be accepted as a slump year in every line of retail business, proved a very good year in bookselling.

The cost of operating expense in retail shoe stores was in 1921 as follows:

Printing Wage Scales

THE employing printers of New York are in conference with the unions in regard to wage scale adjustment as of October 1st, 1922. The cost of living having gone down sharply, the employers have asked for what would be a 20 per cent reduction for the compositors and 10 per cent for other unions. The unions, in turn, have asked for increases of $10 per week, the compositors not yet having been heard from as to their demands. Last year, the employers made a similar request for relief, and, the unions having asked for similar increases, the arbitrator's decision in December was for a maintenance of the old scale, which had not been changed since the top figures of $50 reached in 1920. This scale of $50 had been applied before the 44-hour week went into effect, which has still further increased the cost of printing in New York. The employers demand the reinstatement of the 48-hour week. The employers point out that they are under handicap with hours and wages to compete with shops nearby or in neighboring cities and that the health of the trade demands a recognition of this state of affairs.

In book production the scale of composition may be compared with the No. 1 scale in England, which has been at 90s., or about $21.50, which the Industrial Court of that country has just reduced by 5s. a week with further reductions of 2s. 6d. each on October 7th and January 6th next, which will bring the scale in England to about 40 per cent of the scale in New York City.

"More Books in Distant Homes!"

New Library Service Scheme that Takes Books to Foreign Lands

BOOKS are indispensable companions at home, but their increased value to a person in a strange land, far away from friends and cultural advantages, is only now beginning to be appreciated. Take the foreign missionaries, for example; they long for books as friends which will bring them into closer touch with the world at large and give them inspiration, comfort and enjoyment, yet the lack of sufficient funds precludes even the possibility of their building up a home library.

It is here that the women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church has come forward with a new service, which bids fair to be something big and decidedly worthwhile. Aware of the missionary's lack of contact with the outside world, these women have introduced into their new program a Library Service plan that brings books and reading directly to them.

The plan underlying the new idea is threefold. Briefly, it proposes that interested individuals send two or more books each year to missionaries, thus becoming "Book Friends;" in the second place, larger gifts of 100 or more books are wanted for Unit or Traveling Libraries; while permanent libraries for some 1564 institutions are to be built up from the overflow both from other sources and from funds secured by contributions.

Obviously the undertaking is an ambitious one; but the Society is highly organized, with a total membership of over 600,000 and subscriptions of approximately 187,000, so the chances of its becoming a real contributing force in the movement for increased reading are highly favorable. If each one of the 187,000 subscribers, for instance, donates even two books each year, it will mean that nearly 400,000 volumes go out to isolated and lonely spots. Multiply this by the enthusiasm bound to come with a spirit of giving and the possibilities are almost limitless.

In connection with its Library Service, the Society is offering some specially prepared lists of books for the convenience of its members and friends in making selections of gift books. So far as is known, this is the first time that a woman's religious organization has prepared such handy lists or catalogs for reference.

The children's list, with its books grouped according to the age and inclination of the child, has been prepared by Jacqueline M. Overton of the New York Public Library and includes between two and three hundred well-chosen titles. Suggestions on another list for adult readers embrace some of the current novels of the day, religious titles, works on economics and world development and books of history, poetry and biography.

The work of the Library Service Bureau is all voluntary—that is, unsalaried—and is carried on by directors and branch directors in various cities thruout the country. Prompted by a desire to spread learning and friendliness thru the medium of good books the women in this organization are going forward in the project with real missionary zeal, working together for the good of all.

Advertising Sells Books

C. ELLSWORTH WYLIE, vice president of Emil Brisacher and Staff, Advertising Engineers of San Francisco, replies to some of Frank Swinnerton's recent widely quoted comments on book advertising.

"Hordes of books owe their success primarily to advertising. Some of the more prominent of these books are:

Harvard Classics.
Little Leather Library.
Standard Dictionary.
H. G. Wells's "Outline of History."
"Power of Will."
"Encyclopaedia Britannica."
Book of Knowledge.
"My Four Years in Germany."
Cosmopolitan Book Corporation Books.
Scores of published memoirs.
Thousands of specialty books.
Editions of celebrated authors, histories, and even cook books.

"'Talk,' and solely talk, is credited by Mr. Swinnerton as the power that is responsible for the sale of books. But will any rational individual deny that it is advertising that launches the talk? Advertising is the cause, talk the effect. Talk of itself is too slow. National sale of any article must enlist national advertising quickly and powerfully to convey the fact of the article's existence, whether it be bathtubs or books. How many people would know of an important event in national or international affairs if they relied solely on Mr. Swinnerton's favorite medium of talk? Not many. It is the same with books. A book, without advertising to apprize the public of its publication, dies as it leaves the press Talk will circulate knowledge of a thing to a roomful of people, but not to a nation full of people."

Walt Mason's Bookishness

THE prose poems of Walt Mason are so widely circulated and so diligently read that the increasing emphasis that the Kansas rhymer has given to books adds an interesting supplement to the general attention now being given to book promotion. In the course of the summer, five different clippings have shown that he has the place of books in our daily life very much in his mind.

One recent column begins, "If you want a tale that is gory, let a woman write the same. To compound a thrilling story I'd appoint some gentle dame. Nearly all the season's thrillers are by female authors writ. Thru their pages wild eyed killers like the movie phantoms flit. And the gentle authors render all their fury in their books. In their private lives they're tender, drinking tea in quiet nooks."

100 Worth-While Books

A VERY interesting effort to increase attention to good reading comes from the Horton Publishing Company of Spokane, Washington. Mr. Horton is a lecturer who has become, on his speaking tours, impressed with the tremendous need there is for more reading guidance for the general public. He believes there are thousands and tens of thousands of people who would develop reading habits with but a little better help in the way of suggestions.

As his contribution to this situation, he has been developing a list which he calls "100 Worth While Books." In compiling the list he has written to 96 men and women whose opinion would be especially worth while, asking them for a list of their favorite volumes, "not the books," as he says, "that people ought to read, but books that have been read and reread and remembered longest because they have given the most help."

With these replies in hand, Mr. Horton has published a wall bulletin about three feet high and one foot wide, on which 100 titles are listed in large black type and in two parallel columns. The bulletin has metal holders at top and bottom to keep it in shape. Mr. Horton hopes to get it hung in small town post offices, drugstores and shops of all kinds. He sells the bulletin for thirty cents.

As with all lists, people look at it first from the point of view of what it has omitted or what individual idiosyncrasies it may reflect, but this one seems to have both old books and modern; history, fiction; biography, essays. It has books as varying as "Fruits of Solitude" by William Penn, "The Age of Innocence" by Edith Wharton, "Twenty Years at Hull House" by Jane Addams, Charnwood's "Lincoln," "Ivanhoe" and "Elizabeth and Her German Garden." It is interesting to find the problem of increasing reading interest attacked from another point of view, and booksellers may find it worth while to obtain a few of these and have them in different places in their communities.

Fire at Doubleday Plant

A FIRE at the Doubleday, Page plant at Garden City did about $12,000 damage last week. The fire broke out at about 10:30 in the evening on August 29 and was extinguished about midnight. It is thought defective wiring started the fire, which was confined to the south wing. The new lunch room for the senior members of the firm was completely destroyed. The stock on the lower floors and the stock of the leather business was only slightly damaged by water.

Reports From Leipsic

THE big Leipsic Fair has been in progress during August, and, while many dealers have left the Fair, declaring that business under present currency conditions is impossible, the Associated Press reports say that the book dealers are expressing themselves as satisfied with conditions. They say that good literature and notably scientific works are especially in demand.

Film Theaters Co-operate

LAST week the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures entertained a meeting of publicity managers of producing companies to plan co-operation of book films with Children's Book Week. The Board is compiling lists of recommended book films for children and for boys and girls of high school age, for the use of clubs, libraries, bookstores, etc.

Miss Humble learned in a talk with the Famous Players publicity manager that they have sent out an announcement thru their exchanges to 15,000 theaters, urging them to cooperate with the Week by showing Famous Players book films.

Monument to "Don Quixote"

A MONUMENT to "Don Quixote" is to be erected in the village square in Toledo, Spain, to the memory of Cervantes, who wrote the romantic story. The monument, which is to be done by the sculptor Cabarera, will be of large size and will have carved on it many of the characters mentioned by Cervantes in his work.

The New Methodist Building

A HANDSOME new five-story building has just been erected by the Richmond branch of the publishing house of the Methodist Epsicopal Church, South, at Fifth and Grace Streets. The publishing house occupies the entire first floor and basement and a large part of the second floor.

The "Book Store" occupies practically all the first floor and has been designed with an eye to beauty without detracting from the practical arrangement for business purposes. It is conceded to be one of the most beautiful rooms in the South. The fixtures are quartered oak finished in silver grey wax finish. The basement is devoted to stock and a large shipping room.

ETIQUETTE EXTRAORDINARY

Tommy's mother gave him a book on etiquette instead of the usual Robinson Crusoe.

It thereafter became a pretty fragment of English home life until Tommy's sister, in attempting to leave the room one day, found herself clutched by the hand and flung violently backwards into the coal scuttle.

"You ignorant little beast," protested Tommy, "don't you know that a gentleman should open the door for you?"

FAME

Harcourt, Brace & Co., tell a story that struck us as amusing. They are shortly going to publish a book by Vilhjalmur Stefansson, and had asked Mr. Stefansson to autograph some copies for the booksellers. While the author was hard at it, in came a book-buyer for a large department store to place an order. The Sales Manager bustled delightedly about. "Miss Blank," he cried, "I want you to meet Mr. Stefansson, the famous traveler."

"What?" said Miss Blank, "Have you a new traveler?"

The New American Book-Trade List About Ready

Some interesting facts have been brought out in the compilation of the American Book-Trade Manual for 1922, which will be ready for delivery September 15. For instance, the directory of publishers contains the names of all those who issued new books during 1921, including Government Offices, Printers, Societies, Authors and others not classed as "regular" publishers. To this list, numbering 1470, there have been added 202 other addresses of publishing houses that did not appear in the record for 1921, but whose publications are still alive, some of them very much so. As a convenience in reference the names of all publishers whose catalogs will be found in this year's Trade List Annual are designated in bold-faced type.

The Directory of Booksellers in the United States and Canada reveals an astonishing number of changes and additions over the lists in the previous Manual, dated 1919. Take for instance some of the larger cities, New York shows 62 addresses dropped for various reasons, 47 changes in street addresses and 166 new names of bona-fide dealers now engaged in selling books of one kind or another, a total of 275 revisions in one city alone. This record appears to check up with the percentage in other cities. Chicago shows a total of 173 revisions, as follows: 87 addresses deleted, 27 changes in localities and 173 new concerns. Philadelphia and Boston have similar records revealing statistically the movement of readjustment and business impetus that has characterized the book-trade in the past three years.

The Booksellers' Directory is further augmented by lists of dealers in Australasia, China, Porto Rico and in Central and South America.

The lists of book-trade organizations and periodicals, as well as that of book publishing clubs, have been brought up-to-date.

A feature of value and importance is the new list of periodicals that review books. This is divided into two parts. One comprises daily papers thruout the United States; the other, weekly or monthly periodicals; both lists being compiled from tabulated records of the publicity managers for a number of leading publishing houses.

Hostess: I hope you found that book interesting, Mr. Blimp.

A Week's Gleanings of Book-Trade News

FREDERICK O'BRIEN FINDS THE SOUTH SEAS PURIFIED AND BEAUTIFIED BY THE MISSIONARIES. ONE OF RALPH BARTON'S DRAWINGS FOR "NONSENSORSHIP" PUBLISHED BY PUTNAM

THE ILLUSTRATIONS for the new edition of Melville's "Moby Dick," which Dodd, Mead & Co. will publish this fall, are the work of Mead Schaeffer. In order to get the proper atmosphere the artist set up his easel on the deck of an old whaling vessel at New Bedford.

DISPATCHES FROM BERLIN say that Ex-Emperor William's forthcoming memoirs will have a wide circulation in Germany if low prices and extensive advertising are of any avail. Berlin bookshops display announcements of the appearance of the volume in October in paper cover for 100 marks, in half linen for 150 marks, in all-linen bindings 250 marks, and half leather for 500 marks. The prospectus gives the headings of the various chapters, which cover William's life from 1878 to 1918. Among the headings are: "My Attitude Towards the Church," "The Outbreak of the War," "The End of the War," "The Pope and the Peace," "Friendly and Neutral Powers," "The Destruction and Germany's Future."

BONI AND LIVERIGHT announce that they are in future to be the publishers of the work of Gertrude Atherton. Mrs. Atherton's new novel will be published in January.

"Towards Democracy" by Edward Carpenter is now for the first time to be printed and published in America by Mitchell Kennerley.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM is arriving in New York this month to see the first production of his new play, "East of Suez" which will also appear as a book at the same time.

REBECCA WEST'S second novel "The Judge" is having such enthusiastic reviews in English periodicals that a large audience awaits its imminent publication in this country by Doran.

LITTLE BROWN & CO. have issued a booklet on Hutchinson, with a portrait by E. O. Hoppé and two biographical and critical studies, one by Henry C. Shelley and the other by William Lyon Phelps.

THE IDEA of a "Stag Cook Book" (Doran) sounds most enticing, and who wouldn't look with interest on Rex Beach's recipe for clam chowder, William Allen White's vegetable salad, Irvin Cobb's hog jowl, Charlie Chaplin's steak and kidney pie, etc.?

THE WORLD is full of error, sin and doubt, but a salesman of The Century Company believes that the buyers of a certain New England city are richer in more kinds of doubt than any doubting place he was ever chilled in. He was selling the "Pussy Cat Princess," the jingles by Edward Anthony and the quite extraordinary cat pictures by Harry Whittier Frees. The salesman was eloquent about the photographic illustrations. The first buyer said, "No, excuse me; those cats are tied up in those positions. I know. You can't fool me." Later in the afternoon, the buyer for a second store said, "Nothing doing. They are not real cats photographed there. They are stuffed cats. I know exactly what I am talking about." And along about sundown of a hot day the buyer for a third store said, after the salesman's burst of eloquence, "No indeed, I will not have that book in my store. I know all about those cats. They are drugged." It is of course an axiom that all salesmen are sinful deceivers and that all buyers are always right, but—— .

Obituary

SAMUEL B. CATOR

SAMUEL B. CATOR of the City Book Store, Baltimore, Md., died in that city on August 18th. His brother, W. W. Cator of 103 W. Monument St., is in charge of the estate.

JAMES KENNEDY

JAMES KENNEDY, engineer, editor and author, died at his home in New York on August 14th. He was editor and president of the Angus Sinclair Publishing Company, and was editor of "Scottish and American Poems," an anthology that was issued in several editions.

JAMES A. HASSELL

JAMES A. HASSELL, for a period of fifty years connected with the book department of the American News Company and its manager for thirty years, died at his home in Plainfield, N. J. on September 3rd. He was born July 30th, 1854 and entered the employ of the News Company as a list boy under Oscar M. Dunham, a notable figure in the book-trade of his time. He steadily advanced in position, until at the retirement of Charles G. Collins, he became manager. His ready wit, genial humor, and quiet democratic manner, made warm friends of all who knew him. On the day of his retirement, in November, 1919, Stephen Farrelly, general manager of the company, on behalf of his close friends and associates for many years, presented him with a handsome gold watch and chain and an autographed testimonial, expressing their regret at his retirement and their best wishes for his future.

HENRY H. LAWSON

HENRY H. LAWSON, a writer of popular humorous books in prose and poetry widely circulated in Australasia, died in Sidney, N. S. W. on September 2nd. He was born in 1869. His seven titles, published by Angus & Robertson of Melbourne, are "When the World Was Wide" (verse), "While the Billy Boils," "Verses, Popular and Humorous," "On the Track and Over the Shiprails," "Children of the Bush," "Joe Wilson and His Mates," "When I Was King and Other Verses" and a volume of "Selected Poems," with a preface by David McKee Wright.

Communication

A CORRECTION

August 29, 1922.

Editor, PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

Our advertisement in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for August 26th carried this line: "Willa Cather was recently selected as one of America's five greatest writers by the Literary Digest." The Digest's poll was, in fact, to determine the "five outstanding figures who have appeared on the literary horizon in the past ten years," and our advertisement should have so stated.

We are obliged for your courtesy in recording this correction.

Yours faithfully,
FRANKLIN SPIER,
For Alfred A. Knopf, Inc.

Periodical Note

A NEW literary periodical, Life and Letters, makes its first appearance with its September number. It is published by E. Haldeman Julius at Girard, Kansas. The subscription price is twenty-five cents a year.

A New Publishing Society

THE Marine Research Society of 161 Essex Street, Salem, Mass., is about to publish its first book entitled "Sailing Ships of New England" by John Robinson and George Francis Dow. The book will contain the most complete collection of pictures of old vessels that has ever been printed, containing 320 illustrations with a frontispiece in four colors, and will consist of over 400 pages. Many of these plates have never before been published.

Business Notes

NEW YORK CITY.—Parnassus Bookshop has just started at 59 Fifth Avenue with Gertrude Zimmerman as manager.

PHILDADELPHIA, PA.—C. Ross Smith is to open a new bookstore at 1415 Locust St. about September 15th.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.—Walter H. Mowry has again enlarged the size of his Acorn Bookshop, and is refitting the whole space and adding an increased section for stationery. Mr. Mowry, who for many years was in Clark's Boston Bookshop, has furnished an interesting example of what can be done in a smaller city. Seven years ago he began with a Portsmouth shop not over 20 feet square, which was burned out in the fall, but he began again "right on the square" and increased the outlet until in 1920 he had double the floor space, and now a second increase is necessary.

Racine, Wis.—Enos' Book Shop is reported adjudged in bankruptcy.

The Weekly Record of New Publications

THIS list aims to be a complete and accurate record of American book publications. Pamphlets will be included only if of special value. Publishers should send copies of all books promptly for annotation and entry, and the receipt of advance copies insures record simultaneous with publication. The annotations are descriptive, not critical; intended to place not to judge the books. Pamphlet material and books of lesser trade interest are listed in smaller type.

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent for record. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. When not specified the binding is cloth.

Imprint date is stated [or best available date, preferably copyright date, in bracket] only when it differs from year of entry. Copyright date is stated only when it differs from imprint date: otherwise simply "c." No ascertainable date is designated thus: [n. d.]

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q (4to: under 30 cm.); O (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tf. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ff. (48mo: 10cm.); sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow.

Titles beginning with an unimportant word are inverted to be listed under their subject when possible.

Rare Books, Autographs and Prints

THE Comédie Française troupe recently presented in the open air theater in Nimes before an audience of some 3,000 people a French version of "Oedipus Tyrannus." Previous to its appearance there the company had given performance in several of the ancient theaters of Southern France.

H. H. Mergoluith of University College, Southampton, England, is preparing a complete edition of the works of Andrew Marvell, including his letters. He has found considerable correspondence in addition to that published by Dr. Gossart, but he is convinced that there is more to be discovered. He, therefore, requests private owners of letters to allow him to have copies of any in their possession.

The demand for first editions of Herman Melville, which has been growing for a year or two, has stirred up the publishers. The latest announcements come from Dodd, Mead & Company who will publish an illustrated edition of "Moby Dick," and the Princeton University Press who will publish two volumes, one of prose, the other of verse, most of the material appearing in book form for the first time.

The six known copies of the first edition of Shelley's "Posthumous Fragments of Margaret Nicholson," his first book, are divided evenly between England and America. The English copies are owned by the British Museum, the Victoria and Albert Museum and Thomas J. Wise; the American, by Henry E. Huntington, Carl Pforzheimer and Gabriel Wells. Mr. Wells's copy is the only one that is likely to be available for the collector for a long time to come.

An illustrated volume on "The Old English Herbals" by Eleanor Sinclair Rohde has been announced by Longmans. The author explores the herbals from Anglo-Saxon times to the end of the seventeenth century, the early manuscript works yielding fragments of the herb-lore depicted in "Widsith" and "Beowulf" and illustrating folk custom of the period. One chapter is devoted to herbals written in connection with the colonization of America by the Spaniards and English, with early lists of plants in New England gardens, and the various uses by the Red Indians of the "hearbe tabaco."

The collection of Americana brought together by the late Calvin M. McClung has been presented to the Lawson McGhee Library of Knoxville, Tenn., by his widow. A beautiful memorial bookplate designed by William F. Hopson marks each volume. The collection is especially rich in material concerning Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee, especially of the Colonial, Revolutionary War and Old South periods, and abounds in maps, portraits and views; local, county and state histories; genealogical works, early explorations and pioneer expeditions; sermons, historical addresses and early Southern literature.

The recently organized First Edition Club of London appears to be quite like the Grolier and other American book clubs in theory and will no doubt have a similar effect on book collecting. The new club proposes to keep in touch with the trend of collecting, preparing and keeping on file annotated bibliographical data, making special studies of disputed and knotty problems and broadcasting information by publishing the results of its special studies.

Seymour de Ricci, in his "Book Collector's Guide," states that about 180 copies of the First Folio of Shakespeare have been traced and he adds that the largest number in any single collection "is undoubtedly the stately array of over thirty First Folios in the library of Henry C. Folger" of this city. Since the publication of Mr. de Ricci's bibliography Mr. Folger has purchased the Burdett-Coutts First Folio, perhaps one of the finest and most famous copies of all. The increase in value in a little over a half century is shown by the auction records. The Daniel copy, sold in 1864, brought £716; the Brayton Ives copy, in 1891, $4,200; the Hoe copy, 1911, $13,000; the Lord Vernon copy, in 1918, £2,100 and the Burdett-Coutts copy, recently sold at Sotheby's, £8,600.

A memorial to Jack London in the form of a library of books dealing with the Far West is in prospect. The Woman's Improvement Club, of Glen Ellen, which sponsored the project, announces that it now has $5,000 toward the fund, and that a site has been donated near London's ranch home at Glen Ellen.

The popularity of early English rarities with American and English collectors and the high prices which they are bringing is drawing many little known books of the period into the English market. Almost every bookseller's catalog contains items of extreme rarity of this period. One of these, John Lane's "Alarum to Poets 1648, described in Elli's catalog, is apparently the only known copy. Another extremely rare book is listed in the catalog of Buckhus of Leicester. It is a tall copy of "The Wisdom of Dr. Dodypoll," 1600, of which there are only three known copies. Davis & Orioli's catalog lists a copy of Luigi de Porto's "Works," 1539, of considerable Shakespearean interest, as it includes the novel on which Shakespeare founded "Romeo and Juliet." Another rarity in the same catalog is Sannazzaro's "De Partu Virginnis," Naples, 1526, a Latin poem by one of the most famous of "humanists" one of a few copies printed on vellum and possibly the presentation copy to Pope Clement VII. to whom the work is dedicated.

The original manuscripts of Charles Dickens's books are very rare. John Forster, Dickens's biographer, came into possession of many of the great novelists manuscripts and these, including "Sketches of Young Couples," Master Humphrey's Clock, "Martin Chuzzlewit," "The Chimes," "Pictures from Italy," "Dombey and Son," "David Copperfield," "Bleak House," "A Child's History of England," "Little Dorrit," "A Tale of Two Cities," "American Notes," and the unfinished manuscript of "Edwin Drood," were given to the Victoria and Albert Museum. When American collectors have had a chance they have generally taken advantage of it. The late J. Pierpont Morgan bought the manuscript of "A Christmas Carol" and "The Battle of Life;" George W. Child that of "Our Mutual Friend;" W. A. White part of "Nicholas Nickleby," and there are fragments owned by other collectors here. When "The Haunted Man" and the collection of over 600 autograph letters of Dickens came into the market in the recent Burdett-Coutts sale it was predicted by the English press that they "would probably go to America." True enough, the manuscript came to New York and the letters went to Chicago. Dickens has always been a favorite with American collectors and he is more popular to-day than ever before.

SPECIAL NOTICES

THE ASSOCIATED EDITORS were organized five years ago to assist publishers in the compilation and revision of books.

From that time its accomplishments include the preparation of two large histories of the war (one in eight volumes, and the other in one volume of over 1,000,000 words); three sets of smaller books; the editorial direction and revision of two encyclopedias, and many volumes of miscellaneous works.

The staff is composed of experienced, versatile writers.

The Editorial Director has had an experience of 25 years in this work.

Barring fiction and poetry, almost any kind of job involving editorial work would be undertaken with the confidence that comes from the experience of work already done.

While the specialty of the organization is big tasks, small ones are welcome.

Has He "Come Back"?

Wm. Lyon Phelps, eminent critic and essayist, in a recent issue of the New York Times made this reference to a man who something over forty years ago was much in the public eye:

"When I was a boy . . . I read Carlyle's translation of 'Wilhelm Meister,' published by that extraordinary person, John B. Alden—is his name still remembered in the book business?"

Soon receiving autographed copy of a book just issued, "Peace and Prosperity, via Justice and Practical Sense," by this same Alden, now aged 75, Mr. Phelps wrote: "I read an immense number of books published by you. The American Book Exchange was a sign-post of good literature. . . . It is fine to see you so full of steam, interested in everything . . . as one should be."

Another man, out West, secretary of the Wisconsin Library Association, seeing the name on the title page of the same book, wrote with enthusiasm:

"I cherish yet, volumes bought for a song from that (to me) magic source of literary delights. It is with a thrill of rediscovery that I read the name once more. I hope you are not an illusion. It would be a keen delight to be assured that you are you."

Now comes another book, "Thrift and Prosperity," joint authors of which are U. S. Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, and this same Alden, which may prove epoch-making, if the public "takes" to its appeal to "Unfetter the Postal Savings Bank," doing which the authors are very positive in claiming will make it "the greatest, strongest bank in the world, an ally, not competitor, of existing banks," and especially making it the "greatest stimulus to thrift and saving" (consequently of prosperity) the world has ever seen. At book stores, $1; free at public libraries.

60 per cent discount (40c. net) to exclusive (only one agent at any P. O.) local agents who will PUSH on plans recommend. Particulars on request Trifling investment required. Alden, Neshanic, N. J.

$10 Reward for An Idea

Something over forty years ago Mr. Alden was the heaviest advertiser in the book publishing field—possibly was the inventor of the "sledge-hammer" style, "full page," with something new in it each time. He now prints a series of advertisements (copies free to any applicant) and offers $10 to any and all comers for "copy" for a more "effective" advertisement of his book, "Thrift and Prosperity," than either of them. It may be of any size, from an inch to a full page, and if he uses the "idea" at all he will send you $10.

DO YOU WANT ONE?

"We are in pressing need of an up-to-date directory of booksellers."

Not one publisher, but a dozen have thus written to us within a month, and judging from the many changes among the booksellers, especially the great number of new concerns starting, during the past three years, we fully appreciate the need.

To supply this need we will have ready for delivery on September 15th an entirely new edition of the AMERICAN BOOK-TRADE MANUAL, dated 1922, very carefully revised. It contains not only a directory of booksellers in the United States and Canada, but has lists also of dealers in Australasia, Central and South America, and in China. It contains in addition a directory of American book publishers, graded lists of book reviewing mediums, a directory of English publishers, etc. $5.

Every Publisher's office needs a copy or two of this useful tool.

Every Canadian—novel by Gilbert Parker has been a big success. You can depend upon CARNAC'S FOLLY to repeat books appeal to the best and biggest class of book buyers,—those who want vigorous and thrilling but wholesome stories from real life, the "come-back" customers who can be interested in all kinds of good books. GILBERT PARKER'S books have sold by hundreds of thousands. His photo-plays are among the most popular shown on the screen.

Sir Gilbert Parker

CARNAC'S FOLLY

CARNAC'S FOLLY is, in the opinion of many critics, worthy of a place with "The Right of Way" and "The Seats of the Mighty"—two novels which made Gilbert Parker famous. It is a story of the same country and is Parker at his liveliest and best. It will be recommended by friend to friend. There is that quality in it that makes one wish to share it with another. Carnac Grier, son the the great Canadian lumber king, is a character, who under the stress of almost crushing circumstances, becomes a heroic although pathetic figure. He appeals deeply to men and women alike. It is a vigorous tale of lovely women and strong men, of a struggle for supremacy in love, business and politics with a background of romantic French Quebec and the swirling Ottawa River with its lumber kings, and its big thewed men who delight in a fair conflict.

100,000 COPIES

The Philadelphia Public Ledger predicts that CARNAC'S FOLLY will be one of the Autumn novels that will sell 100,000 copies and over. It was also included in the New York Herald's selection of big Fall leaders.

Four striking illustrations. Handsome jacket in green, black and gold.

PEREGRINE'S PROGRESS

By JEFFERY FARNOL

Eleven years ago Jeffery Farnol's entrancing romance, "The Broad Highway," was a best seller month after month.

"Peregrine's Progress" is of the same period and scenes as "The Broad Highway," and we are confident, from opinions expressed by people of sound literary judgment who have read proofs of the story, that it will be as enthusiastically received as "The Broad Highway."

Everyone who liked "The Broad Highway" will enjoy this new book just as much. All that is necessary is to have them know that it has all the charm which made "The Broad Highway" so popular.

Remember that "Peregrine's Progress" will be advertised in newspapers and magazines to the extent of more then double the amount of advertising done by us in connection with any of the recent books by Farnol.

CAPTAIN BLOOD

A glorious romance of the Spanish Main by

RAFAEL SABATINI

"Holds the reader enthralled. At Sabatini's hands historical fiction becomes a thing of life." —Boston Transcript.

"A supremely absorbing yarn with a thrill on every page. You will follow this wild career though the tale keeps you in your chair all night." —Boston Herald.

"A splendid hero—fearless, skillful, a born leader of men. . . . Three hundred pages of battles, intrigues, duels and hairbreadth escapes. . . . Captain Blood is of a great family of swashbucklers with a family resemblance to D'Artagnan himself. A man not a type." —New York Herald.

Recommend it as the most economical book of the year to buy because it's a book that every member of the family will read with delight.

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY, Publishers

THE great, memorable Hichen's success was "The Garden of Allah." Everybody speaks of that. A new novel by Hichens, DECEMBER LOVE, deals with a theme just as daring, just as engrossing. Can a woman of sixty win the love of a man half her age? This story of Lady Sellingworth and Alick Craven surpasses in its poignancy and beauty the love idyl of Boris and Domini. Here is a conspicuously fine novel chock-full of the things which arouse discussion. The working out of a human relationship in which the mind and spirit of a man and woman play a tremendous part is bound to be an acute personal experience for every reader. DECEMBER LOVE is a notable sales opportunity for every bookseller.

THE AMERICAN BOOK TRADE JOURNAL
FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT

September 16, 1922

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men of course do seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves, by way of amends, to be a help and ornament thereunto."—BACON.

The Publishers' Responsibility

THERE have been, at times, suggestions that the publisher was an unneeded go-between in the author's contact with his public, but his importance not only to the financial return of the author but to the healthtul development of book distribution is being increasingly demonstrated, if it ever needed demonstration.

There is still another aspect of the importance of the publisher in the book field, and that is the fact that a publisher's name carries a certain responsibility for output that ought to come to have even greater weight in the present discussion on censorship.

The publishing house is a slowly developed institution, and publishers should be and necessarily are careful of putting their imprint on books that they do not fully believe in. A book without a publisher's name lacks from the start a certain backing. It is this aspect of publishing that points to the importance of having the publisher always put his name on any book that he prints and markets. The use of the words "privately printed" on a title page means in the book-trade that the publisher for some reason does not care to have his imprint permanently associated with that book, and no author would want to create that impression of his product.

The same feeling comes to a buyer's mind when an author takes over the marketing of his own book, even tho it has been printed for him by a publisher. The instinctive interpretation, whether true or not, is that the publisher does not wish to be responsible for the product, and the public will be much more suspicious of its value.

Still another situation arises when a book of a known author is published by a previously unknown firm in the publishing business, as is the case in a book receiving such marked promotion by circularization from Chicago. If the gesture of a publishing effort can damn a book, this book is unfortunate as far as the opinion of the book-trade is concerned. Those who try to profit by suggestive advertising are doing poor service to their own prosperity and poor service to the trade as a profession. Freedom of the press seems much more likely to become jeopardized by books when there is no publisher's name at the foot of the title page than when an established firm indicates its responsibility.

Popularizing Poetry

THE book-trade as well as the world of readers owes tribute to Harriet Monroe, whose magazine, Poetry, completes its twentieth volume, or tenth year. This decade has seen the appearance and recognition of a new and important group of American poets, undoubtedly the most significant as a whole, since the great new English group of seventy-five years ago. No single person has done more to obtain a public recognition or the wide-spread reading of these poets than Miss Monroe, and the fact that there are few bookstores which do not now carry representative volumes of current poetry is due to just such promotion work as this magazine has accomplished.

Miss Monroe tells us in the current number that if she had had better business ability, she might have rallied a larger audience and have found 10,000 people who would follow her magazine and who would give their full strength in supporting the poetry movement. Perhaps it is too much to hope that so large a group could be found, and, in spite of the increased interest and some astonishingly large sales, the poetry of such leaders as Robinson, Frost, Lindsay and Sandburg will not be called for in editions running up into many thousands. This does not throw reflections on the popularity of poetry, but the total sales in the field have always been more limited than those of fiction. We can only give our praise that we have seen in our day a revival of poetry, the most important field of literature.

Booktrade Directory Ready

"THE American Book-Trade Manual," published at the office of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, which has not been revised since 1919, has just come from the press and brings up to date the information about American booksellers and publishers. Shipments will begin on September 15th.

Fall and Winter Bookselling

WITH a good selling slogan that rivals the famous 'Say it with Flowers,' a striking poster, and above all, an atmosphere charged with increasing interest in books, the season of 1922-1923 promises to be the best book season in the history of the country," writes Marion Humble in the Year Round Bookselling Bulletin.

"Catching this current and growing interest in reading and book ownership, and turning it into actual sales, depends largely on the readiness of the individual bookseller. A well organized staff of salespeople will go far toward increasing sales. Distinct features of work should be in charge of those most interested and best able to push them, such as juvenile department, newspaper advertising, window dressing, outside connections with clubs, schools, libraries, etc.

"September is the time of return to interests most closely connected with books. The schools, the clubs, the churches, the libraries, the homes, regain their members who have been vacationing. Every bookstore ought to make a definite effort to reach these groups with a reminder of its year-round service. Post-card announcements, reading lists, invitations to a 'fall opening,' and other methods should be used to bring people back to the bookstore now. Newspaper advertising should stress not only books but service.

"Freshened counters and signs, new paint on the store front, and frequently changed window displays will make the store more attractive. A spirit of readiness and up-to-date information about stock on the part of clerks will help in ensuring the return of chance customers.

"Books are in the air; the newspapers and magazines are carrying more book reviewing pages and book articles than ever before. People want books. The bookseller must make it easy to get them."

Notice

The next issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY will be the big "Fall Announcement Number" with its Index to all the new books of the season, ready or forthcoming. Extra copies will be furnished at the nominal cost of 15 cents. Send your order early for "extras" so that your clerks will get full use of the Index.

THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

New Promotion Cards

THE striking new poster of the Bookselling Campaign has been most successfully reproduced in post-card form, and already the committee has received orders for a printing of 180,000 to be supplied to the trade at $5 per 1000. This card with its brilliant coloring and suggestive new slogan is suitable for all forms of bookselling promotion, and booksellers are urged to send in their orders so that as large a number as possible can be run at one time. If 1,000,000 people could receive this card and be reminded that this fall it is time to say, "Why Not Books?" an impetus would be given to the final months of 1922 business that would carry thru into all succeeding activities. The black and white reproduction of the poster gives no idea of its effectiveness, but many have now seen the poster, which was mailed on September 5th, and can get some idea of the appearance of the postcard.

Industrial Property and International Conventions

ON the occasion of a June trip to Paris of Dr. Röthlisberger, director at Berne of the International Bureaux of industrial, literary and artistic rights, and of Mr. Gariel, the vice-director, the French group of the "International Industrial Association," and the "International Literary and Artistic Association" organized a congress of studies preparatory to the revision of the Paris and Berne conventions which is to take place at the Hague in 1924. This congress, whose debates were conducted by Mr. Maillard, president of the French group, in the presence of not only many representatives of industrial and commercial syndicates, but also of Mr. Drouets, director of industrial rights for the French minister of Commerce, made a critical examination of the general convention of union and of the question of patents of invention. A resolution was passed on the subject of the national methods recommending absolute reciprocity between countries. The congress further considered an international ruling on the question of trade-marks, of the suppression of false labels of origin, and of unfair competition. Dr. Röthlisberger announced in one of the final sessions that the upright attitude of France placed that country at the head of the movement.

Censorship Beaten in New York Court

Magistrate Lets Thomas Seltzer Publish Three Criticized Books

ONE of the most widely discussed cases in book censorship that has ever been before the courts was decided on Tuesday, September 12th, in favor of the publisher, and "Casanova's Homecoming" by Arthur Schnitzler, "Women in Love" by D. H. Lawrence and "A Young Girl's Diary" can now be marketed.

The case was brought before Magistrate George W. Simpson in the West Side Court, New York, on August 1st, the complaint having been made against these three books by John S. Sumner, Secretary of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice. The books were seized at the office of the publisher, Thomas Seltzer, at 5 West 50th Street, and a salesman at Womrath's, Mary H. Marks, was made joint defendant for having circulated "A Young Girl's Diary" to divers persons.

Following the rendering of the decision, Counsel for Mr. Seltzer announced that a suit would be instituted against Mr. Sumner and the Society for the losses sustained by Mr. Seltzer since the litigation was commenced. The amount of the damage is not yet determined, but it was said that twenty-five thousand dollars would be about the figure. Mr. Sumner on hearing the decision said he was not disheartened. "We cannot win every case. It is simply a case of the Magistrate's opinion differing from the opinion of the Society and the opinion of the people who called our attention to the book."

A great tide of public discussion came into the press as a result of this case, which has not yet died away. The widespread interest in the censorship of movies and the pending arrangement for judging criticized plays after production by a jury system, made the whole question of censorship of unusual public interest, and the status of book censorship had been rendered more important thru the recent suppression of Rabelais at Cincinnati and the case of "Mlle. de Maupin" in New York, where the bookseller had won against the Society.

In the newspapers in July, Mr. Sumner had stated that the publishers and authors were ready to agree to a plan to submit new manuscripts to a jury, but this statement was promptly denied by both authors and publishers. This discussion made the opponents of indiscriminate censorship the more anxious to get a clear-cut decision. Mr. Seltzer, by careful preparation of the case and by a dignified handling of testimony thru his Counsel Jonah L. Goldstein, gave the Magistrate opportunity to get an adequate view of the public's attitude and the Assistant District Attorney, James J. Wilson was inclined in his prosecution to admit all valid testimony and thus give a well-rounded hearing.

During the five weeks that have elapsed, the Magistrate has read all three of the books, and examined numerous exhibits and clippings bearing on the authors and the books. In Judge Simpson's opinion, all three books are "a distinct contribution to the literature of the present day."

"Mere extracts" continued the Judge, "separated from their context do not constitute criteria of whether the books are obscene, within the meaning of the law," and, he continued, "books will not be banned by law merely because they do not serve a useful purpose or teach a moral lesson."

Many citations embodied in the decision render the whole report important to future discussions and the full text is printed below.

Among the witnesses at the trial on August 1st were Carl Van Doren, Gilbert Seldes, Miles M. Dawson, Dr. Adolph Stern, Dr. Gregory Stagnell and Mrs. Dorothea Brande; and Mr. Seltzer had gathered comments and opinions of authorities on both sides of the water.

In his statement on the decision Mr. Seltzer says:

"This is not alone my victory; it is the victory of the entire reading public. The people have shown where their sympathy lies. From the very beginning they made it their own case, and the press thruout the country has faithfully reflected the public indignation felt at the unwarranted attempt to suppress books which our best scholars and our most discerning critics have declared to be great works of genius.

"Technically it was a case of the people vs. Thomas Seltzer. In reality it was a case of the people vs. Mr. Sumner. The people have shown clearly that they recognize the menace of literary censorship, and they have served notice on Mr. Sumner that they will not tolerate dictatorship of what books they may read and what books they may not read. They have the right to choose their reading matter for themselves, and they mean to exercise that right.

"Indirectly they have expressed their confidence in the American book publishers, and their confidence is well placed. I know of no finer body of men than the American publishers both as to character and intelligence. They may well be trusted to do the right thing in the pursuit of their calling.

"That such men may at any time be subjected to the indignity of having their places of business invaded by self-constituted moral censors is preposterous. These self-appointed guardians of public morality can, at any time they in their infinite wisdom see fit, enter the office of any publisher and proceed to act as tho the whole place belonged to them. It is a condition which cannot be tolerated. The American people, I am sure, will soon find a legal way of putting a stop to it.

"Judge Simpson has performed a great act of justice. Justice was, of course to be expected from a judge. But Judge Simpson has done more. He has shown himself to be also a fine judge of literature, a man who appreciates literary values and who knows good books. The people of the State of New York have reason to congratulate themselves on having men on the bench of such breadth of mind and tolerance. I also wish to express my appreciation of the manner in which the District Attorney, Mr. Wilson conducted the case. He was not bent on obtaining a conviction irrespective of the merits of the case.

"I have instructed my attorney to take immediate action against Mr. Sumner and his Society for the Suppression of Vice."

Decision by George W. Simpson, City Magistrate:

This is an arraignment under section 1141 of the Penal Law. Summonses were issued and informations drawn on the complaint of John S. Sumner, Secretary of the Society for the Suppression of Vice.

The defendants are Thomas Seltzer, as publisher of the three books involved, and Mary H. Marks, a circulating library employee, charged with loaning, for a consideration, one of the books, "A Young Girl's Diary" to divers persons.

The three books which constitute the subject matter of the alleged offense are:

(a) "Casanova's Home-coming;"

(b) "Women in Love;"

(c) "A Young Girl's Diary."

(a) "Casanova's Home-coming" was written by Dr. Arthur Schnitzler of Vienna, Austria, a leading man of letters. It is the story of the last love-affair in his declining days of one Casanova, famous for his Memoirs.

(b) "Women in Love" was written by D. H. Lawrence, an English novelist. The author attempts to discover the motivating power of life. He writes of the elemental passions of men and women.

(c) "A Young Girl's Diary" is an alleged chronicle, entered daily by its anonymous author (asserted to be the daughter of a Viennese Judge) of her life between the ages of eleven and fifteen. A reading of this book leaves one with the feeling of incredulity that a child of that age had written it. But whether the story is genuine or not is here immaterial.

The evidence is that "Casanova's Home-Coming" and "Women in Live" were each produced for subscribers only in a limited edition of 1250 copies. Ten dollars was the price of "Casanova's Home-Coming;" fifteen dollars for "Women in Love."

Section 1141 of the Penal Law, among other things, forbids the publishing, selling, loaning, giving away or having in possession with intent to sell, loan or give away any book, picture or writing that is obscene, lewd, lascivious, filthy, indecent or disgusting. A violation of this section is a misdemeanor punishable by not more than one year's imprisonment or one thousand dollars fine, or both.

It is conceded that defendant Seltzer published, possessed with intent to sell and did sell the three books, and that Mary H. Marks did loan one of these books, "A Young Girl's Diary" to various persons.

The sole question, therefore presented is: are the books in question, as a matter of law, "obscene, lewd, lascivious, filthy, indecent or disgusting" within the meaning of this statute? If the answer is in the affirmative, the defendants should be held; if in the negative, they should be discharged.

To properly answer this question an examination of the authorities both as to the meaning of the statute and as to the methods employed to determine that meaning becomes necessary.

The testimony of literary critics, and the clippings of various newspapers and magazines submitted by consent; not as evidence but merely to refresh the Court's common knowledge, nearly all praise the books as important contributions to the literature and thought of the age. Two physicians of eminence testified that "A Young Girl's Diary" has a great educational value in sex education of the young. This evidence, admitted to indicate to the Court "common knowledge," is no "evidence" at all on the point of whether or not, in law, the books are obscene and indecent. No expert testimony is required to determine that. Whether a book is obscene or not falls within the range of ordinary intelligence. (People vs. Muller, 96 N. Y. 408, 48 AN, Rep. 623.)

The question is how will the books affect the ordinary person in whose possession a copy of the book is likely to fall, (People vs. Muller, 96 N. Y. 408, Supra; Regina vs. Hicklin, L. R. A. 3 Q. B. 623.)

The community has the right to protect itself from obscene and indecent books, (People vs. Muller, 32 Hun, 213).

By enacting Section 1141 of the Penal Law the Legislature sought to prevent and prohibit the production and circulation of books that would lower the moral standards of the community. Courts must give force to the statute. And they must give to the language employed by the statute the meaning intended by the Legislature. What do the words "obscene, lewd, lascivious, filthy, indecent or disgusting" mean? The statute does not define these words, but the cases construing it have amply defined them, (People vs. Eastman, 188, N. Y. 478; People vs. Muller, 96 N. Y. 408; People vs. Brainard & Harper & Bros., 192 App. Div. 816; Halsey vs. Society for the Suppression of Vice (decided by Court of Appeals, New York Law Journal July 22nd, 1922).

The test employed in these cases is not whether the publication is scurrilous, vile, vulgar or generally reprehensible.

The criterion laid down by the Courts of this State in determining whether a book is prohibited by Section 1141 is whether a reading of the book, as a whole, by a normal person, would excite him to lustful and lecherous desires. In the leading case on the subject, People vs. Muller, (Supra), the Court of Appeals said:

> "It is to be observed that the statute does not undertake to define obscene or indecent pictures or publications but the words used in the statute are themselves descriptive * * *
> "It is a false delicacy and mere prudery which would condemn and banish from sight all such subjects as obscene, simply on account of their nudity. If the test of obscenity or indecency in a picture or statue is its capability of suggesting impure thoughts, then indeed all such representations might be considered as indecent or obscene. The presence of a woman of the purest character and of the most modest behavior and bearing may suggest to a prurient imagination images of lust and excite impure desires, and so may a picture or statue not in fact indecent or obscene * * *
> "We think it would also be a proper test of obscenity in a painting or statue whether the motive of the painting or statue, so to speak, as indicated by it, is pure or impure; whether it is naturally calculated to excite in a spectator impure imaginations, and whether the other incidents and qualities, however, attractive, were merely accessory to this as the primary or main purposes of the representation."

The standards thus set up by the Court for the measure of decency or obscenity of publications, have been later followed and stated in succinct form in People vs. Eastman, 188 N. Y. 478. Judge Cullen there wrote: "From the context of the statute it is apparent that it is directed against lewd, lascivious and salacious or obscene publications, the tendency of which is to excite lustful and lecherous desire."

No other meaning could be given to the words used in the statute and maintain the most essential attribute of our criminal law—predicability. For, it is predicability more than any other factor that makes justice according to law preferable to justice without law.

In judging the three books involved herein I do not take into consideraton the intent of the defendants in publishing and circulating them. Intent is not an element of the offense under Section 1141. Therefore the absence of bad intent or the presence of good intent is immaterial. The statute makes the selling or the possession with intent to sell an obscene or indecent book a misdemeanor.

However, whilst the intent of the defendant is immaterial, the motive, so disclosed by the book itself, from a reading of it, is material, (People vs. Muller, supra; Halsey vs. New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, supra). That is, if from a reading of these books, any or either discloses a motive that is not "naturally calculated to excite in a spectator impure imaginations," they are not banned by the law.

Mere extracts separated from their context, selected paragraphs or pages, taken by themselves, do not constitute criteria of whether the books are obscene and indecent, within the meaning of the statute. The book must be judged as a whole (Halsey vs. N. Y. Society for the Suppression of Vice, (decided by the Court of Appeals; reported in the New York Law Journal, July 22nd, 1922); St. Hubert Guild vs. Quinn, 118 N. Y. Supp. 582).

In the recent case of Halsey vs. The New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, the Court, in dealing with "Mademoiselle De Maupin" by Gautier, says thru Judge Andrews: "It contains many paragraphs, however, that taken by themselves are vulgar and indecent. No work may be judged from a selection of such paragraphs alone. Printed by themselves, as would a similar collection selected from Aristophanes or Chaucer or Boccaccio, or even from the Bible, they might doubtless, as a matter of law, come within the prohibition of the statute. In the Halsey case, the Court of Appeals made less illiberal the test set out in the Muller case (96 N. Y. 408), which latter case was strictly adhered to in People vs. Brainerd (supra), in the first instance. (Magistrates' Court) which was prior to the Halsey case decision in the Court of Appeals.

The same principle of law, governing the manner in which publications should be judged, is also laid down in St. Hubert Guild vs. Quinn, (Supra). The Court there, at page 584, says:

"The judgment of the court below is based upon a few passages in each of these works, and these passages have been held to be of such a character as to invalidate the contract upon which the action has been brought. These few passages furnish no criterion by which the legality of the consideration of the contract can be determined. That some of these passages, judged by the standard of our day go farther than enhance the value of these books, can be admitted without condemning the contract for the sale of the books as illegal. The same criticism has been directed against many of the classics of antiquity and against the works of some of our greatest writers from Chaucer to Walt Whitman, without being regarded as sufficient to invalidate contracts for the sale or publication of their works."

Books will not be banned by law, merely because they do not serve a useful purpose nor teach any moral lesson. (People vs. Brainard & Harper & Bros. 192 App. Div. 816.) In that case the publication in question was a book entitled "Madeleine." It was alleged to be an autobiography by an anonymous author, a public prostitute. The Appellate Division, holding the book not violative of Section 1141, did so altho it declared the book served no useful purpose and taught no moral lesson. The Court, speaking thru Justice Smith, said: "I can see no useful purpose in the publication of the book. I cannot agree that it has any moral lesson to teach."

I have read with sedulous care "Casanova's Home-Coming," "Women in Love" and "A Young Girl's Diary." Following the tests laid down by the cases in this State, both as to the manner of judging publications and as to the meaning of the statute, I do not find anything in these books which may be considered obscene, lewd, lascivious, filthy, indecent or disgusting. On the contrary, I find that each of them is a distinct contribution to the literature of the present day. Each of the books deals with one or another of the phases of present thought. They are not written in a manner that would incite impure imaginations and lustful desire in the reader of ordinary intelligence.

Pornographic tides should be stemmed, but distinction must be drawn between that which is merely obscene and that which the higher Courts' tests allow and sanction. It has been said, with some justice, that the policy of pouncing upon books too frank for contemporary taste, without regard to the motive or purpose for which they were written, or the use to which they are to be put, is objectionable and should be curbed. As the eminent publisher, Mr. Henry Holt wrote in the New York Times of May 3th, 1922: "The family requires that the sexual passion be kept within limits. Within those limits, the rousing of it by the beauty of the opposite sex is among the most beneficent and most productive processes of nature."

It is my opinion that these books do not impinge upon those limits.

It is appearing to me that the crime mentioned in the summonses and informations herein has not been committed, and that there is not sufficient cause to believe the defendants Thomas Seltzer and Mary H. Marks guilty of violating section 1141 of the Penal Law, the said summonses and informations are hereby dismissed and the defendants are hereby discharged.

George W. Simpson, City Magistrate.

100 Books on the Theater and Drama*

By Gordon Whyte of "The Billboard"

IN preparing this list of "One Hundred Books on the Theater and Drama" it has been the aim of the writer to make one that will give a comprehensive view of the stage in all times and countries. No attempt has been made to give a list of "best one hundred books." Such attempts, in other fields of literature, have always simmered down to a list of the one hundred books which pleased the compiler. As such, they have had their value, of course, but the task of selecting a given number of "best books" is beyond the ability of one man, as it is beyond his capacity to read and assimilate all the books in the world. It is likewise beyond the capacity of any one man to read all the books written on the drama and theater. The catalog of only one collection has over 3,500 books listed and it would require a busy lifetime of reading to wade thru these alone.

The selection of this list was further narrowed by eliminating all books which were not available in the English language, and no plays are included. Particular stress is laid on the history of the stage from the belief that a comprehensive view of any subject can only be acquired by a thoro knowledge of each stage of its development. These stages are recorded in the histories and furnish the standard by which progress can be observed and evaluated. We read the lessons of the present, and predict the future by comparison with the past in the Art of the Theater, exactly as we do in politics and economics.

In any reading list on the theater it is natural that the so-called "legitimate" stage should demand and get the largest number of titles. However, the collateral branches of the stage have not been neglected, and pageantry, music, vaudeville and the motion picture have been given representation. They are necessary to a comprehensive view of the theater, but in this list must be given a place far more subordinate than their relative importance in the scheme of things theatrical really entitles them to. This comes about from two reasons: First, because this, within the knowledge of the writer, is the first list of this nature that has ever been compiled and it seemed wise to restrict it largely to the theater proper; and, secondly, because in the case of pageantry, vaudeville and the motion picture, there are but few authoritative books, and, as for music, it has a separate literature of its own which can be tapped easily by those interested. In this list but two books on music are included, one which gives an excellent resumé of the subject both in theory and practice, and the other which is directly allied with the stage.

The reference works in this list are standard, tho it is a matter of regret that the American stage has not been surveyed with the accuracy and fullness which has been the lot of the British stage. This is a task awaiting the energy of some painstaking writer. At present the records of the American theater, at least since 1900, are in a state of chaos and sadly need classification. In the period before 1900 they were brought together by T. Allston Brown in his "History of the New York Stage," but the task was not well done, the work being full of inaccuracies. Such as it is, it is the best record we have of plays and players, but the whole job needs doing over.

Biography has been given a prominent place, not so much because of the light which it sheds on the subject of the biography as the view it gives of the state of theatrical art at that particular period. Many of the biographies cited are most valuable for this purpose. The theory of dramatic technique is given generous representation, as is the so-called "New Movement" in the theater. The "little" theater has given rise to a formidable literature of its own, and a selection of this has been made.

It is hardly necessary to give consideration in detail to the books in the list. Their titles, as a rule, give an excellent indication of the nature of their contents and will speak for themselves. However, the writer believes that the "key" book of this list, as well as that of any dramatic library, is "A History of Theatrical Art," by Karl Mantzius. This remarkable work is in six volumes and painstakingly describes the state of theatrical art from ancient times to the middle of the nineteenth century. It was written by an actor who was at once a scholar. It is unequaled for reference purposes and any particular phase of the theater which may not be covered in the other books in this list will generally be found in Mantzius, within the limits of the time his volumes cover.

The writer realizes that this list must be incomplete. It is impossible to sum up the whole of the theater and the drama in one hundred books. Bearing that in view, the list must be looked upon as an attempt, and an attempt only, to suggest what can be learned about the stage from books. As such he hopes that it will fulfill its purpose.

The Bret Harte Trail

AN interesting indication that it is not alone eastern cities that may gather visitors and create local interest by literary associations is shown by the enterprise of the Stockton Chamber of Commerce, California, which has just published a map in color of what it calls "The Bret Harte Trail," covering the district from Stockton to the Mountains, and not only showing the roads for the automobilists but indicating the places which are so intimately connected with the works of Bret Harte and also Mark Twain. That such a map makes the works of these authors more interesting and a trip more memorable goes without saying.

Here will be found the location of Mark Twain's cabin, and the habitat of "The Jumping Frog of Caleveras." Here also will be found such magic names to the Bret Harte lover as Poverty Flat, Roaring Camp, Sandy Bar, Red Gulch, Poker Flat, Tennessee's Cabin, Smith's Pocket, etc. This map will serve good purpose to the libraries and bookstores of the district and should point the way to at least a local revival of the reading of these classic stories of the Sierras.

CARL SANDBURG'S "Rootabaga Stories," published by Harcourt, will be one of the notable fall juveniles. The book has fascinating illustrations. Some of the stories have been appearing in the Designer, where they have also been charmingly illustrated.

The Reading Age

EVERY year over 1,000,000 children come to the reading age, a new public constantly coming forward, and each new person with the reading habit becomes the potential customer for "Mother Goose," Aesop's "Fables," and so thru the list of indispensable books. It is this constant renewing of the reading group that makes the selling of children's books so important and so interesting. Adults remain at the same reading age for perhaps fifty years; but with each year or two of advance in the child's age there come entirely different reading interests in ever new fields. It brings vast totals into view to consider what would be the effect on the bookstores if every one of our children was provided with let us say, two new books for his own library every twelve months. Perhaps some day this may become a commonplace of family budgets.

DR. DESCOUR of the French Army has written a story of the work of Pasteur, just published by Stokes, with the title "Pasteur and His Work."

CLINTON T. BRAINARD, President of Harper & Brothers and of the McClure Syndicate, has secured for those companies not only the rights to the ex-Kaiser's memoirs but the memoirs of Asquith and Viviani, both of which will appear in book form after their serial publication.

A New Type of Book Exposition at Leipzig

By Dr. Karl Blanck

BOOK exhibitions upon a large scale have been agitating European bookmen ever since the exhibition at Leipzig was terminated so disastrously by the outbreak of the war. But nearly all these enterprises floated in the years which followed the close of the war, have been lacking in one thing—the adaptation of the exhibition to the needs of the great masses of book readers. The exhibitions have been either exclusive bibliophile affairs which catered only to a small, highly-cultured and prosperous circle of book-lovers, or they were mere book-markets, publishers' expositions more like fairs than anything else, giving the professional bookman new and valuable suggestions, but devoid of all charm for the layman, who was unable to trace any dominant idea in these wildernesses and labyrinths of books.

The exhibition in Berlin, "Buch und Bild" (Book and Picture) committed the error of assembling the products of the most hetereogenous publishing houses in long-drawn-out rows, devoting altogether too much attention to the decorative treatment of the walls, which simply outsplendored and outshrieked the books. In spite of certain new beauties and excellent features, the same mistake was made at the recent international book exposition at Florence. It is small wonder that the public leaves such exhibitions with a feeling of weariness, for no matter how meritorious they may be in themselves, the arrangement, according to the reputation or the personality of publishers, leaves a commercial smack in the mouth. Altogether too little attention was paid to the peculiar and particular psychology of the various classes of visitors.

Book Rather Than Background

An excellent attempt to strike a new note was embodied in the exhibition which took place at Frankfort-on-the-Main in 1920 under the title "Das deutsche Buch." Here the book was presented in its proper individual environment, and a number of rooms were arranged according to the tastes of the bibliophile or the requirements of a profession. But the excessive subordination of the book to its elegant surroundings, gave the book the appearance of being a mere decorative part in the general plan. The dominant thought, however, was a very fertile one, and it is remarkable that no attempt was made to develop it further, until the Munich "Gewerbeschau" or Arts and Crafts Exhibition which is still in full swing. It is planned in Germany to devote a place of honor to the book in all future arts-and-crafts exhibitions; even industrial exhibitions must find a place for the books devoted to the various branches. The book must become the brain, the guide and the teacher—the spirit behind the material thing.

There is one fundamantal idea underlying the new book exposition which is to be opened at Leipzig on September 17, 1922. The scientific and publishing circles of the Leipzig People's Academy (Volksakademie) and the German Book Trade Association (Buchgewerbeverein) have cooperated. This idea is to make books the focal point and by means of skillful selection and combination to create for it an environment which will express its particular contents, so that each special group of books will be able to seize, and captivate its particular group of readers.

Reading Interests Wooed

This Exposition—the Deutsche Bücherschau—has, of course, also a popular educational end in view. This by a method similar to that adopted at the Frankfort Exhibition, shows a number of well-selected and equipped libraries, typical of the book needs of those engaged in professional or technical pursuits—such as the library of a workingman, an employé of the average kind, a school-teacher, a lawyer, etc. As the Society for Scientific Research is to hold its annual convention in Leipzig at the same period as the book-show, a number of special scientific libraries have been arranged.

But the center of gravity of the entire exhibition, as well as the new and original features is to be found in a kind of circular promenade among books. This division has been given the name "Man and the Book" (Der Mensch und das Buch) and it is here that the private interests of the average reading public are besieged, wooed and captured in order to attract the greatest number of people and win them to a permanent devotion to good works. The psychological formula for this campaign may be stated somewhat as follows: to utilize the desire of the working human being, not only to widen the field of knowledge in his own branch and speciality by means of books, but to find recreation in them, and release from the routine of everyday work. In addition to this, attention must be paid to the hobbies and passions which manifest themselves at different ages of the same individual, as well as to other psychological factors. The circular promenade begins—with man at the beginning—that is the child, to whom three divisions are devoted: "The Picture Book," "The World of the Fairy-Tale," "Rogues and Adventurers." Charming contrasts are afforded by such sections as "The Library of a Young Girl," and "The Book-nook in an Old Maid's Room," which lies directly opposite, one representing the tastes of a modern girl of twenty years, the other of a mature but single woman of forty.

Three groups devoted to the library of a wanderer or lover of walking, of a sportsman and of a lover of gardening, are opposed by the library of a lover of books, a lover of art and a lover of music. A very subtle relationship of the highly cultivated and complex modern reader to the intellectual creations of his day is expressed in the library of "The Melancholy One" of "The Lover of Idylls," and of "The Eccentric Person." The eternal romanticism of the human soul or that phase of it which seeks to escape from narrow and fettering limitations and to capture the glory and color of the whole wide world thru the power of the imagination finds a splendid stimulus in a section entitled, half-humorously, "The Odor of the Earth,"—embodying in part travel-books and in part "homeland" books. Another division brings the romantic in touch with the prolific literature which is at present devoted to the exotic. The cultural-historical department which bears the title "The Ages and the Nations" is introducted by the sub-division "Classic Germany," centering about the period of Weimar. "Man and the Universe" comprises the contemplation and the research of the cosmos, and leads on to the temple of philosophic "Weltanschauungen," in which we find "The Realm of the Mysterious," and "The Metaphysical" enthroned.

The peculiar charm which emanates from these psychological groups is accentuated still more by the composition and the decorative element afforded by the wall treatment in each of the bays. The inner content or significance of each group is given a clear emphasis by the choice of appropriate form and color in the arrangement of the artistic backgrounds. The spirit of the books is thus projected upon the wall surfaces. The book becomes the focal point of interest. For example, the juvenile books are surrounded on three sides by walls which seem to sing and vibrate with joyous light. The romantic-anacreontic basic note in the library of the man devoted to "Idylls" is expressed not only in the titles and contents and cover designs of the books, but is continued in a kind of garden trellis work upon the walls behind and at the sides. A strong contrast is afforded by the library of the "Melancholy One"—the Jacques temperament—in which serious and sober-looking volumes are set up against a dusky background, the only decoration of which consists of the "Melancholia" of Albrecht Dürer. Flames seem to shoot forth from the library of the Adventurer, the Daemonian-Phantastic One. The library of "The Eccentric Person" is based upon crass and violent contrasts, the sudden, the impulsive, the bizarre, full of vari-colored card-board covers of extreme modern patterns and backed up by wall-paper of a most restless design. A sultry, tropic glow of crimson, red and orange shimmers from the library devoted to the exotic.

The interest of the visitor must be concentrated upon the book,—the treatment of the walls, and the forms and colors intended to express an affinity with the book, must, therefore, be subordinated so as not to overcrow the book. Here and there a few suitable color-prints or engravings are used or a few small statuettes or the like, and in a few rather rare instances, a piece of appropriate furniture. These individual libraries are not too extensive, the object is to afford an easy and comprehensive survey. The shelves are combined with tables, and on these we find outspread newspapers, periodicals and illustrated treatises devoted to the same category of literature, science, art, philosophy or music.

A bureau of advice and information is attached to the exhibition for the benefit of visitors, and a series of lectures upon literary, bibliographic and musical subjects will be given by well-known authorities. A business office is also part of the book-show and orders are received and forwarded to the Leipzig retail trade thru the Volksakademie.

The first invitations to participate which were sent out by the Committee in charge of this exhibition met with a most unusual response on the part of German publishers. Up to the present writing over one hundred first-class firms, book, art and music publishers have sent in their exhibits, amounting to thousands upon thousands of carefully selected volumes. The success of this Book Exhibition in Leipzig is, therefore, assured, and it is to be hoped that the dominant motive and ideal behind this enterprise will help to carry it forward to an ever growing development towards perfection. It is also the purpose of the promoters of this new type of book-show to convert it into a travelling exhibition, for the people in all larger cities.

"Writing," remarked the skeptic, "is like pulling the trigger of a gun. If it is not loaded nothing happens." "But you can always load it," broke in the young enthusiast. "No," replied the skeptic imperturbably, "not unless you have ammunition."

Reminiscences of a Book Scout

By Joseph J. Barton

XIII. SAINTS AND INDIANS

IN a nearby town a couple of years ago, was an upholsterer and second-hand furniture dealer known to everybody, locally, as "Herman". Whether that was his first or last name I do not know, and it really isn't material. Herman was of genial disposition, could tell a passable story, and was an expert cabinet maker. He also possessed imagination, and that rare thing, a fine sense of humor.

In making a periodical visit, I found his store closed, and a "For Rent" sign tacked on the front. A competitor down the street in answer to my query of "Where has Herman moved?" expressed surprise that I had not heard of Herman's wonderful luck. He told me that one day last month Herman was examining an old picture, thinking he would restore its mahogany frame. He noticed the frame was constructed in a peculiar manner; there was a greater distance between the face and the board backing than was usual, and upon getting it apart had found this space packed with bills, five thousand dollars in all. With that amount of wealth at his command, he decided to enlarge his activities and had removed to a bigger town over in Pennsylvania.

The relator of this startling drama is a simple-minded, credulous individual and he was considerably "worked-up" in his telling of the wonderful find that Herman had made. But knowing Herman, I only asked him if he had seen any of the money, or any evidence of this new prosperity. It seemed he had not. not.

The thought that this had really happened never entered my head. I enjoy hearing or reading such yarns as these, and if you were anything like me when you were young, and read "Treasure Island," "The Gold Bug," "Warwick" and similar stories, you often wished you might participate in a search for pirate gold or any old kind of hidden treasure. But these are dreams, and they generally befall characters in fiction. I never found a cent in my life, and I never knew personally, anybody who did. That such a thing should happen to someone I knew, was a joke. If anyone told you such a story, wouldn't you smile cynically and unbelievingly?

However, I was walking thru the poorer section of Toledo not long ago, and I came to a store in which some ladies of a nearby church were holding their annual spring rummage sale. In the window was a large frame containing three pictures. Side by side across the upper half were Saint Thadeaus and Saint Mattheus, two old copper engravings, folio; below them was a tinted lithograph entitled "Jacques Cartier, his first interview with the Indians at Hochelaga, now Montreal, 1535. From the original cartoon by Andrew Morris; printed by Sarony in 1850.

As I stood there looking it over thru the window, two Italian ladies joined me; as nearly as I could interpret their conversation they were planning how they might get it home; it was large and it looked heavy. They were evidently much interested in the Saints—I wanted the Indians. While they continued their conversation, and they are strong on conversation, I went into the shop and bought the thing—two Saints, two Indians and a bunch of white men, for a nominal price. Just as I had completed its purchase, in came the ladies and were told the picture had been sold. Whether I was getting cussed or not I do not know—my knowledge of Italian is very limited—but it sounded hot.

The woman superintending the sale gave me permission to use a table in the rear of the store as I had explained that I did not want the glass or the frame, and I would like to leave them there; they might be able to sell them over again.

When I got the dust cover and the wooden back off, I found that inside the larger frame was another thin frame, and on that, carrying over the edges, was tacked a heavy piece of drawing paper; on this, were mounted the three pictures I have described. The back as it was lying before me, was linen, and that seemed queer, so I lifted a corner of the drawing paper with my knife and saw enough to tell me there was something else under the three pictures. It occured to me that this was no place to make discoveries, so I told the church ladies that I had changed my mind and I would keep the frame. I could not leave that picture there for those Italian women to paw over while I hunted a transport, so I slung it by its wire over my shoulder, and went down the street and found a small boy and express wagon. We got the picture into the hotel and up in my room, and I found there was another print mounted on the linen underneath the three; bright and fresh as the day it was printed. I do not think this print was deliberately hidden by someone who knew its value, but rather that its size offered a surface large enough to accommodate three pictures, which probably a later owner preferred. It is peculiar how some people will go to a whole lot of trouble to make something unattractive or ugly.

I saw Herman last week and asked him "How about that five thousand dollars you found in a picture?" He grinned amiably, threw up his hands and said: "It was Confederate". But somehow that explanation does not seem satisfactory or convincing. He now has a large well-lighted store, plenty of good stock, and his hair cut. I have grown less skeptical since my own experience. I wonder what Herman really did find.

Carnegies in Miniature

AMONG the widespread notices and news comment on the announcement of the list of best twenty-five books for a school library, a paragraph in the New York Evening Mail deserves quoting. It says:

"Here is a wondrous chance for any one to be a Carnegie in miniature. Endow some boy or girl that you love or that you want to make love you with this library. Not all at once, of course; that is not the way at all; but just trickingly, so that the full value of each book may be absorbed to the saturation point and each be loved individually."

It goes on to point out "that such a list would never have been compiled sixty or seventy years ago, even if every one of these books had been in existence then, for some solemn-faced individual would have tried to slip out 'Tom Sawyer,' to work in Baxter's 'Saints' Rest,' or pointed out the superiority of 'Sandford and Merton' to 'Alice in Wonderland.'"

A Perfected Window Display

A MOST carefully-thought-out plan for a striking window display has gone out to booksellers in connection with James Oliver Curwood's "The Country Beyond." In an article which the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY printed recently on the question of window displays and their characteristics, there were about as many dealers who wished to have displays large to fit big windows as wished to have them small to fit small size space.

A very neat accommodation to suit both cases has been worked out for this book which makes it particularly interesting. The pioneers on one side and the trapper on the other are separately printed and attached to the main background by cloth straps. If the window is large, these side wings can be moved out so that the complete spread is about six feet. If small, they can be moved closer in, and the cloth folds naturally and the cutting off of part of the mountain means no loss of value. The tent in the center is on a separate board, also, and the whole theme is bound together by common coloring. Another well planned feature is the fact that these two wings can be used separately for counter display after their value in the window has been accomplished. There are no tabs to fit together and nothing to break off in transit. The plan seems to be worth careful study by those preparing window material and will undoubtedly be of effective use in the fall bookselling.

If Winter Comes, Will Coal Be Far Behind?

Next winter ought to be a fine season for the British lecturers in this country. Because their only complaint about America has always been the overheating of hotels and sleeping cars.

Shakespeare Selling Plan Held Up

NEWSPAPER reports from Girard, Kansas, state that the Post Office has warned the Haldemann-Julius Company against using its present type of advertisements in which it has been promoting the sale of a set of Shakespeare in paper binding for $3.35. The advertisements, which appeared in 27 monthly magazines, carried a footnote stating that the buyer of a set could become a contestant for 12 free trips to Europe. This announcement placed the promotion under lottery restrictions, and the company is obliged to return all money received as a result of this advertisement. It is stated that a quarter of a million sets have been manufactured and an advertising campaign of $60,000 planned. The conditions of the contest were to be that a trip to Europe would be given to the 12 people who gave the publisher references thru which the greatest number of sets would thereafter be sold. This feature of the program will now be eliminated.

The Suppression of Keable

WHILE both New York and Boston have Societies interested in the strict observance of the law with regard to obscene books, action against a new book in New York usually means an action against the publisher and therefore curtailment of the whole supply. In Boston it is more likely to be an action against a book published in another city, and therefore only the local supply could be cut off by the magistrate's decision. This has been the case with "Simon Called Peter," which the booksellers, after the magistrate's opinion had been ascertained by the Watch and Ward Society, agreed to keep off their shelves. By error the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY two weeks ago stated that the publisher had since then more freely advertised the book in that section with an increased Boston sale. The increased sale has been thruout New England but not in Boston, it should be said. Boston booksellers are selling Keable's new novel but not "Simon Called Peter."

"Kimono" and Japan

A NEW YORK newspaper is to serialize "Kimono" by John Paris, published a year ago by Boni & Liveright, and has announced that the book had been suppressed in Japan because of its bitter criticism on the status of Japanese women. The paper quoted the English publishers as stating that the Japanese Government had confiscated or bought up all copies that had reached Japan. Later dispatches, however, to the Public Ledger state that the book is still available in Tokio bookstores and the suppression may merely have been a shortage of supply.

Emphasis by Good Printing

A NEW evidence of the appreciation of what fine printing can do in emphasizing books is shown in a carefully printed folder which Grosset & Dunlap have sent out addressed "To Every Bookseller." An appeal to arouse further interest in popular reprints does not usually take the form of special printing on deckle-edged paper, but because the presentation is new it carries the very message that the publisher wishes to put over. The circular emphasizes the high quality of the books put into the reprint series, as shown in such titles as "The Brimming Cup," "Miss Lulu Bett," "The Age of Innocence," "A Man for the Ages." The effect of the circular is to dignify the series mentioned.

Anatole France on the "Index"

THE placing of the books of Anatole France on the "Index Expurgatorius" has caused a great deal of comment and some misunderstandings as to what this list means. An explanation of the functions of the "Index" has been given in the New York Evening Post by Thomas Aquinas Van Wickel, O. S. D., to a correspondent who had suggested that the church was trying to influence the library shelves.

"Permit me to call to the attention of your readers the grave errors into which one of your readers, who signs himself 'Americus,' has fallen in his letter published in to-night's issue of your valuable paper.

"In the first place he complains that 'the library authorities, acting under orders of a religious sect, have refused to allow the public to read the works of Anatole France.' This is an absurdity, for no librarian, unless he be connected with a Catholic library, or with a Catholic college or university, or in a religious order, receives any orders from the Church. When a book has been placed on the 'Index' it has been after careful consideration and for sufficient reasons. The works of Anatole France, as well as others on the 'Index,' are placed there because they contain teachings dangerous to the faith or morals of our people, and it is for our welfare that we are warned in this manner against the reading of them. We are taught and we believe that our holy faith is our greatest treasure, and as a careful mother warns her child against those things which if handled will do her child physical harm, so does the Church warn her children against that which is dangerous or harmful to them. The general public is free to accept or to disregard her warning, but we are bound in conscience to heed her."

Prefaces

"WEBSTER defines a preface as 'something written as introductory to a book, usually by way of explanation of the object, scope, etc., of the composition,'" says the Princeton University Press.

"We admit, of course, that when employed for this purpose a preface can perform a useful service and be of real value. In general, however, we have a strong prejudice against the usual preface and believe that in the majority of cases it not only adds nothing to the value of the book, but in many instances may have an exactly opposite effect.

"In the first place we submit that if the reader of a "composition" is not able to discover the object himself the work is scarcely worthy of publication, and its defects cannot be remedied by a preface. If the 'composition' is well done its object, of course, is readily discernible and an explanatory preface is in such a case superfluous.

"But the majority of authors seem to think that a preface is the place to make excuses for the book they have written. Most of them write abject, humble little essays deprecating the value of their work, apologizing for its many faults. Which is plain hypocrisy. If they feel that the book is so unworthy, is it logical to suppose they will be so eager to assume the responsibility of its authorship? And if a book is worthy of publication, it certainly is not necessary to apologize for it. Perhaps the author thinks an apologetic preface indicates modesty on his part. Our opinion is that if the author himself thinks his book requires an apology, there is little or no reason for anyone else to disagree. Such a preface is better never written, and inasmuch as most of them adopt this tone we say that most of them are better omitted.

"In our humble opinion, therefore, the majority of books would benefit from lack of prefaces. We believe there are but two objects which justify their existence, one for purposes of acknowledgment and the second in order to supply the present-day reviewer with material."

BOOKS OF 101 DIFFERENT SIZES

Varying Book Sizes

IN making a study of the various sizes of printed matter, a committee appointed by the Bureau of Standards in Washington photographed the shelves of the University Press, Cambridge, representing books it had manufactured for various publishers. This showed in very clear relief the variations in size that exist in books that are of the same character. In the photograph, there are shown on the two shelves alone 101 different sizes and yet there are only 177 books.

Multiple Invoices for Cuba

THE Post Office Department at Washington has been informed by the Cuban Director General of Posts "that each package of merchandise of whatever value sent in the mails from the United States to Cuba must be accompanied with an invoice in quintuplicate when addressed for delivery in Habana, and with an invoice in quadruplicate when addressed for delivery in other parts on the island, all copies of which invoice, when the shippers are located at a place where there is a Cuban consulate, must first be presented at such consulate for certification. The certification fees to be charged are as follows:

Invoices for less than $5	$0.10
Invoices from $5 to $49.99	.50
Invoices from $50 to $200	2.00
For every additional $100 or fraction thereof	.25

The shipper need pay for certification of only the original copy of the invoice.

When there is no Cuban consulate at the place of origin, the invoices need not be viséed.

Packages for Cuba accompanied with invoices as above specified need not have customs declarations attached."

for
A GOOD SALES IDEA

The Sales Plan Contest opens with this announcement. Closes October 31, 1922. There is no time to lose—get in it now.

What is wanted is not an ingenious scheme that reads well—but ideas, plans, campaigns, that, though unusual, can actually produce results in the acid test of practice—that can justify the costs involved.

Open to Booksellers and Employees

This contest is open to any bookseller, or any bookstore employee, without restriction. It opens with this announcement and closes October 31st. The submission of a manuscript outlining a practical book merchandising plan, together with name, address and bookselling connection constitutes complete entry.

The Judges are:

Simon L. Nye, President, American Booksellers' Assn.

J. Joseph Estabrook, Vice-President, A. B. A.

Ward Macauley, of Macauley Brothers, Detroit.

They are recognized as practical booksellers.

The Award will be $100.00

Announcement of the winning plan will be made prior to December 2nd. It will be printed in January issues of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for the use of retail booksellers.

$10.00 will be paid for any other plans submitted which are judged worthy of printing and they will appear in later issues of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

All plans submitted should be typewritten. All details of the theory of the sales plan, its method of application, costs, signs, advertising, etc., should be carefully worked out. If the plan has actually been tested exact record of results should be presented. There are no limitations as to length of manuscript. It should be as brief as clarity permits, as lengthy as necessary for complete understanding.

HE'D AUTOSUGGEST AN AUTO

A gentleman called up a bookshop recently and asked if a copy of a book on autosuggestion was in stock. It was, so the gentleman sent for it. The messenger remarked while the book was being wrapped, "I don't see what Mr. B. wants that book for; he doesn't own an auto."

A MONGOLIAN TRAGEDY

Ho Kum was China's laureate;
  Her mandarins found all he sang
Not merely good, but also great,
  Even his trifles had that T'ang.

But tho all critics loved him well,
  This poor Ho Kum was not for long;
By jealous singers hacked he fell,
  The hatchets of that Hip Sing Tong.

More blest our poets, after all,
  Than those that, making Manchu songs
Paroled by critic hammers, fall
  By envious poetic Tongs.

A Week's Gleanings of Book-Trade News

LIONEL BARRYMORE is to be starred in Eugene O'Neil's new play, "The Fountain," this fall.

WORD COMES via London that Tauchnitz has put a ban on some American authors who were active anti-Germans during the war, such as Owen Wister and Gertrude Atherton.

VAN WYCK BROOKS was credited in our issue of August 19 with having written a new critical volume on Rousseau, the book which Huebsch announces, however, is a translation by Brooks of an address by Henri-Frederic Amiel.

A BIOGRAPHY of the late Lord Bryce is in preparation. Viscountess Bryce will be grateful to friends of Lord Bryce in this country if they will forward to her, in care of the Macmillan Company, any of his letters that they have preserved. The letters will be returned as soon as copies have been made.

MUCH NEW MATERIAL is to be included in the Manaton edition of the works of John Galsworthy, to be published by Scribner this fall. Besides the eighteen prefaces, written especially for this edition by Mr. Galsworthy, a number of short stories will be published for the first time in book form. Among them are "A Feud," "Timber," "Blackmail," "A Hedonist," "Santa Lucia," "The Man Who Kept His Form."

THE AUTHOR of "Two Little Misogynists" which will be published by Holt is Carl Spitteler, the Swiss writer, who won the Nobel Prize in 1919. Carl Van Doren says of this book: "It is one of those rare stories about children which unite shrewd observation of the comedy, with sympathetic understanding of the tragedy of childhood."

SIR GILBERT PARKER arrived in this country on the Homeric last week. He was promptly interviewed about censorship. He said: "It is ridiculous for one man to set himself up to decide what people shall and shall not read. It would be an attempt to impose his temperamental and intellectual limitations on the general public. The reading public is the best judge whether a book is moral or immoral. The laws in the States cover the question of obscenity and, when enforced, are sufficient safeguards for the general public."

JOHN V. A. WEAVER, author of "In American" and colyum conductor for the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, is to be married to Peggy Wood, who sang in "Maytime," "Buddies" and "Marjolane."

DWIGHT FRANKLIN is the sculptor of the model of Dr. Traprock and his dazzling white North Pole which is being sent out to dealers to help in the display of "My Northern Exposure."

"SCARAMOUCHE" by Rafael Sabatini, published by Houghton, has been dramatized by the author, who hopes to have it ready for production next spring. Sidney Blackmer will play the title rôle.

HEYWOOD BROUN tells an interesting anecdote in the New York World about Sinclair Lewis and his flirtations with popular approval "We met him some months before 'Main Street' was published and he spoke very proudly of the book he was doing. He mentioned the fact that it was being composed at a great financial sacrifice on his part. The Saturday Evening Post had published a number of his short-stories and he could, if he chose, go on making an excellent living with others of the same assured popularity. But he had felt the call to write something of a different sort. He realized, he said, that 'Main Street' could not possibly sell more than a few thousands, but he looked on it as his best work and he was going to go thru for it. He had made a gesture of renunciation and the great American public, erroneously assuming that he was a cheer leader, greeted him with a roar of 'Attaboy!'."

Trade-Mark Decision

Court gives Scribner's right to use "Made Easy" title.

THE details of the court decision in the case of E. J. Clode vs. Charles Scribner's Sons have brought out an important point of relation of trade-marks to copyright. In this case the facts show that Scribner published in 1912 a book called "Drawing Made Easy." In 1918, E. J. Clode published a series of books with such titles as "Spelling Made Easy," "Book-keeping Made Easy," "Drawing Made Easy," etc., and in his suit claimed that a reprinting of the book of Scribner constituted an infringement of his right to the words "Made Easy" in connection with a book on drawing.

The plaintiff did not claim to be the originator of the name but based his claim on the fact that he had published this series of books and secured the trade-mark thereon. Justice Smith of the Supreme Court of New York County said in his decision "that the plaintiff cannot, by securing a trade-mark, prevent the defendant from using a title which is attached to a book that was published long before the plaintiff adopted the name and which he copyrighted, nor can the defendant be prevented from using this name on subsequent editions of the same book. In order to recover, it has been held that the plaintiff must have an exclusive right to the use of the name by reason of prior adoption, and unless he can show such exclusive right, it seems clear that his securing a trade-mark therefor gives him no greater protection."

Decisions show that a trade-mark is not protectable if the owners cannot show an exclusive right to use that trade-mark and the words were in common use before it was granted. "There are cases," said Judge Smith, "which hold that the title of a copyright book is not protected in the copyright but an examination of these cases will show that in each of them the plaintiff was the author or owner of a play based on the original use of the name. The cases present an attempt to protect the rights of the first user. The case at bar is an attempt to destroy the rights of the first user."

JOHN MASEFIELD'S "Esther" was recently given very delightfully in the gardens of Wadham College. Penelope Wheeler, who does the Murray-Euripides plays, produced it, and acted the title rôle; and Masefield himself played the Ghost in most uncanny fashion. It acted well and was an artistic picture, with its brilliant costumes against the splendid trees of the garden.

The Marking of Imported Books

Customs House Ruling Effective September 15

UNDER instructions from the Treasury Department, the Customs House will put into final effect on September 15th the ruling of May 6th that hereafter all imported books must be permanently and conspicuously marked with the country of origin. This rule of Customs procedure has been in past years construed to allow use of the regular printer's marks, which very often are found on the last page of text instead of on the title page and sometimes give city of origin rather than country of origin.

The peculiarity of books over other merchandise is clearly shown in the effect of this ruling which would not be so troublesome on other items. Books manufactured in one year may still be selling from the same printing ten or twenty years hence, while other merchandise is much more promptly cleared up. This makes it difficult to get retroactive observance of the new ruling.

When this new order was first promulgated, the Customs House insisted that the marking should be on the title page, but in the last communication to the National Association of Book Publishers, the Chief of the Division of Customs states that this will be interpreted to mean also on the back of the title page. American publishers are taking active steps to see that books made abroad for this market are so marked, but the Publishers' Association is again appealing to Washington to see if books manufactured previous to this ruling may not be admitted under the old regulations. Even if this exception were granted, there is still bound to be a vast amount of difficulty, because, while the imprint will probably be correctly made on books made with this market in view, the majority of foreign books are made without the export conditions in mind, and it will be a long time before English printers change their customs.

Libraries importing a miscellaneous collection of current books will be especially troubled, and their committees have also been laboring with the Treasury Department endeavoring to get some relief. Rubber-stamping books is not considered a substitute for printing, as the regulations call for permanent marking rather than what might prove temporary. Old and rare books will be accepted under the regulation which provides that imported merchandise need not be marked when such marking would have any effect on the artistic value.

Obituary Notes

WILFRED SCAWEN BLUNT

WILFRED SCAWEN BLUNT, the English traveler, poet and writer on Imperial problems, died in London, September 11th, aged eighty-two years. A spectacular chapter in his long career was his arrest and imprisonment for two months in Galway, Ireland, for calling a meeting in a proclaimed district during the Home Rule agitation of Parnell and his followers. He was the author of seventeen books, of which the following are still in print: "Atrocities of Justice," "English Occupation of Egypt," "India Under Ripon," "Love Poems," "Love Sonnets of Proteus," "Poetical Works," "My Diaries," two volumes. He served as Secretary to the British Legations at Athens, Madrid, Paris, Vienna and Buenos Aires, and was a stock breeder on an estate of two thousand acres which he owned on the edge of the Sahara.

FREDERIC STEWART ISHAM

FREDERIC STEWART ISHAM, playwright and author, died of pneumonia on September 7. He was born in Detroit, March 29, 1866. He was on the editorial staff of the Detroit Free Press and other newspapers for 10 years. He was the author of: "The Case Vidal"; "The Toy Shop"; "History of the Detroit Light Guard"; "A Twice-Seen Face," 1892; "The Strollers," 1902; "Under the Rose," 1903; "Black Friday," 1904; "The Lady of the Mount," 1908; "Half a Chance," 1909; "The Social Buccaneer," 1910; "The Treasure," 1910; "A Man and His Money," 1912; "Aladdin From Broadway," 1913; "Nothing But the Truth," 1915 (dramatized and presented at the Longacre Theatre, N. Y. 1916-17, by William Collier; 18 months at Savoy Theatre, London, 1918-19; 4 months, Paris, 1918); "This Way Out," 1917; "The Daisy Pushers," with Max Martin, 1919; "The Nut-Cracker," 1919; "Blue Is True," 1919.

SAMUEL FALLOWS

SAMUEL FALLOWS, a bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church, died at his home in Chicago, on September 4th. Born in 1835, his life was full of activities as soldier in the Civil War, preacher, author, lecturer and promoter of civic improvements. At one time he was State Superintendent of Public Instruction for Wisconsin, and later became President of the Wesleyan University at Bloomington, Ill. His published writings include a "Dictionary of Synonyms and Antonyms," "Health and Happiness," "Bible Looking Glass," "Story of the American Flag," and he collaborated in the publication of the "Human Interest Library," a four volume set sold by subscription.

GEORGE R. SIMS

GEORGE R. SIMS, author, journalist and playwright, died in London on September 14th. His most popular play was "The Lights of London," and his poem, "'Osler Joe," so often quoted, was made famous in America by Mrs. Leslie Carter's public recitation of it just before her debut as an actress. Born in 1847, his first attempt at literature was a series of jingling rhymes, the "Lunatic Laureate," printed in Fun, a London weekly. He was one of the founders of, and a constant contributor to, the Referee. Many of these contributions under the name of "Dragonet" were published in book form. In addition he published a number of mystery novels and wrote his autobiography under the simple title, "My Life."

The Weekly Record of New Publications

THIS list aims to be a complete and accurate record of American book publications. Pamphlets will be included only if of special value. Publishers should send copies of all books promptly for annotation and entry, and the receipt of advance copies insures record simultaneous with publication. The annotations are descriptive, not critical; intended to place not to judge the books. Pamphlet material and books of lesser trade interest are listed in smaller type.

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent for record. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. When not specified the binding is cloth.

Imprint date is stated [or best available date, preferably copyright date, in bracket] only when it differs from year of entry. Copyright date is stated only when it differs from imprint date: otherwise simply "c." No ascertainable date is designated thus: [n. d.]

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q (4to: under 30 cm.); O (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tf. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ff. (48mo: 10cm.); sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow.

Titles beginning with an unimportant word are inverted to be listed under their subject when possible.

Rare Books, Autographs and Prints

DICKENS'S clock which hung many years in John Foster's library, has been presented to the London Library.

The Heartman Auction Company, Inc., of Perth Amboy, N. J., will hold an important sale of Americana on September 25 consisting of selections of various perriods and from a number of consignments.

What is believed to be the last painted portrait of President Lincoln has been recently acquired by the Chicago Historical Society. It has been hidden away for nearly fifty years in a storeroom and has only recently come to light.

Thoms & Eron, Inc., 34 Barclay Street, have just purchased the library of the late R. J. A.

Boreman, of Parkersburg, W. Va., containing some 15,000 volumes and consisting of Americana, de luxe editions of American and English authors, and miscellaneous books in all departments of literature.

Personal souvenirs of the late Enrico Caruso, the famous tenor, including autographed photographs, a set of box seat tickets for first night performances bearing his signature, programs signed by him of his opening performances and some of his letters, the property of B. Fuetto, were sold at the Broadway Art Galleries September 13.

Tercentenary tributes to Andrew Marvell, 1621-1678, will be paid in a volume soon to be issued by the Oxford University Press. Among its contributors are Augustine Birrell, T. S. Eliot, Edmund Gosse, H. J. Massingham and J. C. Squires. It will also contain an official record of the tercentenary celebrations at London and Kingston-upon-Thames.

An interesting collection of the etchings of Emil Fuchs is now on view at the Keppel Galleries. Mr. Fuchs, sculptor, painter and musician, has begun work with the etcher's needle only recently. The twenty-six etchings on view are chiefly portraits and studies of the nude.

Forty-two negro artists are holding an exhibition of paintings and other art works at the branch of the New York Public Library, 163 West 136th Street. Altogether there are 96 subjects shown. The contributors have sent their works from various sections and the exhibition will be open to the public until October 1.

It is reported that the Sulgrave Institution has decided to make an effort to purchase the last home of President Monroe, a three story brick building at Prince and Lafayette Streets. If acquired, the house, now used as a rag picking establishment, will be restored and maintained as a Monroe Memorial. According to the present plans, it will be dedicated and opened to the public on December 8, 1923, the one-hundredth anniversary of the promulgation of the Monroe Doctrine.

The commune of Roisin, in Belgium, is about to dedicate a monument to the memory of its citizens who fell in the war, or lost their lives in captivity. To the list of names of those who made the supreme sacrifice for their country has been added that of the poet Verhaeren, the commune ruling that as he met death in a railroad accident on his return from a meeting for the benefit of Belgian war relief activities he was deserving of the honor.

A facsimile of the original edition of Dickens's "A Christmas Carol" will be published during the autum in England by Cecil Palmer. The volume will contain the colored illustrations and wood cuts by John Leech, the former, which in the original edition were hand colored, having been copied exactly by a special process entailing six printings. The type and binding will be identical with the first edition. The book will have an introduction by G. K. Chesterton and a preface on its history by B. W. Matz, editor of The Dickensian. Three facsimile reproductions from the manuscript of the story will also be included in it.

The recent references in the press to the old story of Mr. Finney and his turnip, said to be the theme of Longfellow's first poem written at the age of seven, has brought out a letter written by the poet on July 11, 1881, to George Sanderson of this city in which he says: "I am happy to say that I never wrote the lines you sent me; that I never had a schoolmaster by the name of Finney; that I never went to a school that had a barn near it. These lines are the work of some wag who wishes to amuse himself at my expense."

A collected edition of John Galsworthy's works will soon be published in London in twenty-one volumes, limited to 500 sets. A limited edition of 750 copies will be published by Charles Scribner's Sons in America. The first three volumes will contain "The Forsyte Saga;" the last four will consist of "Plays;" In his sixteen new prefaces the author discusses the various works, and on occasion frankly criticises them. "In writing a preface," he says, "one goes into the confessional." Incidentally he discusses the art of writing in general. The new material includes a long short story entitled "The Fued" and five short stories. The edition will be illustrated from drawings and photographs, and with a photogravure frontispiece to each volume.

William Roberts in his "Notes on Book Sales" in the London Times, says that "it may be questioned if any bookseller until well on in the eighties of the last century had the temerity to catalog any first edition of Shelley at a figure higher than £5." Commenting upon this statement the New York Evening Post remarks: "What a marvellous advance the last three decades, or a little more, has brought! At the Buxton Forman sale in March, 1920, the Shelley items, sold in less than an hour, brought upwards of $50,000, the "Queen Mab" reaching $6,000 and "Oedipus Tyrannus" $6,100. In this short period Shelley has become one of the most popular of all English authors with collectors."

"The Royal Irish Academy," says the London Mercury, "has just issued an interesting survey of its own work for Irish studies during the past hundred and fifty years. The earliest of the Academy's acquisitions seems to have been gifts from Irish Catholics in exile, and include the 'Book of Ballymote,' the stateliest of all Irish manuscripts. The total number of Irish manuscripts now in possession of the society is 1,200. To-day the Academy is engaged in many enterprises, the principal of which is the issue of the entire text of "Leabhar na Huidhre" in facsimile. This is the oldest extant Irish manuscript and will be published under the editorship of Mr. Best and Mr. Bergin. Its expenses will be heavy, but it will count confidently on sharing in the generosity which the new Irish State has already displayed toward Irish intellectual and artistic effort."

B. W. Matz, editor of The Dickensian, writing of "The London Homes of Charles Dickens" in the London Graphic has this to say in regard to the latest proposed memorial to his memory: "The very welcome news that at last London is shortly to have its Dickens shrine again focuses upon the mind how inseparable are the two imperishable British institutions—the works of Dickens and the capital of England. Dickens was not a Londoner born; but he was a Londoner bred. He loved the great city and all its associations as few ever did; he wrote of it in a way no one had ever been able to do before nor has ever succeeded in doing since and his writings form a great prose epic of the city. Altho innumerable buildings, nooks and crannies thruout the metropolis remain to remind the Londoner of his heritage, there is no memorial to the greatest of Londoners in the city he discovered for its citizens. Dr. Johnson's house is preserved for us in Gough Square, and Carlyle's in Cheyne Row, Chelsea, yet the favorite of all English novelists has had no such signal honor paid to his name and fame."

Collectors and Chance

"IN the boxes of the second-hand book dealers, in the half-closed portfolios at the back of dark shops, the unique items, which the millionaires miss, sometimes cast inviting glances at those who browse with ill-furnished purses, but who seek, pursue, run down, and implore them with frantic covetousness." So Anatole France has just assured us thru the mouth of Paul Gsell. Unfortunately, it is the millionaires' agents nowadays who do the most assiduous browsing. Moreover, these second-hand dealers no longer are so pleasantly ignorant as to put a Kilmarnock Burns in the ten cent box. Nevertheless, an occasional incident still proves that Anatole France is right. The midsummer sensation at Sotheby's in London has been the sale of Shelley's pamphlet of 1810, "The Posthumous Fragments of Margaret Nicholson," unbound, uncut, and unopened. Mr. F. Sabin bought it for about $6,000 (£1,210). Yet it was sold at auction a few months ago as one of a bundle of pamphlets which brought a few shillings, and the buyer himself sold it to another book dealer for a trifle. It might have been any shabby scholar instead of a dealer who made the find —New York Evening Post.

Autograph Prices Current

THE latest volume (the fifth) in the serial, "Autograph Prices Current," covers a period of two years, from August, 1919 to July, 1921 inclusive. For those interested in autographic literature, its contents is not only interesting, but for reference invaluable. The title page describes its scope: "A record of autograph letters, documents and manuscripts, sold by auction in London, with the date and place of sale, name of purchaser, and price of each lot, together with a comprehensive reference index. Compiled and edited by A. J. Herbert." The price in London is 22s. 6d. As agents for Mr. Herbert, the office of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY has copies for immediate delivery, the price being $5.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S PRIDE

by STEPHEN VINCENT BENÉT

Author of The Beginning of Wisdom

BENÉT TELLS YOU JUST HOW THE YOUNG PEOPLE OF TODAY DIFFER FROM THOSE OF YESTERDAY

Phil. Record: "Benét's new novel is likely to establish him more firmly as a delineator of the up-to-date young person. He has a raciness that is not without its appeal. He knows his young people."
William Lyon Phelps: "A clever, ingenious, well-written tale, full of humorous observation and lifelike characters."
Phil. Ledger: "The normality of the youths and maidens is in most refreshing contrast to the hectic specimens lately singled out."
Illustrated by Henry Raleigh $2.00

THE ISLAND GOD FORGOT

by CHARLES B. STILSON AND CHARLES BEAHAN

YOU'LL BE SAFE IN RECOMMENDING THIS TO ANY READER WHO ASKS FOR "A RIPPING GOOD YARN."

He will hold his breath from the beginning marked by a fight in a Far-Eastern port, to the end when an airplane race across the Pacific most dramatically prevents an extraordinary marriage on an island not on the maps

When this book was in manuscript form, a report from one of our "readers" declared:

"Some reviewer is bound to say that it is the best thing of its kind since 'Treasure Island', and he won't be so very far out of the way at that." $1.90

Broken Barriers

THE NEW NOVEL OF REAL AMERICAN LIFE, BY

Meredith Nicholson

MR. NICHOLSON unites the story-teller's gift with the penetrating insight of the social analyist. He speaks always to a purpose.

BROKEN BARRIERS is a novel of absorbing interest. Strong, straightforward, and courageous, it goes to the heart of a nation-wide problem.

BROKEN BARRIERS is true to its author's conviction that "the time is ripe for novels of real American life. . . . There have been, of late, encouraging signs that American writers are awake to the importance of dealing with things as they are. There is, of course, squealing from the benches of those who prefer to walk in darkness, fancying that they are enveloped in sunlight."

But the fine sincerity of BROKEN BARRIERS cannot fail to silence any protests from the "benches." It was published September 22d.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, NEW YORK

The Love Legend

By Woodward Boyd

This first novel by a new author shows her to be among the handful who can truly present and interpret American society. October 6. $1.75

The Cave Woman

By Norval Richardson

The author of PAGAN FIRE has created here a character of power and originality—a woman of great beauty and devastating egotism. Nothing diverts her from her purpose. She sets herself here to gain the object of her love—a man already married—by a campaign which the reader follows with fascination. September 15. $1.75

Tales of the Jazz Age

By F. Scott Fitzgerald

These sparkling shorter stories by the author of THIS SIDE OF PARADISE and THE BEAUTIFUL AND DAMNED are some of the best that he has ever done. Fiction could hardly be more entertaining. September 22. $1.75

Playing With Souls

By Countess de Chambrun

The author, who was Miss Longworth of Cincinnati, tells here a lively tale—the story of the efforts of Matthew Dale, retired financier, to divert from his rake's progress the son who does not know him for his father. September 15. $1.75

The Mysterious Office

By Jennette Lee

A detective story in the original vein in which Mrs. Lee has shown herself so pleasingly expert. The heroine is Millicent Newberry, female detective who first appeared in Mrs. Lee's GREEN JACKET. October 6. $1.75

An Honest Man

By Katharine Fullerton Gerould

AND OTHER STORIES

Mrs. Gerould, now recognized as one of the foremost American writers, is first of all an author of enthralling stories—stories of unusual situations and deeply interesting characters, told with a skill few can equal. October. $2.00

Yellow Butterflies

By Mary R. S. Andrews

A STORY OF THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER

This is as touching and inspiring a story as even Mrs. Andrews ever wrote. A seeming sign from Heaven tells a Kentucky mother, mourning the loss of her son in the war, that he has been selected to be honored by the nations of the world. Late fall. Boards. 75 cents

—London Times

The SECOND EMPIRE

by Philip Guedalla

One of the most notable books on Napoleon III in English.
Accurate Comprehensive Brilliant
Witty

The London Times.—"The Second Empire may read as easily and entertainingly as if it had been thrown off in hours of idleness, but a fort bibliography is there at the end to show that the notion is false."

London Daily News.—"Mr. Guedalla writes of Napoleon III with complete understanding. Wit is the perfect medium for the story of a life that touched misfortune without being tragic, and success without being superb."

Napoleon III lives again in this brilliant and important volume, from his early obscurity, through the triumph of Presidency and Emperorship, down to defeat and exile.

An accurate historian is this author, and at the same time a gifted writer and fascinating story teller. He paints vividly the Paris of Charles X—Paris under Louis Philippe—Paris at the barricades. He traces the growth of Bonapartism and the emergence of Louis Napoleon as the ludicrous but appealing idol of a new creed.

This is a social history of France that will delight lovers of worthwhile books.

Heywood Broun's Novel

THE BOY GREW OLDER

The first novel from one of America's best known newspaper men. An extraordinary piece of work, difficult to describe. The story of a sports writer whose wife deserts him and their three weeks old son. The development of the boy, the experiences of the father, the attempt of the mother to ignore her responsibilities are worked into a novel of brilliant realism, masterly in the simplicity of its style.

CAPTAIN POTT'S MINISTER

By FRANCIS L. COOPER

Illustrations and Picture Jacket in Colors $1.75

Here is the story of a young man, physically as well as mentally vigorous, who has chosen to be a minister, and who faces not only the problems of a sea-coast parish that needed a real man, but the still deeper one of mystery in his own antecedents. His staunch friend, a sea captain, as salt, rugged, and quaint as they make them, figures prominently throughout. A double love story is interwoven in the development of an intricate plot, seasoned with likable humor and gaining in strength to the end. The author knows his ground and his story can both stir and charm.

THE ISLAND CURE

By GRACE BLANCHARD, Public Library, Concord, N. H.
Illustrated from Photographs All-Around Picture Jacket in Colors from Painting by Emil Pollak-Ottendorff. $1.50

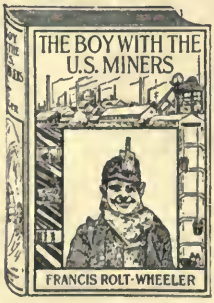
Bright and more than merely pretty Jean Beverley needed a vacation, and was advised to take the "island cure,"—not the overworked South Sea islands, but some of the captivating ones on the New England Coast: Isles of Shoals, Orr's Island, Bailey's in Casco Bay, Monhegan, Islesford, Mt. Desert, and Nantucket. Romance develops, and the "cure" works to a charm.

BOOKS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

THE BOY WITH THE U. S. MINERS

Fourteenth Volume of "U. S. Service Series"

By DR. FRANCIS ROLT-WHEELER



Thirty-six Illustrations. Large 12mo Decorated Cover $1.75

The larger part of all human wealth has been dug from the earth, and there is an eager interest in seeking and winning the Earth's treasures that cannot be surpassed, and hardly be equalled. This book tells of the skill and heroism of those who brave the toil and peril of the mines, and the great and intelligent care which our Government takes of their interests. As in every volume of this most valued of all series of books for boys, written under the unofficial patronage of prominent agents of the U. S. Government, a bright American boy is taken as the central figure of a thrilling and instructive book for all boys from fourteen to eighteen.

THE BOY MAGICIAN

By RAYMOND DIXIE, Ace of Magicians

With Frontispiece and Eighty-Eight Illustrative Drawings 8vo $1.50

For many years Mr. Dixie, Ace of Magicians, made a specialty of giving entertainments to juvenile audiences, and from this very intimate association with young folks he came to know exactly the kind of tricks his boy friends can best perform.

In his BOY MAGICIAN he has brought together a large and varied assortment of tricks with cards, coins, balls, handkerchiefs, and other ordinary articles which any boy can do and which will baffle the grown-ups even as they will his young friends. Just to read the book will prove a fascinating diversion, but having read it you will certainly have a strong desire to do a few of the tricks, so go ahead.

SKINNY HARRISON, ADVENTURER

By WALTER SCOTT STORY

Illustrated, $1.50

A book to interest every real boy and every one who ever was a real boy. "Skinny," of course, getting his nickname from his stoutness, was a born commander, physically and mentally, and his strength, daring, and quick wit made him a leading spirit among a set of very active boys. Their activities and comical pranks, often exciting, but never vicious, with the redoubtable "Skinny" always "coming through" make a most readable book, and there are chapters suggesting the genius that lay back of the immortal "Tom Sawyer" more nearly than anything else that has since appeared. For boys from twelve to sixteen.

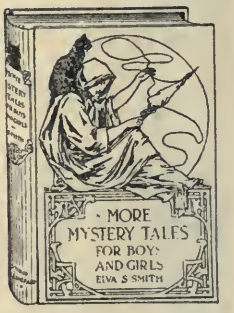
MORE MYSTERY TALES

Selected by ELVA S. SMITH, of the Carnegie Library, Pittsburgh

Large 12mo Illustrated $2.00



More stories and poems of ghosts and wizards, of hidden treasure and strange enchantments. This collection supplements MYSTERY TALES FOR BOYS AND GIRLS and has been compiled in response to numerous requests received by Miss Smith, who is regarded as highest authority in such matters, from librarians, teachers, and children for another good book of magic and mystery.

The collection will be of interest for general reading at all times of the year and will be especially useful at Hallowe'en in providing stories and poems appropriate to the season and of real literary merit. For boys and girls from twelve years upward.

THE MOHAWK RANGER

By D. LANGE

Picture Jacket in Colors Illustrated $1.50

This is another one of Mr. Lange's high-grade "Indian Stories," of the time of the French and Indian War, which decided the great problem whether North America should be under the dominion of English-Speaking people, or divided between the French and the English.

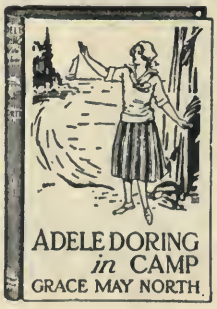
The principal characters in the story are Tobias Lindsey, a ranger, the Mohawk hunter and warrior, Anohta, and two New York boys, Andy and Matt Ellington, seeking a missing older brother.

LEONORE LENDS A HAND

By LOUISA SKINNER WORTHINGTON

Illustrated Picture Jacket in Colors $1.75

All girls like a "boarding-school story," and this story of Leonore's last year at St. George's is one of the best we have ever published. To all young people and those who love them, this story of sparkling wit and humor, loyal friendship, keen trials, and great happiness will make a strong appeal. For girls of fourteen and older.



ADELE DORING IN CAMP

Fourth Volume of the "ADELE DORING BOOKS"

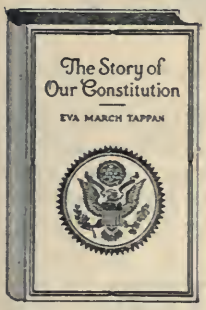
By GRACE MAY NORTH

Six Illustrations and Picture Jacket in Colors $1.75

Not in years have any new books pleased girls in their early teens as do the "Adele Doring Books" with their constant interest and their thoroughly natural characters who find such delight in kind thoughtfulness for others.

LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO.

THE STORY OF OUR CONSTITUTION



By EVA MARCH TAPPAN
Author of the "Makers of England" Series
Illustrated from Photographs and Old Prints. $1.50

It is a thrilling story, the tale of four million people deliberately choosing a form of government for themselves and promising to live in obedience to its laws. And what of that noble group of men, unconsciously great, who without a thought of their own gain, moved quietly about the task of saving a nation from lawlessness and anarchy? Why is it that histories which are elsewhere interesting become so often dry and dull when the wonder-story is touched upon?

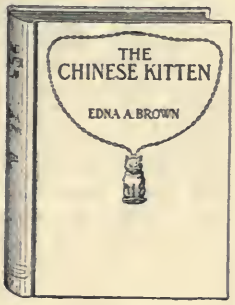
It is from such thoughts as these that this book has grown.

LITTLE MISSY

By MAUD LINDSAY
Author of "A Story Garden for Little Children"; "The Story-Teller for Little Children"; "Bobby and the Big Road"; etc.
Picture Jacket and Illustrations in Colors by F. LILEY YOUNG $1.50

LITTLE MISSY is the delightful story, told by herself, of a little girl on a Southern plantation, and a faithful picture of the happy childhood of many a "Little Missy." Many of the characters are drawn from life, and many of the incidents are based upon fact. Little Missy herself is a typical Southern child, warm-hearted, impulsive and generous. Miss Lindsay, in the very front rank of all writers for little people, is a Southern lady, and tells the story with sympathetic charm. For children from ten to fifteen.

THE CHINESE KITTEN



By EDNA A. BROWN
Author of "The Silver Bear," etc.
Picture Jacket and Illustrations in Colors by ANTOINETTE INGLIS
$1.50

The color of the kitten was blue, and Aunt Margaret sent it to console Dora because Arcturus, her silver bear, went on a vacation without her permission. The story tells how Dora and Lucy spent a week at the beach, sleeping in a tent where the moon looked in, and how they went to school and visited in Boston. For girls from six to ten.

DOROTHY DAINTY'S TREASURE CHEST

The new "Dorothy Dainty Book"
By AMY BROOKS
Picture Jacket in Colors and Illustrations by the Author $1.25

After a delightful summer at the shore, in which frolic, mystery, surprises, droll and quaint characters, and ingenious entertaining hold the attention through every line, as is usual in these books, the reader is told just what Dorothy chooses to keep in her highly prized treasure chest. While full of interest, this eagerly-awaited book emphasizes the value of love and loyalty. For girls from eight to twelve.

THE MOST WIDELY DISCUSSED NOVEL OF THE YEAR

SIMON CALLED PETER

By ROBERT KEABLE

Author of "The Mother of All Living."

Simon Called Peter has achieved the distinction of jumping into the list of best-sellers. Few books of this year are likely to be so widely read and so seriously discussed. Many people do not like it, but the overwhelming majority of readers give the author credit for having produced the most important novel yet written on the moral conditions brought about by the war.

Of SIMON CALLED PETER

The Boston Transcript said: "It is by these scattered fragments of description with which we have personally come in contact that it is possible to try Mr. Keable's narrative and feel certain that he neither exaggerates nor misrepresents. . . . It is astounding so represented, but not more so than the whole state of affairs which existed during those years. . . . Undeniably it is a remarkable thing to have done to have taken such a man as Peter Graham and carried him through the fierce crisis of this story fearlessly and unfalteringly. Then Julie—how few authors could have seen or depicted Julie! She is wayward, intoxicating and tender . . . friendly and loyal, and in the end she is strong, strong beyond most."

The Philadelphia Ledger calls it: "Strong and illuminating. . . . Something that will make most of its readers gasp a little—that is, if they were not in France themselves."

The New York Times: "Whatever one may think of the conclusions there can be no doubt of the interest of the description of life behind the lines, whose general dissoluteness the author in his preface blames upon war."

The Norfolk Ledger Dispatch: "An unanswerable argument against war's brutalizing influence, its demolishing of faiths, its loosing of all bodily passions."

The Bookman: "An authentic record of experiences in the war and a testimony to the devastating moral effects of the conflict."

The Boston Herald calls it: "A novel of real distinction, both in its manner and in its matter."

The Dundee Advertiser: "Tremendously human and shows great literary power."

Sacramento Bee: "One of the significant works of fiction... among the most powerful and vivid of any inspired by the war."

The Literary Review: "A significant novel in the best sense of the word."

New York Tribune: "A novel far out of the ordinary."

Life: "A good book that deserves to be widely read."

The latest novel by ROBERT KEABLE is

THE MOTHER OF ALL LIVING

which HILDEGARDE HAWTHORNE calls "magnificent reading. . . . Those who care for a rich and interesting story, who feel the thrill of adventure. . . . and of meeting real men and women, are going to find a great delight in this African novel."

TWO DOMINANT NOVELISTS IN ENGLAND TODAY

Shella Kaye-Smith, Author of

JOANNA GODDEN

Author of "Tamarisk Town," "Green Apple Harvest," "The Tramping Methodist," etc.

That JOANNA GODDEN is the material from which masterpieces are made is the opinion of the leading critics in America. Nothing among the novels of the past year has aroused stronger appreciation of power and permanent worth, than has been given to this splendid analysis of a woman's character and nature. "Joanna Godden is one of the memorable women of fiction," says the N. Y. Times. "No woman portrait of many years stands out in my fictional gallery as does Joanna Godden," writes SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS. "There is a desperate and stark intensity about her. The tragedy and triumph of her life, are set forth with a serenity, a breadth, an even, unpalliating justice that lift the work clear above the levels of merely interesting fiction." "Joanna comes out amazingly clear to one's apprehension," says The Outlook. "She is more distinct to one's mental vision than most of the women one actually knows." "A new argument and a strong one," says The Boston Herald, "for those who call the author the foremost woman novelist of England today," and The Argonaut, San Francisco, adds that "there is no particular reason why the word 'woman' should be included."

To trace the origin and watch the growth of a great achievement, the publishers present to the many thousand admirers of Miss Kaye-Smith a reprint of her remarkable first novel, THE TRAMPING METHODIST. The story of Humphrey Lyte, the wandering Methodist parson, is a masterly character study, prophetic of the excellent work which followed it in THE CHALLENGE TO SIRIUS, TAMARISK TOWN, THE FOUR ROADS, GREEN APPLE HARVEST and JOANNA GODDEN. Each, $2.00

Francis Brett Young, Author of

THE RED KNIGHT

Author of "The Black Diamond," "The Tragic Bride," etc.

Brett Young is rated by John Masefield, Hugh Walpole, Archibald Marshall, etc., as being in their judgment the most hopeful coming writer in England today. In his latest novel he has taken a plunge into high romance with an imaginary Southern republic for its scene in which the young idealistic hero finds himself forced to betray either the great leader who has captured his mind or the woman who holds his heart. "In Robert Bryden," says the N. Y. Times, "Mr. Brett Young has created another of the quixotic idealists to whom British novelists have turned with increasing affection since their inauguration by W. J. Locke and their perpetuation by A. S. M. Hutchinson. Robert Bryden is of a piece with Marcus Ordeyne, or the Beloved Vagabond, or the hero of 'If Winter Comes.' . . . The Women of the book, Maddalena Cammarata, compounded of ice and fire, and Carmela, vibrant with physical impulse, are vigorously individual and alive. One may read 'The Red Knight' as a record of contemporary experience, translated by art into literature, or as a romantic excursion into extraordinary realities. But it remains a compelling and interesting story admirably told, and into it has gone a considerable measure of felicitous artistic ability."

BRETT YOUNG has arrived and his novels merely await that wider popular recognition which is certain to follow such continuous good work as "The Young Physician," ($2.50) "Undergrowth," "The Crescent Moon," "The Tragic Bride," "The Black Diamond," and "The Red Knight." Each, $2.00

FALL FICTION FROM THE DUTTON LIST

THE MOTHER OF ALL LIVING By Robert Keable

The Boston Transcript says: "Mr. Keable has power we knew before, but it has grown with use. He is a bigger man than when he wrote 'Simon Called Peter' and he has staged a vaster scene . . . this is a book with a meaning and it possesses potent appeal." $2.00

BLACK PAWL By Ben Ames Williams

Character drawing of the type in which the author excels—strong, tragic and as a whole terribly moving. Within the inescapable bounds of a whaler are Black Pawl, its captain, Red Pawl, his son, grown morose and surly from his father's resentment toward the wife who had deserted them both, Ruth, the storm centre, the daughter, whom Red's mother had taken with her, Dan the mate, and the deck hand who precipitates the final tragedy. $2.00

NIGGER By Clement Wood

The drama of a race, whose presence is one of the serious problems before the whole country. Yet the book is in no sense propaganda. It is a story, vividly and powerfully written of the progress of one family through three generations of inherent weakness meeting unbending prejudice. $2.00

LOVE (Torchlight Series) By Baroness Leonie Aminoff

Her REVOLUTION, which dealt with the period of the Terror, created a veritable sensation last year, and this new romance is equally convincing and enthralling. The present volume tells of Napoleon's courtship and marriage. "Napoleon" says the N. Y. Times, "shy, ambitious, self-confident, starving in his attic, starving alike for opportunity and for food . . . is the dominant figure of the book. The author sees clearly her own conception of the man . . . and makes us too see it clearly." $2.00

TO TELL YOU THE TRUTH By Leonard Merrick

A new volume of short stories, the most recent writings of the man who has delighted his admirers with such incomparable collections as "The Man Who Understood Women," "A Chair on the Boulevard," "While Paris Laughed," etc. $1.90

BLOOD AND SAND By Vicente Blasco Ibanez

A new edition with 16 illlustrations from stills of the screen version in which Rodolph Valentino stars as El Gallardo, the bull-fighter. $2.00

THE DRIVER By Garet Garrett

An absorbing story of the development and the influence of "big business" in American life, told by one of the few men competent to write it. $2.00

THE UNLIT LAMP By Elisabeth Sanxay Holding

An extremely interesting picture of life on Brooklyn Heights a generation ago by the author of "Invincible Minnie," which is an individual contribution to the novel of married life. $2.00

FIELDING SARGENT By Elsa Barker

In novel form the author of "Letters from a Living Dead Man" presents a safe and sane statement of the essentials of psychoanalysis of unusual interest and lasting value. $2.00

VALLEY WATERS By Charles D. Stewart

All the leisurely, autumnal opulence of the sunny Ohio Valley in which the puzzled hero finds the home from which he had been separated since the age of four, runs through this captivatiing story by the author of "A Fugitive Blacksmith." $2.00

STILL LIFE By J. Middleton Murry THE THINGS WE ARE

Two novels by an author who has an international reputation as a critic and a bookman. The Morning Post (London) refers to Mr. Murry as "a Coué in fiction," a tribute to his extraordinary subtle powers of analysis. Each, $2.50

Among the novels still in heavy demand are:

WHERE THE BLUE BEGINS By CHRISTOPHER MORLEY

"Where the Blue Begins" is wholly different from anything Christopher Morley has done before. It is a kind of fairy tale, if you like; an allegory, perhaps; a story readable for itself, full of quaint absurdity, laughter, and satire; but with an undercurrent of beauty and meaning that seems to lift it into the realm of those books that go on and on making friends and spreading enchantment. Net, $1.50

TO BE PUBLISHED OCTOBER 13th

MY LIFE AND WORK By HENRY FORD
In collaboration with Samuel Crowther

In this book—Mr. Ford's own story of his life—he tells the whole story of his success, his methods and his aims. Net, $3.50

A JONGLEUR STRAYED: Verses on Love and Other Matters, Sacred and Profane By RICHARD LeGALLIENNE

This new volume has all the allure of "The Junkman" and along with it something which comes nearer high seriousness than anything Mr. LeGallienne has written before. Edition limited to 1,500 copies. Net, $2.50

TO BE PUBLISHED OCTOBER 20th

SINGLE BLESSEDNESS AND OTHER OBSERVATIONS
By GEORGE ADE

Galloping fables by America's leading slangster. They are quite as keen, humorous, and penetrating as his well-known "Fables in Slang." Net, $1.50

COMMAND By WILLIAM McFEE

A study in patriotism: the Mediterranean service in war, and English seafarers in the greatest hours of their lives. A novel to stand beside "Casuals of the Sea." Net, $1.90

THE RIDDLE OF THE SPINNING WHEEL
By MARY E. and THOMAS W. HANSHEW

"Cleek of Scotland Yard" goes further on his way to fame by untangling another of the knottiest of problems that human ingenuity—or criminality—could create. Net, $1.75

TO BE PUBLISHED OCTOBER 27th

THE IRISH GUARDS IN THE WAR By RUDYARD KIPLING

All friends of Mulvaney in "Soldiers Three" and of Kim will recall with delight Kipling's ultimate skill in portraying the Irish soldier. This is Kipling's story of the day-to-day experiences of the troops with whom his only son fought and died during the war. It is more a vivid picture of war itself than an account of any particular war. Net, $10.00

Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, New York

A Guide to Money-Making Books

It's Being Done!

THE STORY OF MANKIND

By VAN LOON

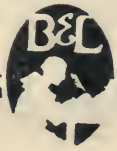
Is Being Purchased In 1000's and less, of course. But the point we want to make is that most booksellers are plunging on MANKIND because the plunging is safe!

That MANKIND will be among the toppiest leaders this Fall and Winter is as certain as anything in business can be certain.

Think! Published in late November last year, after Thanksgiving, we have sold up to date 63,000 copies. We didn't have enough books for last Christmas's buying and hence did not dare to exploit and advertise MANKIND much. But this year! We have just gone to press with 50,000 copies and these will be backed by a new and extraordinary campaign of advertising that will run consistently all year. Our discounts are liberal and that means something on a five dollar book.

MANKIND carries the Wise Money.

Van Loon—Father and Sons



A Guide to

BABEL
BY JOHN COURNOS

Adjectives that may sound extravagant are unavoidable. BABEL is a novel both gigantic and thrilling with the widest scope of epic quality. We have taken over Cournos' previous novels, THE MASK, and THE WALL, as we believe that Cournos is a literary property of high value and that BABEL will win for him an important public following. $2.50

COURNOS

BEYOND ROPE AND FENCE
BY DAVID GREW

This story of a wild horse battling against man's persistent effort to enslave her has been called by most of the booksellers who have had a chance to read it, the best animal story since Jack London's "Call of the Wild." The story of Queen and her herd, ending with the crossing of the frozen Saskatchewan to freedom, will be enjoyed by every type of reader. $2.00

AUMONIER

THE GHOST GIRL
BY EDGAR SALTUS

Practically every important newspaper echoes the New York Times which calls THE GHOST GIRL a "first-rate mystery story written brilliantly with flashes of wit—a startling plot—a story you don't want to put down until you have reached the last page," etc. Published in early August and selling very well indeed. $2.00

DREISER

THE SINGING CAPTIVES
BY E. B. C. JONES

The second novel by the author of "Quiet Interior" amply justifies all of the lavish praise bestowed on her first novel ,which was called by The Dial "Easily the most distinguished first novel of many seasons." THE SINGING CAPTIVES tells a dramatic story of the fall of a typical wealthy upper class English family. $2.00

HECHT

BY STACY AUMONIER

The story of Barbara Powerscourt, daughter of a British Prime Minister and a music hall favorite, of her careful education and her final reversion to type. As this goes to press, HEARTBEAT is in its third edition since early August, vindicating our confident belief that a real public following could be secured for Aumonier. $2.00

ASCENT
BY FRANCES RUMSEY

The Providence Journal says: "Mrs. Rumsey has made a remarkable psychological study in ASCENT—it is one of the most absorbing novels that this reviewer has read for some time." This story of a cold-blooded woman is bound to appeal to all readers of the best in literature. $2.00

DOUBTING CASTLE
BY ELINOR CHIPP

A first novel by a young American woman whose work is distinctly suggestive of Galsworthy. Against the background of a larger family group is imposed a story of youth and middle age, of the bonds of marriage and free passion. $2.00

MY ALASKAN IDYLL
BY HJALMAR RUTZEBECK

A continuation of the exciting adventures of the author of ALASKA MAN'S LUCK. Here we find him taking his bride to their new homestead in Alaska, the failure of the crops prospecting for gold, the attempt to fasten the blame for a murder on Svend. . . A story of fact that reads as excitingly as fiction. $2.00

UP STREAM
An American Chronicle
BY LUDWIG LEWISOHN

The book which is being everywhere discussed and which is rapidly taking its place as one of the most significant of American memoirs. $2.00

Money-Making Books

GARGOYLES . A devastating novel
BY BEN HECHT

Unquestionably a bigger novel than Erik Dorn and entirely different in style. Written in simple straightforward English that everyone can understand. Possessing a definite value for any reader interested in an intensely gripping story (the stuff of 20 novels is poured lavishly into the pages of this book) based on truth of life and character. In it, the twisted motives, repressions and hypocrisies which leer under the Puritanism, Idealism and Buncombe of our new century are brilliantly uncovered. $2.00

THEY CALL ME CARPENTER
BY UPTON SINCLAIR

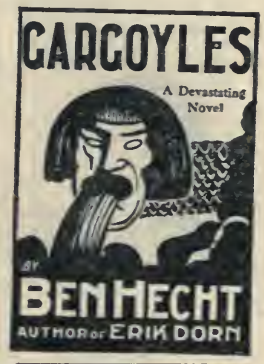
What would Christ do if he should return to earth to-day? This tale of the "Second Coming" is sensationally interesting. Its serialization in Hearst's Magazine has created a world of interest. $1.75

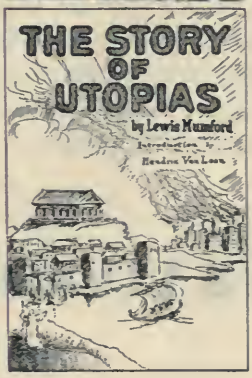
THE STORY OF UTOPIAS
BY LEWIS MUMFORD

An outline of the Utopias of Mankind from Plato to the present. A most original and brilliantly written book, describing the perfect communities that the great thinkers have dreamed of and offering a constructive analysis of what is wrong with the classic Utopias. $3.00

THE GOLDEN CALF
BY FRANCIS HACKETT

The former literary editor of The New Republic has written, of course, a brilliant book. The endeavor of the average American to escape from standards and loyalties which are bred in the bone is the subject which Mr. Hackett illuminates. $2.00





A BOOK ABOUT MYSELF
BY THEODORE DREISER

Theodore Dreiser has written honest novels. Now we have an honest autobiography. A story of Dreiser's early newspaper days, pictures of Chicago, New York, etc., during the 90's—a record not only of experiences, of events, of people, but a chronicle of intellectual and emotional reactions to life. $3.00

THE WHITE HEART OF MOJAVE
BY EDITH BRUSH PERKINS

The trials and observations of two brave women who entered Death Valley and crossed the great Mojave desert. $3.00

THE WASTELAND
BY T. S. ELIOT

A long poem by a writer whose name has acquired a leading significance in recent years. THE WASTELAND will undoubtedly be rated among the greatest contributions to poetry by any American in recent years. $2.00

MY BOOK OF HOURS
BY FRANZ MASEREEL

A limited edition of 600 copies. Not a line of text except an introduction and preface; the book tells its story in 167 wood cuts. A truly unusual book in exquisite format. $5.00

TRAMPING ON LIFE
BY HARRY KEMP

A 436-page autobiographical narrative of one whose life has held tremendous variety and excitement. An absorbingly interesting and important work of self-revelation. Kemp's life as a sailor before the mast, as a tramp, his fight for an education and his growth and development make fascinating and exciting reading. $3.00

THE SWAN and FASHIONS FOR MEN

BY FRANZ MOLAR

Two new plays by the author of Liliom. Both plays will be produced in America this year. $2.00

IN THE COURT OF PUBLIC OPINION

BY EDWARD L. BERNAYS

The first book that offers a serious study and consideration of the new profession of public relations counsel by one of our foremost publicity experts. $3.00

THE CRITICAL GAME

BY JOHN MACY

Here are human as well as brilliant critical essays on such figures as Dante, Nietzsche, Conrad, Strindberg, George Moore, Masefield, H. G. Wells, Tolstoy and Shakespeare, by the author of The Spirit of American Literature. $2.00

MOLNAR

THE HAIRY APE ANNA CHRISTIE THE FIRST MAN

BY EUGENE O'NEILL

Published in August, these plays by O'Neill (ANNA CHRISTIE won the Pulitzer Prize for the best American play of last year) are having a record sale. $2.00

THE CARRA EDITION of the works of GEORGE MOORE

The first unexpurgated and uniform collection of all of his work which the author considers worthy of perpetuation in a definitive edition. In twenty-one volumes. The first volume in each set is signed by the author. The first group of three volumes to be published in October. $178.50

THE EVENING POST

BY ALLEN NEVINS

A study of the splendid history of the New York Evening Post, the oldest of the greater American dailies. $3.50

WE AND OUR GOVERNMENT

BY JEREMIAH WHIPPLE JENKS, Ph. D., LL. D.

The first volume in the American Viewpoint Society series. Write for descriptive literature. $2.00

THE MODERN LIBRARY

This series shows an increase of sales for the first six months of this year of 43 per cent. The Modern Library will now be issued monthly, starting in September with Hendrik Van Loon's Ancient Man. There will follow The Le Gallienne Anthology of American Poetry, Selections From The Writings Of Thomas Paine, D. H. Lawrence's Sons and Lovers, Anatole France's At The Sign Of The Reine Pedauque, Eugene O'Neill's The Moon of The Caribbees and Six Other Plays of The Sea, and Gabriele D'Annunzio's The Triumph of Death.

THIS FREEDOM

By A. S. M. HUTCHINSON, author of "If Winter Comes"

No novel in recent years has aroused such controversy as A. S. M. Hutchinson's THIS FREEDOM. The reviews range from unqualified praise to relentless censure. One critic refers to his beauty of style, another calls him a third-rate journeyman. He is a Dickens, a Carlyle, a Harold Bell Wright; THIS FREEDOM is even better than "If Winter Comes," some think, while others now confess their poor judgment in enthusing over "If Winter Comes" a year ago. Be they good or bad THIS FREEDOM possesses the very qualities which made "If Winter Comes" the biggest seller of the century. And sales of THIS FREEDOM within 10 days of publication exceed by 55,000 copies the sales of "If Winter Comes" within 10 WEEKS of publication. 12mo. SKIPPY BEDELLE

By OWEN JOHNSON

Like "The Varmint," this new Lawrenceville story will be one of the most popular books of its first season and a steady seller for many years afterwards. George Ade says: "It is a real pleasure to meet 'Skippy Bedelle' and through him to renew acquaintance with several of the awesome characters of Lawrenceville." Watch the advertising campaign on this book.

THE BREATH OF SCANDAL

By EDWIN BALMER

"Mr. Balmer has produced in this novel one of the best built and most dramatically efficient stories among the season's output, but the book is more than that. It is a thoughtful, earnestly conceived book; a novel with a purpose, though it never becomes crudely didactic. The book is one that will repay careful reading, and may especially be recommended to intelligent American women."—The New York Evening Post.

"In this very vigorous book Mr. Balmer is dealing, competently and subtly, with no less a thing than the changing philosophy of life and conduct as the rising generation is working it out for itself in America. . . It is one of the very best studies thus far produced of the unstable conditions of modern marriage and of its far-reaching effects upon society as a whole."—The New York Herald.

Frontispiece. 12mo. $1.90 net. (Ready).

THE SKY LINE OF SPRUCE

By EDISON MARSHALL

The New York Times says: "There is no lack of thrilling episodes. A wild canoe ride down the rapids of the Yuga River, a titantic battle with a huge grizzly, and other fights with even more savage human enemies, these, together with the remarkable exploits of Fenris, the wolf, cannot fail to make the reader's pulse beat faster."

Frontispiece. 12mo. $1.75 net. (Ready)

THE CLASH

By STORM JAMESON

"Miss Jameson's novel will take a distinct place among the stormy petrels of this season's literature. Readers will delight in it or quarrel with it. They will not be indifferent to it."—The Boston Transcript

LITTLE, BROWN & COMPANY'S NEW FALL FICTION

A Romance as Delightful as "The Broad Highway"

PEREGRINE'S PROGRESS

By JEFFERY FARNOL, Author of "The Broad Highway"

Eleven years ago, Jeffery Farnol's entrancing romance, "The Broad Highway," was a best seller month after month. Since then the critics have time and time again importuned Mr. Farnol to write another book "just like it." At last he has been in the mood to do it. So "Peregrine's Progress" is of the same period and scenes as his most popular book, and we are confident, from opinions expressed by people of sound literary judgment who have read proofs of the story, that it will be as enthusiastically received by the reviewers as "The Broad Highway." With your co-operation this new story will be a book of the hundred-thousand class. Remember that "Peregrine's Progress" will be advertised twice as heavily as any of the recent books by Jeffery Farnol. 12mo. $2.00 net. (Ready September 30).

THE EVIL SHEPHERD

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

A novel of English life of a melodramatic character, so fascinating and so stirring that the most hardened reader can hardly fail to receive a series of thrills. The same element of suspense that made "The Great Impersonation" so successful is present in full force in this extraordinary tale. Told in Mr. Oppenheim's best manner, "The Evil Shepherd" is another example of his versatility.

12mo. $2.00 net. (Ready).

THE MAN WHO LIVED IN A SHOE

By HENRY JAMES FORMAN

This is a charming, whimiscal story, with clear-cut characterization and wholesome sentiment, written in a beguiling manner. With its beautiful love story, delicately developed from the underlying theme of love which children engender in the hearts of men, its clever blending of humor and pathos, its strong appeal to the highest emotions, "The Man Who Lived in a Shoe" is a story over which its readers will linger with delight. Second printing. 12mo. $1.90 net. (Ready).

THE TRAIL OF THE WHITE MULE

By B. M. BOWER

This is another Casey Ryan story in which Casey, one of the most likable, human and amusing characters that B. M. Bower has given us, is funnier than ever. From the moment he tangles the traffic on the busiest crossing in Los Angeles until the end of the story, Casey is more than ever Casey Ryan. Frontispiece. 12mo. $1.75 net. (Ready).

GRANITE AND CLAY

By SARA WARE BASSETT

In "Granite and Clay," the author of "The Harbor Road" and "Flood Tide" has given us an ingenious and entertaining story which contains not only the savor of the sea and the dunes of Cape Cod, but also gives delightful glimpses of Boston's social life. Frontispiece. 12mo. $1.90 net. (Ready).

There is a wealth of true animal and wood lore to be learned by the child, and in addition, love for the great outdoors is instilled in the heart of the reader.

HIGHLY ENDORSED BY LIBRARIANS AND EDUCATORS

These books have been read by librarians, educators, booksellers, in fact, by all types of persons qualified to judge juvenile books of this character and have been pronounced by them in every instance as the best stories of their type written.

FOR CHILDREN BETWEEN THE AGES OF SIX AND TEN

These stories appeal to children between the ages of six and ten, which represents an important period in the a verage child's life, and for which comparatively little has been written. It is at this age that they begin doing their own reading and a better selection of books for this purpose could not be found. They also make ideal stories to be read to the still younger children at the bed-time hour.

ATTRACTIVELY AND SUBSTANTIALLY MADE

We have made every effort possible to make these books attractive by printing from large readable type, using suitable colored illustrations made especially for this series, and binding them in durable form. We also provide an allover colored jacket by Frederick Richardson.

HERO TALES FROM HISTORY

By SMITH BURNHAM

Author of "Our Beginnings in Europe and America," "The Making of Our Country," etc., and

WAYNE WHIPPLE

Author of "The Story-Life of Washington," "The Story-Life of Lincoln," etc.

Two masters of history and biography have joined in the preparation of these tales of great and famous men and women whose deeds have shaped the course of history from the earliest days to the present time. Written in easy style so that they are agreeable reading for boys and girls, they are yet so well phrased and so full of interesting and often little known details of the world's great people that they will prove fascinating to their elders.

A BOOK THAT SHOULD BE IN EVERY LIBRARY

Hardly a day goes by without some reference being made to one of the characters in this book. No one's education is complete without knowledge of the events and people so entertainingly described in these pages. Boyhood stories, personal anecdotes as well as notable achievements and brave acts are interwoven in a fascinating narrative that will grip the attention of every reader.

FULLY ILLUSTRATED

Each story is accompanied by an illustration showing some phase of its hero's activities. In many cases these are from world famous paintings, in others from authentic and rare photographs.

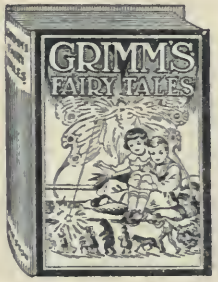
GRIMM'S FAIRY TALES

With Illustrations in Color by Edwin John Prittie

There is nothing so fascinating in the whole realm of fairy lore as these tales by the Brothers Grimm. They possess a charm that grows with the passing years. Translated into many languages, they are read all over the world. Here is a very complete collection of the Grimm stories, including the ever popular "Hansel and Gretel," "Little Red Riding Hood," "The Sleeping Beauty," "Tom Thumb," "Peter the Goatherd," "Cinderella, or the Little Glass Slipper," "Rumpelstiltskin," "Snow White and Rose Red," "The Valiant Little Tailor, or Seven at One Blow," "Faithful John," and many, many others, some forty fairy tales, all of them crowded with interest.



The book is handsomely bound. The type is large and clear, with wide spacing, easy to read, and most attractive in appearance. Scattered throughout the book are delightful illustrations, some in color, some in black and white, which add to the interest of these incomparable fair tales.

The complete book contains 320 pages. 60 text illustrations. Four colord plates, with cover design in colors.

The Mary Frances Story Book

By JANE EAYRE FRYER

THE MARY FRANCES STORY BOOK is different from previously published Mary Frances Books. These books are part story and part lessons; they teach something about cooking and sewing, knitting and crocheting, housekeeping, and gardening and first aid—and tell a story, too, but THE MARY FRANCES STORY BOOK IS ALL STORY, including stories of humor and fun, of courage and perseverance, of kindness and generosity, of service and reward, of fair play and good manners, of home and country. In this book Mary Frances is allowed to visit the enchanted island of the good story-tellers, and as may be imagined, when Mary Frances came home she had not only one, but many stories to tell. Bound in cloth with attractive cover design. 320 pages. Price $2.00 NET.

THE GREAT EVANGELISTIC OPPORTUNITY

By JOHN WALTON

In this inspiring little book Mr. Walton has put into concise form certain convictions growing out of personal experience and careful study of his subject. It is not a text-book for evangelists. His main emphasis is upon the teaching of children—"to have the childhood of the community anchored in the Church, with an adequate system of training and teaching; and not merely to keep the youth in the Church, but to develop the high type of character so essential for the preservation of high civic standards; to offset the tendency of materialism and commercialism in government and industry.

BUSINESS FORMS AND CUSTOMS FOR EVERYDAY USE

By L. H. CADWALLADER, A.B., Ph.D., Head of the Dept. of Commerce, South Phila. High School

In tabloid form the many questions asked by business men are answered in this excellent text-book. Among the topics treated at length are sundry business papers and elementary accounts, care of the mail, filing, telephone calls, banking systems, notes, drafts and acceptances, transportation, insurance, real estate, property, taxation, etc. In addition, Dr. Cadwallader has prepared an appendix giving definition of business terms, brief notes on commercial law, and an unusually fine index. It is a book for the beginner as well as for the mature business man.

The Ten Cent Pocket Series

The Sensation of the Book World. More than 20,000,000 Sold in Less than Three Years. 283 Titles Now Ready.

To the Trade:

This is our invitation to you to join us and share the profits on the TEN CENT POCKET SERIES. We will spend $100,000 in national advertising in the next four months, broadcasting the best kind of literature to the people who want good reading and who do not want to pay high prices. By selling the TEN CENT POCKET SERIES you are making book buyers. If a man reads Nietzsche or Shakespeare or Tolstoy in the TEN CENT POCKET SERIES he has a new line of vision opened to him and is a possible book store customer for clothbound books by and about the same authors.

THE TEN CENT POCKET SERIES IS THE GREATEST AGENCY FOR MAKING NEW BOOK BUYERS THE COUNTRY HAS EVER KNOWN

A Remarkable Offer. Good Until November 30th, 1922, Only

WE have eliminated the jobber, the credit system and all other wasters of the dealer's profits. We are going to do something that is unheard of in the book business. We are going to supply you these books on a strictly cash basis—cash with order—deliver the books to your store, carriage charges prepaid—and in addition enable you to make 100 per cent profit—not 25 per cent or 33 1/3 per cent that you make on magazines and some books, but really 100 per cent profit.

Here Are Our Terms:

One copy or a million copies of the TEN CENT POCKET SERIES at the rock bottom price of 5 cents a copy, delivered. Cash with order. This special price holds good until November 30th, 1922.

Order 1,000 copies of the TEN CENT POCKET SERIES and see your customers buy them by the dozen. Live dealers all over the country are stocking this series.

Read This Letter from the former President of the American Booksellers' Association, of Lancaster, Pa.:

"We are glad to say that we are having excellent success with the TEN CENT POCKET SERIES.

"The order for 500 which was received in the beginning of the week is half gone now, and we will likely have to check up stock and send another order in the beginning of next week. We have put these books on a small table just outside of our front door, and it has been surprising to us to see the interest they have aroused. They seem to appeal to all people, both sexes, young and old, and to all classes. It looks to us as if it is a good way to get some good literature into the people's hands, and to a certain extent get rid of the cheap stories in the newspapers and cheap magazines and give a great deal more profit to the dealer.

Yours very truly,
L. B. Herr & Son. (By Eugene L. Herr).

SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN

BATOUALA

By RENÉ MARAN

The Negro Prix Goncourt Novel

The welcome this book has received here has exceeded our expectations, even though we predicted a phenomenal success. Everywhere it is being talked about. And it is conceded to be as good and powerful in the English translation as in the original.

N. Y. Times: "An astounding book."
N. Y. Herald: "BATOUALA is a masterpiece.
N. Y. Tribune: "BATOUALA is superb—a strange, exotic work. It lives mightily."
The Crisis: "The translator has achieved a result almost as starkly simple and magnificent as the original."

MISCELLANEOUS

MIRROWS OF MOSCOW: By Louise Bryant. With illustrations by Césare. Full-length portraits of all the great figures in Russia today. You get to know these men and women as authors know the characters of their novels. You know their hearts, their souls, their habits, their foibles—the human side of them, in short. And to know them is to know complex Russia in all its aspects. $2.50

INCENTIVES IN THE NEW INDUSTRIAL ORDER: By J. A. Hobson. A valuable book on an important subject by the eminent English political economist. $1.75

THE NEW PSYCHOLOGY AND THE TEACHER: By H. Crichton Miller. Recommended by the National Health Council of America and the British Social Hygiene Board and called by a leading American psychologist and educator: "A reasonable account of some elementary facts which ordinarily are treated under the head of psycho-analysis. No book of exactly this sort has appeared in this country." Teachers and parents will find it serviceable and stimulating. $1.60

AFTER THE PEACE: By H. N. Brailsford. A survey of the condition of Europe as the war, the blockade and the Peace Treaties have left it, by the distinguished English author and publicist. $1.50

INDUSTRIAL REVIVAL IN SOVIET RUSSIA: By A. A. Heller. Mr. Heller is a well-known business man who speaks the Russian language and has a long, intimate knowledge, and is a trained observer. He spent several months travelling in Russia and Siberia at the very time of the adaptation of the new economic policy in 1921. $1.50

DRAMA

JEREMIAH: By Stefan Zweig. A beautiful drama in nine scenes. Through the prophet, Jeremiah, are depicted both the material and the spiritual struggles of today. Romain Rolland, in a long article, says: "Zweig's poem presents these with grandeur." $2.00

POETRY

SAMPHIRE: By John Cowper Powys. These 20 poems have a haunting and terrific beauty. $1.00

FOR EAGER LOVERS: By Genevieve Taggard. The author is by most critics regarded as one of our greatest American poets. She considers this volume to be a selection of her best work. $1.25

IN MEMORIAM AND OTHER POEMS: By Martin Feinstein. Won The Nation Poetry Prize. $1.25

WHEN A SOUL SINGS: By P. M. Raskin. Mr. Raskin is the most popular of Jewish poets. His work is distinguished for its simplicity and charm. $1.50

This is no exaggeration. Read the book. You will agree with us

Half a million copies sold in the original. Translated into seventeen languages

The Adventures of MAYA THE BEE

By WALDEMAR BONSELS

Illustrated with head and tail pieces in black and white for each chapter and four full-page colored illustrations by HOMER BOSS.

Maya is a little bee, and also a dear girl. You laugh and cry with her. You thrill with her adventures. You love her. 8vo, $2.75

ESCAPE. A novel

By JEFFERY E. JEFFERY

Author of "Side Issues"

The story of a woman who seeks escape from middle-class surroundings. She goes into business and is not ruined.

Mr. Jeffery writes of her love and her business ventures with genial understanding. His book by the English critics is called "strong, powerful, moving." $2.00

FRUIT OF THE TREE. A novel

By HAMILTON FYFE

Author of "The Widow's Cruse"

Mr. Fyfe contrasts two types of women —the woman who seeks to avoid the burden of motherhood, and the woman who is a natural mother. He does not take sides; he does not plead or preach; he sets forth these problems of personality with the insight and fine humor that made the author of "The Widow's Cruse" a favorite. $2.00

The Best Mystery Story Ever Written

say the critics

WHAT BECAME OF MR. DESMOND

By C. NINA BOYLE

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "There is no doubt American readers will vote it the best mystery story they have ever read."

N. Y. World: "A mystery story unique beyond measure. We defy any reader either to drop the book unfinished or to guess the finish before it comes."

N. Y. Tribune: "A story of extraordinary ingenuity and genuine human interest."

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "One of the best mystery tales in many moons."

Minnesota Daily Star: "One of those books that you're prepared to sit up until the final page is reached. A most engaging thriller with an astounding mystery that will suffice to fascinate the most jaded reader of the ordinary tale of crime. An ingenious and terrible tale of consummate villainy that is without a dull moment. The characters are clear-cut, the mystery tremendously engrossing, and the story much more carefully prepared than most." $1.75

Three new books prepared for the Educational Committee, Commission on the Church and Social Service of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

The Coming of Coal

ROBERT W. BRUÉRE

This is a sane and extremely interesting account written for the average layman who has no time to do the research work that is here apparent. Without definitely taking sides on mooted questions that naturally arise, Mr. Bruère outlines the history of the coal industry in this country, making a fascinating story of it. Cloth, $1.00.

Christianity and Economic Problems

KIRBY PAGE, Editor

A new "Problem Discussion Series" book

"In every quarter the present state of affairs is being challenged. Arguments on both sides are set forth, leaving the members of the discussion group to reach independent conclusions. Cloth, 50c.

The Social Gospel and Personal Religion —Are They in Conflict!

The theme originates in the fact that some preachers have been gradually putting less emphasis upon creed or ritual, and more upon character-formation and real fellowship. The author goes to psychology and philosophy for proofs of his arguments and at the same time keeps away from too much technicality. Paper 25c.

The Place of Jesus in The Life of Today

HENRY KINGMAN, Author of "Building on Rock."

A beautifully written book that will appeal to every thoughtful reader. It fills a real need because the author shows a genuine sympathy for those "who have to live and suffer without much comfort of philosophy or mystical experience." It is a frank re-appraisal of Jesus in the light of modern times, for men's needs change with the progress of civilization. Cloth $1.25.

The OLD HOUSE

By Cecile Tormay

An impressive novel of Hungarian life which has achieved both an artistic and a popular success in Europe and has been translated into five languages. Richly colored and distinguished in its workmanship it is at once a notable literary achievement and a profoundly moving story. $2 net.

Everybody climbs Fool's Hill at one time or another; that's why everybody will enjoy Leona Dalrymple's newest book.

Fool's Hill

By Leona Dalrymple

Given a boy, a girl, a car and moonlit summer nights, and what can you expect but the pleasant madness of youth?
Here's a book filled with that pleasant madness—the story of a boy, as delightfully absurd as ever appeared in a book, who will remind every male reader of himself as he used to be. It's also the story of numerous young ladies, and of the boy's eccentric grandmothers and, in particular, of the egregious Teddy. Their combined adventures make uproariously funny reading. $1.75 net.

Dust of Desire

By Margaret Peterson

The story of a man's passion and a woman's faith—set in an untamed corner of East Africa. $1.75 net.

Vanderdecken

By H. de Vere Stacpoole

How Hank Fisher set out in pursuit of the pirate "Vanderdecken"; how he and Bud du Cane, in company with the redoubtable B. C., patrolled the California sea coast; how they rescued Tommie Coulthurst and what she thought about it all; and how the whole affair culminated in the most surprising adventure—it's all in this breezy yarn, one of the most enjoyable ever written by the author of Satan and The Blue Lagoon. $1.75 net.

McCarty, Incog.

By Isabel Ostrander

McCarty, the lovable but irascible hero of How Many Cards and The Twenty Six Clues, hits the trail again in this latest mystery story by Miss Ostrander. $1.75 net.

Above Suspicion

By Robert Orr Chipperfield

A mystery story with—yes actually—a new kind of detective in it. You'll never regret meeting Geoff Peters, with his stolid manner and the keen brain behind his innocent eyes. It's the best mystery Chipperfield has written—which means a lot to readers of Unseen Hands and The Second Bullet. $1.75 net.

The Green Overcoat

By Hilaire Belloc

Professor Higginson yielded to temptation and took another man's overcoat. What followed makes gorgeous reading. A really humorous detective story—with illustrations by G. K. Chesterton. $1.75 net.

With Historical Version by Carolyn Sherwin Bailey

This unusually attractive volume contains Longfellow's immortal poem, and a historical prose version, based upon authentic records of the wanderings and trials of the unfortunate Acadians. The lives of these people have been definitely traced by Miss Bailey, providing a historical background for the romance of the poem. This book is more than a story—more than a fine edition of Evangeline—it is an important contribution to American literature upon a subject about which little has been written. The book is beautifully printed and bound and illustrated with twenty duotone prints of scenes from the photoplay produced by William Fox, chosen because of their remarkable artistic value. These illustrations faithfully interpret the spirit and beauty of the poem to a degree rarely attained in illustrations by the most capable artists.

THE MADGE BELLAMY EDITION OF

LORNA DOONE

Illustrated with thirteen full page colored prints and ten duotone pictures of scenes from the new photoplay, to be released in October. The Introduction is by Thomas H. Ince, famous producer of fine photoplays, and each copy bears the official indorsement and signature of Madge Bellamy.

Backed by the greatest co-operative sales promotion campaign the book field has ever known—the united efforts of Milton Bradley Company, Thomas H. Ince, Inc., Associated First National Pictures and M. Witmark & Sons, Music Publishers—a program that will bring new customers into your store and really create new buyers of books.

Watch your mail for the big broadside on this book, explaining in detail the remarkable publicity which it will receive, how it will develop new customers, the extensive and beautiful window display material available—and how four of the largest concerns of their kind are uniting in a unique and effective effort to make a success of this beautiful volume.

N. B.—This will be the only edition of Lorna Doone published, illustrated with scenes from the photoplay.

Something about some good salable novels for the Autumn season

At the Earth's Core

By Edgar Rice Burroughs
Author of Tarzan of the Apes

"Fascinating," "enthralling," "thrilling" are some of the terms people use freely when speaking of this extraordinary tale by the Tarzan man.

It is the story of David Innes and an old inventor, who visit the earth's center by means of a machine expressly designed to bore through the earth's crust. They find a country similar somewhat physically to the earth's surface, but still in what we call the prehistoric period. Enormous animals, long extinct here, are common, and the dominant race are gigantic, ferocious, man-eating lizards. It's topsy-turvy land with water running up-hill, a sun always in the center and a continuous day. Adventures befall the earthly visitors that would hardly seem credible were it not for the magic of the author's story-telling power which makes the amazing yarn read like truth. To anyone who wants excitement and entertainment in his reading this tale will be a delight. Nine illustrations by J. Allen St. John. Price $1.75.

Gift of the Desert

By Randall Parrish
Author of Comrades of Peril

Forced by the most hellish of circumstances into a marriage that was distasteful and full of terror for her, Deborah Meredith chose, instead of living with brutal Bob Meager, to trust her life to the perils of the desert. But she did not go alone. For, out of the dark, from the midst of outlawed Mexicans and desperadoes, from out of the cold night-air, strong with the smell of drunkenness, and laden with the terrorizing feeling of treachery and outlawry was stretched to her a helping hand. She seized it, and trusted her unknown guide implicitly, until dawn, coming slowly upon the desert, revealed him as the "Frisco Kid," a notorious outlaw and bandit. Then followed in rapid succession a number of adventures with startling sequences, arriving at a denouement—so pleasing that the novel will be laid aside with a pang of regret.

"Gift of the Desert" is additional evidence of Parrish's marvelous story-telling powers and of his inimitable style of writing. Jacket and Frontispiece by J. Allen St. John. Price $1.90.

Publishers A. C. McCLURG & CO. Chicago

"Bring Me His Ears"

By Clarence E. Mulford
Author of Hopalong Cassidy

Incensed at the brutal treatment of his friends by Armijo, the Mexican Governor of the Department of New Mexico, Tom Boyd, plainsman and adventurer, slapped that dignitary's face. Tom got away with it at the time, but the irate greaser commanded his hirelings to "Bring me his ears." It was a pretty big contract because Tom was a first-class fighting man and well able to take care of himself.

The action of the story takes place during a caravan journey across the great plains from St. Louis to Santa Fe. As a picture of pioneer adventure, danger and struggle, the vivid account of the journey is of thrilling and surpassing interest. Jacket in full color. Price $1.90.

The Bondboy

By George W. Ogden
Author of Claim Number One

The Bondboy is the story of Joe Newbolt, bound out by the force of family circumstances to work for a number of years for a narrow-minded, miserly, tyrannical farmer and capitalist. Of good Kentucky stock, Joe was clean, honorable and just. Such education as he had, he earned as Abraham Lincoln earned his by surmounting difficulties appalling to the ordinary man.

Tragedy comes into his life. He is accused of MURDER and circumstances are against him. His mouth is sealed; he cannot as a gentleman, utter the words that would clear him and so over him impends the shadow of death. Blood is blood, however, and Joe, the bondboy, descendant of an honorable and chivalrous race, never hesitates or falters. It is a dramatic tale with an intensity of interest that fairly grips the attention. During the autumn there will appear a great feature play in which a famous movie star will enact the part of Joe. Jacket in full color. Price $1.90.

The Chessmen of Mars

By Edgar Rice Burroughs
Author of The Mucker

Another marvellous Martian yarn by the man whose wondrous imagination has thrilled two continents. Our old friend, John Carter, Warlord of Mars, and his beautiful wife, Dejah Thoris, appear again, but the story mainly concerns the adventures of Tara, Princess of Helium, daughter of the Warlord, among strange races in remote regions of the Red Planet. Among other astounding things we are shown the land of headless men, creatures with the power of detaching their heads from their bodies and replacing them at will.

The title of the story comes from a grim and deadly war game, similar to chess, played on Mars with men and naked swords. Price $1.90.

The House of Delusion

RUPERT SARGENT HOLLAND

Price $1.75

12mo. Cloth. Colored Jacket

Melchior Pryde, a rich bachelor, and his intimate friend, Ambrose Tyrrel, return to Hillcrest, Pryde's old home in America, after a long stay in Italy. Pryde has a large family of nephews and nieces who immediately come to his house and try to make him feel at home, but their welcome is abruptly shattered by the mysterious killing of Pryde's nephew, Wykoff Jay. Through the maze of strange circumstances that entangle Pryde's family there runs a love story of great appeal.

12mo. Cloth. Illustrated. Colored jacket and frontispiece

Wyoming, 1868, was the meeting-place of Union Pacific railroad builders, gamblers from everywhere, painted ladies, Mormons on their way west to Salt Lake City, savage Sioux trying to stop them in the mountain-defiles and on the alkali deserts—and between them they managed to cram the frontier with all kinds of excitement.

This is a novel of Western America in the making; intensely thrilling—and at the same time true to actual facts—from start to finish.

Cross Currents

KATHARINE HAVILAND TAYLOR

Price $1.75

12mo. Cloth. Colored Jacket

A great surgeon—but a ruthless man—that is what life made of Derrick Strong, who grew up smarting under the wrongs done his father. But no man can handle life and human nature as Derrick tried to; and how he found that out is the story of Diana Temple, a very real woman of today.

This is by all odds the biggest novel Katharine Haviland Taylor has written.

12mo. Cloth. Illustrated. Colored jacket

Small Sarah Burkhart, who lived in Red Rose Court in the crowded tenement district of a New Jersey manufacturing city, looked after babies and children whose mothers were at work, and made herself a veritable "Madonna of the Curb."

Then misfortune came and Sarah's father went to prison and the little Madonna was sent to a reform school. Conditions were hard and not well suited to a girl's developing into a good woman, but Sarah never lost her faith in life. There in the country, among the quaint Mennonite people from whom she had sprung, Sarah found love and happiness at last.

ALEXANDRE DUMAS

Cloth. 2 Volumes. $4.50

Three-quarter Morocco, $12.00

12mo. Forty-eight illustrations by Riou Colored jacket

THE COUNT OF MONTE CRISTO is one of the great romantic novels. With THE THREE MUSKETEERS it stands as the crowning achievement of that master of adventure, Alexandre Dumas.

The illustrations for this edition have been chosen because of the success with which they catch the dash and color of the text. And the translation perfectly conveys both the style and the substance of this great story.

Lafayette for Young Americans

RUPERT SARGENT HOLLAND

Price $1.75

12mo. Cloth. Colored jacket

Eight illustrations taken from old prints

A stirring and clearly told story of the adventurous career of Lafayette, the young French hero who came to the aid of the new Republic of the United States. The author has kept much of the material of his earlier book, LAFAYETTE, WE COME, but has omitted the section that dealt with the recent war and added several new chapters relating to Lafayette's adventures in America.

The illustrations are from reproductions of unusual portraits of Lafayette, Washington, Rochambeau, Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette, and fine views of Valley Forge and Mount Vernon.

EMILE COUÉ'S
Sensational Book

"SELF MASTERY Through Conscious AUTOSUGGESTION"

EMILE COUÉ

LONG before the translation of Emile Coué's own book into English, accounts of his marvelous cures were calling out editorials and provoking lively discussion.

When his "SELF MASTERY THROUGH CONSCIOUS AUTOSUGGESTION" was published on July 15th, the market was ready and eager for Coué's own authoritative explanation of the wonderful results reported through the press.

Since then sales have piled up by leaps and bounds. Daily papers, as well as the magazines, are giving the subject valuable free publicity.

Now Is the Time to Cash In On This Live Subject

"Couéism" is a live topic of conversation everywhere—in clubs, at dinner tables, even on the streets. Every well-informed person wants to know about it, and the results being gained in the cure of all kinds of illness are already adding a big impetus to the sales of the book.

Here is the book the country has been waiting for—Emile Coué's own book on his method and cures. Why not make sure of getting your share of the business by featuring "SELF MASTERY THROUGH CONSCIOUS AUTOSUGGESTION" in your store right away?

SWALLOWED UP!

By MRS. WILSON WOODROW

The story of a rich and beautiful girl captured on the streets in open day by a powerful gang of murderers. The battles of wit and courage the brave young heroine undertakes to save her life and honor fill this book with excitement from first chapter to last mad scene. A book that can't be laid down! The best thing Mrs. Woodrow has done.

This story offers a possible solution to the tragic mystery of many young girls' disappearance. Its characters stand out, true to life and to their various natures. You are tired of dull stories, and stupid stories, and mean stories, and vulgar stories. Swallowed Up! is filled with clean, abundant life. $1.75

GREAT PIRATE STORIES

Edited by JOSEPH LEWIS FRENCH

The best stories by master story-tellers of corsairs—tales of sea fights, land forays, wreck, pillage and buried treasure. This is a book for the reading table, for the book-rack above the bed, for the mantle shelf; an anthology to read again and again. A companion volume to Great Sea Stories.

Each story is complete. French has searched literature for the most thrilling tales. Read of the roaring buccaneers of the Spanish Main, the corsairs of the Deathly Shore, of sinking ships, lost armadas, and war on the ocean. $2.00

Poe's Tales of Mystery and Imagination

A new edition containing thirty mad and beautiful stories which have never been equalled in the world's literature.

Many full-page illustrations by the magic and mystic pen of Harry Clarke. Large quarto, gift edition. $6.00

Wisdom of Theodore Roosevelt

The pith of Roosevelt's many-sided philosophy, ringing epigrams on history, art, religion, politics, morality, and the other living topics in which his keen, sure mind found interest.

The newest of the Wisdom Series. A beautiful pocket volume, 16mo, limp leather binding, richly ornamented, full gilt edges, in slip case, uniform with others in the series. $1.50

FROM MORN TO MIDNIGHT

By GEORG KAISER

The drama of a bank cashier who, suddenly roused to realization of life's adventure by a woman's smile, tosses away honor, home, family, the dull web of contented days which has meshed him—and absconds. In seven tremendous dramatic scenes, each word of which is poignant with emotion, he is shown seeking desperately, in dissipation and in religion, for the consummate joy of life, for an apotheosis beyond mortality.

This is the New York Theater Guild's success of Autumn, 1922, an expression of the new drama almost Hamletian in power, hailed by the metropolitan press as the greatest thing yet done by the Theater Guild. Illustrated with 7 scenes from the play. $1.50

Through the Fourth Wall

By W. A. DARLINGTON

Entertaining essays on things and ideas of the theater and of intellectual London life, by one of the quickest-witted and most widely followed of the young Englishmen. Darlington is generally instructive and always amusing, and his lightest periods are filled with sound dramatic criticism. $4.00

Andersen's Fairy Tales

The most beautiful stories ever written for children. A gift book the child will treasure for all time.

Profusely illustrated in full color and black-and-white by Harry Clarke. $6.00

Historia Amoris

By EDGAR SALTUS

A new edition of this History of Love, from the wild orgies of Babylon to modern days. Love as Romance, as a Faith, as an Ideal, through all history is developed. $1.75

Golf

By ARNAUD MASSY

The dean of French golfers, former holder of the British open title, has written an entirely new book which can be understood by the veriest beginner, and read with profit by the champion. Massy explains the elementals and the theories of correct play, and illustrates many unusual shots.

Numerous diagrams and action photos. $1.50

THE FRENCH REVOLUTION: A Historical Outline

By WALTER GEER

A history which has the swiftness of an outline and the intimacy of a biography. Walter Geer deals with men. He revitalizes, he recreates the people of revolutionary France, with all their passions, ideals, hatreds, and hopes.

Geer has carefully avoided the romanticism of Carlyle in his adherence to honest historical standards, yet has produced a history of unique vitality. His recent great successes, Napoleon the First: An Intimate Biography and Napoleon the Third: The Romance of an Emperor, have opened for him an enthusiastic public. Illustrated, $5.00

Memoirs of Countess Kleinmichel

This interesting autobiography by a Russian gentlewoman, a favorite at the Imperial Court for many years, gives new pictures of Imperial and Revolutionary Russia. Like a remarkable fiction is her story of escapes from the Red Terror when the mobs hunted for their old lords. Glamor and glory move through these pages, followed by the crash of undreamed disaster. On the continent these memoirs have recently been published under title of Pictures of a Shipwrecked World, and have aroused much praise. Fully illustrated. $4.00

ST. JAMES'S STREET; and Chronicles of Almack's

By E. BERESFORD CHANCELLOR

An intimate chronicle of a famous old London street in the 17th and 18th centuries, showing how its history was bound up with the history of England. In addition is the story of the famous gambling resort of the nobility during the height of 18th century gallantry.

Illustrated with many quaint cartoons. $4.50

PSYCHOANALYSIS and LOVE

By ANDRÉ TRIDON

Everything about Psychoanalysis, the study of men's secret thoughts and natures. Everything about love, its mystery, its morality, its sensual and spiritual meaning. A text-book in Psychoanalysis and a reference book in the mystery of the human heart. $2.50

Italian Romance Writers

By JOSEPH SPENCER KENNARD

Dr. Kennard has worked out a complete history of the Italian novel, showing its interinfluences with other European literatures, and giving extracts and summaries of many great classics, old and new. From Alexander Manzoni to Gabriele D'Annunzio, the work of all great Italian romancers is summarized and clarified. $2.50

Myths and Legends of China

By G. P. CHALMERS-WERNER

A scholarly and entertaining book, filled with queer stories of the devil-gods and dragon-angels of ancient fecund China. Chalmers-Werner investigates China's mythical history and cosmogony, superstitions and folk-lore.

Illustrated with 32 curious illustrations in full color, and many in black-and-white. 7.50

Degeneration in the Great French Masters

By JEAN CARRÈRE

A sense of terrible desolation, of the sin of wasted genius, of talents abundantly provided and prodigally thrown away, pervades Carrère's sad indictment of many of the greatest powers in French literature—Rousseau, Verlaine, Balzac, Baudelaire, Flaubert, Zola, Musset, Chateaubriand. His book is a great defense of honest living in art. $4.00

Masterpieces of Oriental Rugs

By GROTE-HALSENBALG

A book for the lover of beautiful things. 150 full color illustrations of art masterpieces in woven tapestry, each with explanatory note of its symbolism and history. $7.50

CHINESE NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS: Stories of Old China

Edited by BRIAN BROWN. Foreword by Sao-ke Alfred Sze, Minister from China to the United States

Magical tales of the East, strange stories of emperors, dragons and demons, for the first time collected and given to English readers. A book worthy in every way of a place beside Mr. Brown's recent The Wisdom of the Chinese and The Wisdom of the Hindus.

Uncle Henry
on Love, Marriage and Other Perils with introduction by
Irvin S. Cobb

"Uncle Henry is one of our master satirists—a wizard at launching the indirect attack", says Irvin Cobb. "In this volume he has flanked and enfiladed the bogusness of so many present-day issues that one hesitates to pick a particular chapter as being better than the rest. One finds a way out of the dilemma by heartily commending the entire table of contents". The most unique book in a decade for wit and satire.

The Daily Dozen
by Walter Camp

This booklet illustrates and describes Walter Camp's original series of twelve daily health exercises. No one is better equipped than Mr. Camp to write on such an important subject.

Nearly half a million copies of this popular booklet have been sold, and the demand has not let down at all. So widely do we advertise it, that the name—"Daily Dozen" has become a synonym for "Keeping Fit".

A book you should always have on display.

Ten Cents a Copy.

Reynolds Atlas

Maps and text matter completely revised to July 1st, 1922. Most exhaustive. Lowest price. Invaluable for quickly ascertaining accurate facts and figures concerning any land and people—populations, areas, boundaries, altitudes, soils, climates, topography, minerals, manufactures, agriculture, commerce, shipping, etc. Also equipped with automobile road maps, 1922 motor laws and railroad maps of every railroad in the United States and parts of Canada. Unsurpassed for Home, School and Office.

356pp, Cloth, Colored Jacket, Illustrated. Net $4.50.

Bare-Handed Selling

This is not a book of theoretical salesmanship. It is a book of bedrock selling facts—the thrilling recital of the actual sales experiences of 50 men and woman who made good under adverse conditions.

It is a book of tools—not rules, for successful selling.

One concern who has purchased a number of copies says "if there is one BEST book on selling, this is it". It contains as well a "Personal Message to Salesmen" by Charles M. Schwab.

JEFFERSON DAVIS
HIS LIFE AND PERSONALITY

By MORRIS SCHAFF

Author of "THE SPIRIT OF OLD WEST POINT," "SUNSET OF THE CONFEDERACY, etc.

An outstanding biography of commanding historical interest and literary charm in which an officer of the Northern Armies unprejudiced by the war time propaganda against Jefferson Davis as president of the Southern Confederacy goes to the indisputable historical record of Mr. Davis as a soldier, statesman and American gentleman.

No true American will lay down this book without a sense of satisfaction in the thought that his fellow-countrymen of the South were led in the great struggle of the Civil War by a man whose private character and official acts were worthy of the best traditions of their race.

THE HORSES OF DIOMEDES

By Remy deGOURMONT, Translated by C. SARTORIS

This is one of deGourmont's rarer creations in which through Diomedes, the aristocratic recluse and his friends the author embellishes his tale with aphoristic discussions on the problems of beauty, morality and the pleasure of the senses in a manner reminiscent of Nietzsche's Zarathustra. Net $2.00

ECONOMIC MOTIVES By Zenas C. Dickinson

This authoritative work on social psychology will find a ready distribution among the many readers interested in the New Economics. It gives a stimulating résumé of modern psychology for those who have not the time for a large amount of special reading, and it gives novel interpretations of some age-old economic problems. $2.50

THE INFLUENCE OF MILTON By R. D. Havens

A monumental critical history of eighteenth and early nineteenth century English verse with special attention to Milton's influence on the form and subject-matter. It can be heartily recommended to lovers of literature for its unique method of approach to the subject, for its unusual discussion of the sonnet and other lyric poetry, and for its complete critical apparatus. $7.50

THE PRINCIPLES OF ENGLISH VERSIFICATION By Paull F. Baum

Although this work is mainly devoted to an explanation of tradition verse-forms, there are interesting sections on free-verse and other exotic poetry. The large number of unhackneyed illustrative extracts will recommend it to many readers. It will accordingly appeal to all who appreciate poetry as well as to those who desire to write poetry themselves. $2.00

CAUSES OF HEART FAILURE By Wm. H. Robey

BAIRD'S NEW BOOKS

In Preparation

Metals and Their Alloys

By Charles Vickers

While this volume is partly based on "Metallic Alloys" by William T. Brannt and succeeds that volume, the revision has been so thorough and complete that practically a new book has resulted. It has been deemed advisable to change the title to one more descriptive of the contents and scope of the book. The new volume deals with metals from their origin to their useful application, both individually and as parts of alloys, used where strength, ductility, toughness, lightness, color, hardness, cheapness, conductivity, or bearing properties are demanded. Every effort has been made to modernize the volume and produce a work indispensable to everyone interested in metals and their alloys. The author, in addition to being a consulting foundry engineer and specialist in alloys, is the non-ferrous editor of several of the leading metallurgical periodicals and an authority on the subject. 6¼x9¼ Inches—800 Pages—110 Illustrations. Price $7.50

Soap Maker's Hand Book

By P. B. Meerbott and I. V. Stanley Stanislaus

The previous editions of this volume were widely in demand by the trade, which testifies that they offered information of distinct and practical value. The new edition will be completely revised, enlarged and brought up to date and will include all of the latest developments in the industry. $7.50

Furniture Worker's Handy Book

By John W. Stephenson

The author, who is editor of "The Upholsterer" and is well-known as a writer on furniture and upholstery subjects, is preparing this volume as a much needed work of instruction and reference for all those in any way connected with the various branches of the furniture trades. It is practically an encyclopedia of the industry and contains directions for doing the many classes of work which the furniture worker and repairer are called upon to do.

Watch Repairer's Hand Book

By L. B. Pratt

An elementary and practical treatise for the apprentice and watch repairer, giving correct and up-to-date methods for cleaning, adjusting and repairing all types of American and foreign watches. With the instructions in this volume any person of average intelligence can obtain a fair working knowledge of watch repairing. $2.00

Modern Painting and Varnishing

By F. W. Vogel

A practical work of instruction and reference for painters, paint dealers, architects, private consumers and manual training schools, describing clearly and concisely the manufacture as well as the application of paints and varnishes, both interior and exterior, according to the best modern practice.

Complete Practical Sign Painter

By R. H. Forgrave

This new volume is being prepared to meet the demands of those who wish to become proficient in modern, up-to-date sign painting. It is a self-instructive compendium and contains all that is necessary to give the student a thorough, practical knowledge of the art as practised by the leading sign painters of today. Every page bristles with clear, comprehensive and concise mechanical features of the art.

Aluminium

By Joseph W. Richards

Professor Richards' work on aluminium has, since the first edition was issued, been acknowledged the most complete and authoritative book published on that subject. It covers the history, occurrence, properties, metallurgy and application of aluminium, including its alloys. A new fourth edition which is in course of preparation will be completely revised and enlarged and will include all of the latest developments in that industry.

THE A B C OF VACUUM TUBES USED in RADIO RECEPTION—By E. H. Lewis

Written particularly for the person who "knows nothing about radio" but who would like to gain an understanding of the elementary principles of operation of vacuum tubes and various circuits in which they are used for the reception of radio-telegraph signals and radio-telephone music and speech. Specially made illustrations. Price $1.00

CONSTRUCTION OF NEW TYPE TRANSATLANTIC RECEIVING SETS—By M. B. Sleeper

There is a peculiar fascination about receiving radio messages from the high-power stations of England, France, Germany, Russia and Italy, as well as those located in the Pacific Ocean and the Oriental Countries. Several types of simple receiving sets for this purpose are described, with detectors and amplifiers to accompany them. Suggestions are also given for operating relays and reproducing the signals on a phonograph. Schedules of operating time for high-powered stations are given. In addition there is some valuable data on home-made wave-meters for testing and experimenting. Price 75 cents

CONSTRUCTION OF RADIO PHONE AND TELEGRAPHY FOR BEGINNERS—By M. B. Sleeper

Radio men can follow the data in this book with full confidence because each piece of apparatus described was first made, tested, and found efficient before the final design was accepted. Special receivers, both crystal and audion, are shown in detail. Regenerative circuit as well as audio and radio frequency amplifiers are described with clear photos, diagrams, and working drawings prepared especially for the novice and the man who wants to receive the radio telephone broadcast. A special feature is the phonograph type radio set and the loud speaker. Price 75 cents

HOW TO MAKE COMMERCIAL TYPE RADIO APPARATUS—By M. B. Sleeper

Describes in detail many commercial types of spark and vacuum tube telephone transmitting and telegraph and phone receiving equipment of all kinds. The experimenter will be able to get a world of ideas for the design and construction of his next piece of radio equipment from the very clear descriptions and the 98 clearly illustrated figures. Price 75 cents

THE RADIO EXPERIMENTER'S HAND BOOK—By M. B. Sleeper

In these days when the Radio Set is almost as necessary in the Home as the Phonograph,, there has been a great need for a book which tells in concise and clear way the "Why" of Radio—What makes it work—How to build simple transmitters and receivers. This book meets this need remarkably well. 16 chapters, fully illustrated. Price $1.00

AGAINST THE GRAIN (A REBOURS)

By J. K. Huysmans

With an Introduction by Havelock Ellis and Illustrations by Odilon Redon

Huysmans, a descendant of great Flemish painters, forsook the canvas for literature. In this book he paints, in jeweled imagery, the soul of a hyperesthete who has renounced the affectations of civilization for the retreat of a sombre mansion where he goes through his exotic adventure. We hold forth the promise of an intellectual orgy to those who seek intoxication in the pages of a book. $3.00

THE LAKE OF THE GREAT DISMAL

By Charles Frederick Stansbury

Stansbury, a naturalist with a keen sense of beauty, spent ten years in the region of the Great Dismal Swamp of Virginia, the vast, little-known territory, desolate and gloomy and forbidding in certain seasons, but dazzling with loveliness and charm in others. He caught the spirit of the Dismal and narrates his adventures which make fascinating reading.

As a Man Would Choose His Friends, So Have We Endeavored to Select the Following Fall Publications for the Season of 1922

¶ Here are companions for all moods. There are times when a book-lover wants a volume that is written just to amuse. He will find them in this list. Again, he may want the latest thoughts of a master psychologist. Here are some of the best books on mental control ever published.

¶ There is variety that ranges from the findings of such students as Dr. Sigmund Freud to the sparkling Mr. Thomas L. Masson and the prolific and ever pleasing William Le Queux.

THOMAS L. MASSON — OUR AMERICAN HUMORISTS — $2.50 Net
Humorists I Have Known

No more distinguished a group of popular authors has ever been assembled together for the entertainment of readers than this splendid gathering of American humorists.

Each writer gives, by Mr. Masson's request, a delightful taste of his quality. Each one contributes an article or poem or bit of autobiography. So, in dazzling array, pass before the readers' eye George Ade, Irvin Cobb, Ellis Parker Butler, Peter Finley Dunne, Montague Glass, Don Marquis and the rest.

WILLIAM LE QUEUX — TRACKED BY WIRELESS — $2.00 Net

To the thousands of followers of radio today, as well as the countless lovers of the mystery story, this is a book of DOUBLE APPEAL. The book reveals all the latest angles of radio development in fictional dressing and suggests its great possibilities of the future.

ENOS B. COMSTOCK — MORE TUCK-ME-IN-STORIES — $1.50 Net

The author of TUCK-ME-IN-STORIES and TUCK-ME-IN-RHYMES has written, and profusely illustrated in color and black and white, the long anticipated second book of TUCK-ME-IN-STORIES. Few juvenile publications have been more successful than Mr. Comstock's first volume. Edition after edition has been printed and sold out, both here and in England. The same charm and simplicity of the author's stories and illustrations is repeated in new stories that will delight all children from five to ten years old.

ARMSTRONG LIVINGSTON — THE MYSTERY OF THE TWIN RUBIES — $2.00 Net

Three people are known to have coveted twin rubies. Each seems enmeshed in circumstantial evidence that might convict them of their theft. This is a plot that George M. Cohan might envy. Here is a story of mystery that, smoothly told and sustaining interest from beginning to end, might well have been the work of the able Rinehart-Hopwood combination. Mr. Armstrong is a well-known magazine writer and this, his first full length story, is certain to give him a first place among our mystery writers.

MERCEDES de ACOSTA — STREETS AND SHADOWS — $1.25 Net

William Stanley Braithewaite, says:
"All subjects chosen by this poet interpret just those excursions which she takes through the archways of life, and promises an advance that may go considerably further in the future."

SIGMUND FREUD — REFLECTIONS — $1.25 Net.

There is no greater master of psychoanalysis today than Professor Freud and, in this striking monograph, he gives us the results of his study of mankind today. The book is an amazing and startling statement of modern psychological conditions.

IN REPRINT EDITION!
THESE POPULAR SUCCESSES

The Brimming Cup
By
Dorothy Canfield

The great sensation of 1921 in the higher-priced edition, this most striking novel by Dorothy Canfield will certainly prove a top-notcher in the Popular Copyright Edition.

Women particularly will highly appreciate and treasure this deep and penetrating story of an American woman into whose happy married life comes a great question. A little judicious effort—and your sales are "brimming over!"

The Age of Innocence
By Edith Wharton

To the general public of today this brilliant picture of society life in the early days of New York comes as a literary sensation—a popular classic.

Its wonderful love theme which for dramatic intensity has few rivals in modern literature, will linger long in the readers' memories.

Over 110,000 copies of the book were sold in the original edition and the story has been awarded the Columbia University prize as the best of 1920 depicting American life.

The sales possibilities in the reprint field are tremendous. Here is your chance to CAPITALIZE!

Manslaughter
By
Alice Duer Miller

Through her successful full-length novels—serials and stories in the Saturday Evening Post—screen and stage productions, Alice Duer Miller has won a great following.

Her breezy, animated style, sparkling with clever dialogue through clever plot, captivates the reader to follow up more and more of her writings.

We will say of MANSLAUGHTER that it represents the author at the peak of her art, and that it has been made into a big Paramount Production.

Books on Hygiene

Williams' Personal Hygiene Just Ready

This book is far more than a recital of information on health. It establishes a new interpretation of health in terms of life. It is personal hygiene applied. The first five chapters consider the various aspects of the problem. The remaining chapters consider in a systematic way hygiene from the scientific side. The language is not technical. The work is planned for college students in general educational courses, for nurses, social workers and teachers. There are chapters on the muscular system, nutrition, the respiratory system, circulatory, excretory, and nervous systems, sexual aspects of life, prevention in specific diseases, hygiene of the mouth, eye, and ear.

NEVER TOLD TALES

By DR. ROBINSON

Cloth. 190 Pages. $2.00

Only a trusted physician could know the true "inside" stories of the men and women Dr. Robinson depicts, and only a man of his keen understanding and sympathy could tell them with such color and force. Following are a few of the enthusiastic reviews received from all parts of the country:

"Every one of these tales is entrancingly interesting."

"It is blunt, but leaves nothing in doubt."

"Someone would confer a great benefit on humanity if he would put this book in the hands of every young man and woman who is about to marry."

SEX KNOWLEDGE FOR MEN AND BOYS

By DR. ROBINSON

Illustrated. Cloth. 264 Pages. $2.00

A man may know more than is contained in this book; he may not know less. An eminently sane, clear, practical book which has saved and will save untold thousands from suffering and misery.

SEX KNOWLEDGE FOR WOMEN AND GIRLS

By DR. ROBINSON

WOMAN FROM BONDAGE TO FREEDOM

By RALCY HUSTED BELL

A marvelously fascinating account of woman's trail from the cave days to twentieth century freedom, and a quietly humorous, merciless expose of her treatment by man and religion.

Here pass in colorful procession the virgins of the Shrine and Juggernaut; the Heterae of the Greeks; the debased women of China, Thibet and Japan; the jewelled, perfumed creatures of Egypt; Hypatia, maiden of beauty, learning and virtue, stripped of her garments, paraded through the streets and torn limb from limb on the steps of the cathedral; the early Christian women; St. Paul, who "so loved the spirit that he hated the flesh" and woman; Luther's dear rib; the three kinds of Roman wives, the humiliations of woman under the laws of different countries, the modern woman, woman and religion, etc., etc., etc.

"Woman From Bondage to Freedom" is the most important book written in decades and one which will play a leading part for the next hundred years in revolutionizing society. It paints a convincing picture of the relations of man and woman as they should and will be.

A Clever Parody on a Great Novel

IF WINTER DON'T
A.B.C.D.E.F.NOTSOMUCHINSON

By BARRY PAIN

Delicious humor marks this parody of one of the best novels of recent years, done with rare skill by that master of parody, Barry Pain. Anyone who likes to laugh will like this book, but those who have read "If Winter Comes" will particularly delight in its aptness. The whole make-up of the book is a ludicrous imitation of the great novel—the jacket being an especially good burlesque. Boards, 12mo, net $1.00.

MY LADY APRIL

By JOHN OVERTON

A romance of Bath in the days of Beau Nash—a story of those mad merry days when mystery and high adventure held full sway. Georges Carpentier is the hero of the film version. Picture jacket in color, $1.90.

TREMENDOUS ADVENTURES

By DION CLAYTON CALTHROP

Full of variety and adventure, this novel develops from a beginning of old-fashioned romance into a story essentially ultra-modern in its conclusion. Picture jacket in color, $1.90.

A Literary Find

LOVE AND FREINDSHIP

By JANE AUSTEN

"The literary scream of the moment," says "John O'London" in the New York Times of this newly discovered story of Jane Austen's youth, which is followed by a History of England and several other highly characteristic fragments. All are reproduced exactly as written, including mistakes in spelling, grammar, etc. Here's both an important literary find and an uproariously funny book—recommend it to your discriminating customers. With a Preface by Gilbert K. Chesterton. Cloth, $1.75; with chintz jacket, $2.00.

MARTIN PIPPIN IN THE APPLE ORCHARD

By ELEANOR FARJEON

Your discriminating customers—those for whom you save the very choicest books of the season—are the ones for this gay tale of love laughing at locksmiths, full of delicious humor. The author is a granddaughter of Joseph Jefferson. J. D. Berestord writes a splendid introduction. With a specially designed jacket by Hugh Lofting. $2.50.

THE TRAIL OF THE RAGGED ROBIN

By FLORA KLICKMANN

A delightful account of a spring holiday spent at the author's "Flower-Patch" in the Wye Valley. So humorous are its adventures in friendship, so vivid its descriptions of the beauties of the country, that the reader feels he is actually sharing the author's holiday. $2.50.

THE COASTS OF ROMANCE

By CROSBIE GARSTIN

The riot of color, the unforgettable atmosphere of quaint, age-old places are made real in this vivid account of a leisurely trip to Mediterranean ports. The author is well-known to Punch readers as "Patlander." With many quaint and humorous illustrations, $2.00.

Fall Business Prospects

THE last few years have seen a great increase in the number of methods of charting business, so that retailers get in the daily press and from other official or semi-official sources a continuous comment on the tendencies that are showing up thruout the country. Many of these facts are of local application, and many only apply to specific industries, but in the fall season the retailer is particularly alert to measure those that will affect his interests between September and Christmas.

At a business conference at Wellesley Hills the other day, Mr. Babson, the father of modern business charting, stated that from his figures he could, this fall, talk optimistically of business conditions as he had not been able to for two years. The book-trade has not felt the depression that other business has felt in the past two years, but it should, with the others, be able to feel the result of the new business activity of the country and ought to get the result of such increases as seem bound to occur.

That business conditions should be favorable in spite of this most serious season of strikes shows that the fundamentals of business must be sound for home progress, even tho our relations with foreign countries may be curtailed by a new tariff. The chief effect of the two great strikes will be on home comfort and freight transportation. The large number of soft coal mines should soon be able to give most industries their quotas, altho the anthracite cannot possibly catch up, and some bituminous must be called on for this purpose.

The effect on transportation of the coal strike plus the railroad strike is bound to be serious, as railroads have reported that, even with coal tonnage lacking, they have been carrying record-breaking freights in the past few weeks. Booksellers must be forehanded if they are to get their books, and, from the sales indications of the early fall weeks, they ought to be able to prophesy what the pressure of the last weeks will bring and have the right amount of books started toward their counters.

No one can circulate among publishers without feeling that there is an unbounded optimism among them, founded on the sales of the first six months and the orders that have been coming in. This optimism is not based on the over-balanced totals of individual titles, but on the general results of stock orders and the sales of literature in all fields. To give increased confidence, there is the realization that two years of book campaigns are now reaping cumulative effect and that the country is talking books and thinking books more than it ever has before. Under the cover of such general interest, all sound or needed books can rise to reasonable and profitable sales.

Unless such currents were in the air, it would be impossible to account for the number of new bookstores that have started up in the past two or three years, which are adding new totals to book sales without decreasing the sales in the long established shops. Unless signs fail, more will be opened this coming season and gradually a more rounded service will grow up thruout the country.

From author to home reading table is a long and hazardous journey, but the list as now announced seems to indicate that it would be a pessimistic reader who could not find something of keen interest among 1922 fall publications.

The Fall Season

THE 106 pages of book announcements that are in this fall catalog show an increase of about 25 per cent over two years ago and an increase of almost 70 per cent over 1900. In 1900, there were 63 pages for this list; in 1905, 78; 1910, 68; 1915, 64; 1920, 85.

The fall season is always to be the great publishing season, because, as people turn to winter after the relaxation of summer, they are bound to be on the lookout for new publications and an increase of almost 70 per cent over 1900. so fully created at any other season. At the same time, the tendency to publish books thruout the year is being more and more felt, and, more significant than the increase of the Fall Announcement List from 63 to 106 pages is the increase of the Spring Announcement List from 25 pages in 1900 to 67 pages in 1922. This decided increase has come about since 1915, when the list ran only to 37 pages.

Several things have worked together to bring this change about. There has been a realization that good business management meant spreading the activities of any business enterprise over the twelve months in order that all phases of the business could be done full justice, and this never can be accomplished by concentrating too heavy a percentage in the one season. Besides this, the publishers have been assisted by the fact that, with the increase of book outlets, it has been more possible to keep in continuous touch with the bookselling field and they need not rely on two traveler's trips a year with books timed to fit into such a schedule. Booksellers on their part have been more than interested to encourage publishers in the thought that books could be published the year round, and have called for new titles in months that previously lacked important announcements. This has given them a better chance to use their display advantages of window and counter and a better way to keep customers' interest up by having something fresh to show at each visit.

It is not only fiction that has been put into a year round schedule, but books of all kinds. Publishers have, within the last year or two, begun to spread the dates of children's books so that they would not be so concentrated in the fall with perhaps one lesser publication date in the spring. With the year round selling emphasis on children's books, there is no reason why the children's department should not have the advantage of having new titles on display at seasons other than Christmas.

With the Spring Announcement List increasing more rapidly than the Fall Announcements there is a very visible sign of the improvement that has taken place in American publishing habits. As these lists each include books covering several months' publishing activity, it may soon be agreed on that about the only poor month for publishing books is December, and it seems not inappropriate that there should be some catching of breath in that month of retailers' harvest.

The Booklover's Itch

IN an article on advertising in Printers' Ink, the writer says:

"The copy for the general promotion advertising on California prunes was dignified and contained the best brand of English that a copy chief could produce. There was no raving but a gustatory description well calculated to start the salivary glands."

We recognize in the words "gustatory description" an attempt to parallel in the prune field the common book-trade word of "blurb," but just what is the parallel in the book field of the prune men's reference to the action of the salivary glands? Perhaps this is covered by bibliomania or by the phrase sometimes used, a man has the "itch" of a booklover. If the book-trade advertising can make its blurb so attractive that no one can pass a bookstore without heading-in as instinctively as the "Old Soak" would head into a saloon, we have raised book advertising to the plane of the food producers. Booksellers will testify that it is the reader who gets that feeling about books and who finds it impossible to keep away from a book counter more than a few days, who makes bookselling a joy and a profit.

The Dreaded English Influence

A CITY Councilman in Boston has discovered another English plot in the current edition of Webster's dictionary, as the word "constitution" is now defined so that there is no specific reference to the American Constitution, while in the old unabridged the definition hinged about the special place of the Constitution in the Government of the United States. "Not a word," he says, "about the Union or anything really American. It is as British as London Bridge. It is just one more straw which shows how the Anglo-Saxon wind is blowing."

If Mr. Watson really wished to use the dictionary to prove the increasing and subtle influence of England on America, he might do better to turn to any current American novel and see how the words ending in "our" are spelled. No American dictionary puts this spelling first, even the very latest issues, but one picks up current journals and finds all such words as "labor," "color," "vapor" and "neighbor" spelled with a "u," and in a new novel most decidedly American in its atmosphere and in its authorship every word of this class kind has been given the English spelling. Some "authour" or "investigatour" should look into this and see whether the Sulgrave Institute has added spelling to its subtle international propaganda.

The High Tide of The Fall Season

Has Every Established Novelist A New Book This Fall ?

THE process of winnowing which takes place before the book buyers' purchases are actually completed begins long before the array of books is presented to him on the bookshop counter. Many more manuscripts are written and prayed over than are ever accepted for publication, and many times more books are printed than get full and complete distribution, and few readers can cover all the titles that would be legitimately and genuinely interesting. At the same time, no one would wish seriously to curtail the number of books, as no single critic would put his finger on just the place where such curtailment should properly begin. Often the book that may have the strongest final influence and longest hearing may be supported in its first year by the prompt tho brief success of a mystery story which brings quick returns to the coffers. Novels, of course, have the strongest representation in every fall announcement, and this year the process of winnowing left about as complete a list of authors as the most omniverous of readers could desire. One distributor has said that he believes that every established writer in England and America has a new novel this year. Judging by the lists of books most emphasized, the American novelists lead the English in emphasis and prominence by but a small margin. Among the Americans of well established reputation whose books are coming are: Edith Wharton, Dorothy Canfield, Joseph Hergesheimer, Irving Bacheller, Rex Beach, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Meredith Nicholson, Alice Brown, Kathleen Norris, Joseph Lincoln, Robert W. Chambers, Stewart Edward White, Sinclair Lewis, Willa Cather, Charles D. Stewart, Henry Kitchell Webster, Temple Bailey, Basil King, Owen Johnson, Jeffery Farnol. And even this list covers only the beginning of a complete catalog.

Among the many English writers of well established reputation whose books will have fall display are to be found the names of Arnold Bennett, W. L. George, Eden Philpotts, A. S. M. Hutchinson, Walter de la Mare, Leonard Merrick, W. J. Locke, Hugh Walpole, Compton Mackenzie, Gilbert K. Chesterton, J. C. Snaith, E. Phillips Oppenheim, Sheila Kaye-Smith, Ethel M. Dell, Archibald Marshall, May Sinclair, W. B. Maxwell, E. Temple Thurston, Frank Swinnerton, Rebecca West. We miss Conrad here, perhaps, and Hall Caine on the list.

Perhaps there is no field that is looked over more carefully by the list makers in order to judge the prospects of the fall business than the field of biography, which so often supplies the important books of Christmas sale or winter reading. Many volumes are on the list and in such a variety of fields that it is difficult to see where the public's greatest interest will be. Among the English memoirs are the book on "William De Morgan and His Wife," St. John Strachey's memoirs, Roseberry's life of Chatham, Maurice Baring's "Puppet Show of Memory," Max Beerbohm's "Rosetti and His Circle." Among the American memoirs and letters there are the much anticipated volumes on Walter H. Page, 'the letters' of Franklin K. Lane, Oscar Strauss's reminiscenses, Morgenthau's "All in a Life Time," and William Roscoe Thayer's "Life of Washington." There are high anticipations naturally for "The Memories of a Hostess," from Mrs. James T. Fields's journals, and Theodore Dreiser has "A Book About Myself." In the field of the arts, "The Letters of Huneker" take prominence, with John Drew's "My Years on the Stage," Augustus Thomas's reminiscences, the memoirs of Emma Calvé and the life of Enrico Caruso.

At first glance, the field of travel seems comparatively slight, but interesting books in this line are always likely to develop from material not especially noticed when it first appears. Two very beautiful books will be George Edwards's "London" and Robert Shackleton's "Book of Washington." Frederick O'Brien's book will, of course, be prominent, and Chesterton's "What I Saw in America" is ready. Stefansson has a book on the North, and John Faris an attractive book on "Seeing the Eastern States."

Among the poets, many of the leading names are missing, but fortunately poetry sale is not much restricted to new output. We have, however, a new volume of John Masefield's, of Padraic Colum, of Grace Hazard Conkling and Hilda Conkling, of Edmund Blunden and T. S. Eliot, of Ruth Comfort Mitchell and John Hall Wheelock, and new editions of Adelaide Crapsey and John Gould Fletcher.

There are a half dozen collections of plays for library or textbook use and also newly printed plays from such important pens as those of Eugene O'Neill, John Masefield, St. John Ervine, John Galsworthy, Leonid Andreyev.

The essayists make a particularly strong representation, and the fact that so many good books are at hand ought to make this field of literature exceptionally prominent in the season of 1922. There are volumes from John Burroughs, Dallas Lore Sharp and Henry Van Dyke, from Henry Seidel Canby, Stuart P. Sherman and Francis Hackett, from Wilson Follett, H. L. Mencken and Charles S. Brookes, from John Macy, Ernest Boyd, Brander Matthews, Lytton Strachey, E. V. Lucas and St. John Ervine.

The humorists have not been idle or overlooked by the publishers, and there will be volumes from Irvin S. Cobb, Dr. Walter Traprock, Oliver Herford, Robert Benchley, Don Marquis and F. P. A.

The field of children's books is so large and so special that it would require an essay in itself to place any important emphasis, but, for those who believe American publishers are now leading the world in the effort to make books attractive as well as worth while for the children, it is interesting to find books enriched by such illustrative work as that of Jessie Willcox Smith, N. C. Wyeth, Louis Rhead, Frank Schoonover, Howard Pyle, Arthur Rackham, Jean de Bosschere, Lucy Fitch Perkins, Dugald Walker and Ednah Cooke, and to find children's authors of such permanent reputation as Thornton Burgess, William Heyliger, Stewart Edward White, Katherine Pyle, Ernest Thompson Seton, Dan Beard, Frances Jenkins Olcott and Ralph Henry Barbour, on this year's list.

There are two features of the fall that deserve special emphasis, as it means that a turning point has come in the problems of book manufacture as well as book publishing. There are many indications of a reprinting of the worth while standard sets and of a revival of the making of attractive flexible leather books which had been prohibited by the war's effect on good binding leather. Doubleday has added ten volumes of old classics to its very attractive Lambskin Library; Harper's have a Leather Craft Series with sixteen volumes; Dodd, Mead has issued several volumes of Archibald Marshall and Anatole France, to name but a few of the flexible series that are being reprinted. On the Lippincott list appear an eight volume "Arabian Nights," which has been out-of-print, and a Burns of four volumes; Dutton has reprints of Dent's beautiful edition of Jane Austen and the Brontës. Several publishers have beautiful new editions of old classics with colored plates such as the colored plate books that Crowell has planned on an elaborate scale. In a more elaborate way there are announcements of fine complete editions of John Galsworthy from Scribner, of George Moore from Boni & Liveright, and of De Maupassant from A. A. Knopf, and on the Houghton Mifflin list, always strong in standard material, there are several newly planned enterprises of their famous sets.

Convention Dates Set

THE Detroit local committee for the next American Booksellers' Convention had tentatively announced that the next meeting would be the fourth week in May. It has been found more convenient, however, in making hotel arrangements to have it in the week of May 14th, and the Hotel Statler will be the headquarters for May 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th. In taking the Convention to the Middle West, it is expected that a large number of booksellers from that section will be present who haven't found eastern cities within their range, and also it is hoped that a large number will come from the Province of Ontario, as bookselling conditions are the same there and the chance to show hospitality will be welcomed by the United States dealers.

English Books in Germany

A NEW firm, organized for the importing of English and the exporting of German books, has just started in business at Goetingen, Germany. Under the name of A. R. Pillai & Co., the firm is announced as being "entirely under British management" and will be the agent for the publications of the London Times. It is willing to represent American publishers, both of periodicals and of books and wants to hear from time to time from those interested in sending samples and announcements of current books.

Standards in Bookselling

By Ward Macauley

I RAN across a little book the other day entitled "Forty Years Among the Old Booksellers of Philadelphia" by W. Brotherhead who himself was engaged in bookselling in that city for many years. It is interesting to note Mr. Brotherhead's conception of the equipment that must necessarily be possessed before a man could consider himself qualified to engage in the high profession of bookselling. Mr. Brotherhead wrote:

"The old bookseller—one who is worthy of the name—must have high qualifications besides the mere objective merits of the general tradesmen. The first requisite he requires is a thoro knowledge of literature—he should be an encyclopedia, able to answer questions, about the general nature of books and their authors. The whole field of history he should know from Homer to Macaulay. The new discoveries in history either Biblical or general, he should know. The latest discoveries in Egyptian history such as the 3000 years old papyri, with the Biblical discoveries of Tischendorf and other profound scholars—all should be known by him. I do not mean a very profound knowledge but a general one.

"I am aware that in the past as well as the present, mere old ragmen—old junk dealers—have been and are metamorphosed into old booksellers—a disgrace to its high intellectual worth. I am also aware of some who are mere catalog old booksellers, and who, parrot-like can spin you off the latest books collected by a Bohn or a Quaritch, but are not aware of the contents of any of the books, nor of the special idiosyncrasies of the authors.. Such booksellers I would recommend to read all of Dibdin's works, published under the patronage of the Earl of Spencer: 'Censuria Literati,' Lowndes' 'Bibliographers' Manual' edited by H. Bohn, Brunet's 'Manual of Bibliography,' Walt's great work on Bibliography, Rich's 'American Bibliography,' Stevens' 'Nuggets.' These works will furnish them with the basis of bibliography—a knowledge of books—on which they can build by experience a superstructure that will honor their profession. Goldsmith in his 'Vicar of Wakefield' talks about 'Shakespeare and the Musical Glasses,' how few of our booksellers can do this! Charles Lamb the kindly and most interesting of literateurs should be read and studied. Hazlitt, in his brilliant criticism and Leigh Hunt in his essays, are worthy of careful perusal. These are a few hints thrown out for the especial attention of old booksellers, but only a few; the whole scope of general literature should be scanned over, and in the process of time the brain would be so filled with special literature that it would be a feast for the gods."

There is certainly much food for our thought in these observations by one of the old timers. We talk a great deal these days about the spirit of service in business and we claim that many of the abuses of the old manner of doing business have been done away with, that there is a finer spirit among competitors, a better relationship with patrons. But is there not a chance that with all our pursuit of ideals—worthy as these unquestionably are—we may not have ceased to lay proper emphasis on the matter of fundamental fitness for our calling? That fundamental fitness lies in a proper knowledge of the product we sell and of the product we might sell if the scope of our knowledge and ability were widened. To be able to guess at the varying degrees of favoritism shown a few extremely ephemeral best sellers may be profitable commercially but it by no means constitutes a complete equipment for the task of bookselling. Nor is there any reason why a severe test of the sort outlined by Mr. Brotherhead should be restricted to old booksellers. The general bookseller may equally recognize the value of the all-around knowledge which Mr. Brotherhead indicates as necessary to those in his craft.

We have said a good deal at one time or another about the training of the salesforce and most of what has been said has been to admirable purpose. It is only regrettable that more of the good things that have been formulated have not been put into practice. We can rightly set a higher standard as far as the book-knowledge of the selling staff is concerned. A customer has a right to expect that any reasonable inquiry concerning a matter of standard or current literature may receive an adequate and accurate answer at any institution that announces itself as a bookstore. A survey of the day's transactions in most of our stores would, however, reveal the fact that most of us sin more or less flagrantly in this particular. It is desirable, of course, to develop a sales-force with as much knowledge in their heads as possible, but the willingness and intelligence to use the mechanical helps from which the information can usually be obtained is equally important. A lawyer was once on the stand being questioned as to the legal phases of a certain subject. He made the astonishing statement that he knew all the law on the subject. His examiner mercilessly quizzed him on several complicated points and quickly compelled his surrender. A second lawyer took the stand.

"You, too, claim to know all the law affecting this particular case, I presume?" his examiner asked.

"No, but I know where I can find it," was the reply, and the examiner was effectually blocked.

So we do not need to know the answer to every possible question, but we should know where to find it and make use of it. But use of catalogs should supplement and not supplant reasonable familiarity with literature. A finer, more inclusive book-knowledge on the part of our selling staffs will do more than almost anything else to build up a permanent book-buying clientele.

But Mr. Brotherhead was not writing about salesmen. He was advising the bookseller, and every bookseller may well ask himself whether he now possesses a sufficient all-round equipment for his business, whether he is advancing or deteriorating in intimate knowledge of the glorious wares he sells, whether in attention to the mercantile details of his business, discounts, employing, advertising, and a round of details not individual to bookselling, he is not losing grasp of the essential things that mark off bookselling as distinct from every other trade or profession in the world. To train a selling staff is fine, but isn't it worth while to have the training begin where it manifestly ought—at the top? Every bookseller can find a sermon in this quotation from Mr. Brotherhead's little book and by applying the tests to himself may find, indeed, that his bookselling equipment is sadly in need of refurbishing. An inventory of stock periodically is an essential commercial custom. The value of equipment is a part of every properly taken inventory. When we write our next inventory, shall we have to allow a heavy depreciation in personal equipment or shall we be able to show an increased value in this important if intangible item?

Publishing and Bookselling in Europe

An Interview With Publishers at the Florence Book Fair

By Margery Leve

THERE could be no surer index of the basic intellectual and emotional stimulation brought about by the war than the fact that the representatives of the different countries of Europe at the International Book Fair, interviewed about the condition of the book business, all began with the same thought. "There has been a most marked increase in the production and sale of books since the war." This was their key note. In France, Poland, Italy, Germany, Russia, everywhere, people seem to have reacted in the same way. Many people who never would have thought of reading before have learned what it can mean, so that not only do people read more, but more people read. The men returning from their vivid experiences in the trenches, required something to color their workaday existence and sublimated this desire into a seeking for new things in books Technical books of all descriptions, thru which one can advance himself in his particular trade, books of moral and philosophical questioning wherein a man can ground his surging emotions in solid thinking, fast reading novels and more pretentious volumes of belles lettres which carry an obvious appeal to the nouveau riche as an easy road to culture, all these types of books and many others have had an unprecedented demand since 1918.

"At the close of the war the bookstores in France" says M. Beltrami, the French representative, "sold anything and everything. The demand was far greater than the supply and all sorts of books were published for a short time just for the sake of turning out printed matter. But the new public quickly learned to discriminate, and 'everything' wouldn't go. The subsequent decrease in the sale of books gave rise to the impression that that sudden spurt was a temperary condition and that the book business was in a bad way." This M. Beltrami does not think is the case. The lull is the temporary condition a protest of the new public against the promiscuous wares they were being offered, and the sale will gradually be brought back to its post-war status as the bookstores are supplied with better material. De luxe editions are in particular demand in France, and there is also a vogue for re-editing and publishing old cook books and recipe books of various descriptions.

The factors in French publishing are somewhat different from, for instance, those in

* At the request of PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, Miss Leve, who has been connected with New York publishing, interviewed the managers of the more important exhibits at the great Book Fair at Florence held during the past summer.

America, in that a large part of the market for French books lies outside France. This is unfortunate at the present time, as the value of the money in most of the countries which buy French books—Italy, Austria, Germany, Spain—has depreciated so terribly that trade relations are impossible with them. Larousse is the only house that has taken any action to allay this loss. It has, in Vienna, a plant where it manufactures on a Kronen basis special editions of appropriate publications to be sold only in the countries with depreciated currencies at a price less than half the regular French edition price.

PART OF THE UNITED STATES REPRESENTATION

The largest organization of the French publishers is Le Cercle de la Librairie, to which belong also the bookstores. This organization has interested itself mainly with the problems of retail selling, but La Maison du Livre, which is only a few years old, plans to take up these problems from the publishers' point of view. Thus far they have instituted a clearing house for the shipments of the different Paris publishers for different parts of France and the rest of the world, so enormously reducing freight costs. They also run a service in hunting up old and rare books. M. Paul Belin, the director, is at present at work on plans for a school for book clerks which will probably be opened in the fall. Here the clerk will learn to know, outside of the usual technical curriculum, his relations with publishers, so that eventually clerks all over France will be working together with the publishers in the most mutually profitable way. The organ of La Maison du Livre keeps up with the activities of publishers all over Europe as well as America.

FRANCE WAS WELL REPRESENTED

Strange and wonderful things have been done in the way of publishing in Russia since 1917, according to M. Orbam, the representative of Soviet Russia at the Fair. Of course all private enterprise was completely disrupted during those turbulent years, and only a very few of the oldest houses pulled thru in sufficient form to carry on, in spite of the help given them by the Commissariat of the People for Public Instruction. The bulk of the published matter that is now being produced is put thru by this department, the publishing branch of which is a huge and complicated organization into which M. Orbam did not go in detail, but satisfied himself with enumerating some of its many activities, but even a brief account is impressive.

In the face of the most adverse of circumstances, three thousand daily papers are somehow being published in Russia in spite of the lack of equipment and supplies. At times paper was so scarce that there are exhibited at the Fair newspapers on the back of sheets printed up to make cigar bands, and on the back of advertising posters. An organic chemistry textbook for high school use was also exhibited, multigraphed in script because at the time the books were needed either no proper paper could be obtained to print on, or no adequate machinery was available.

Maxim Gorky and a tremendous staff of men of letters in his charge, are engaged in translating into Russian the classics of all other countries, including China and Japan. The catalog now includes five thousand books, translated since 1917, representing such varied English authors as Lafcadio Hearn, Charles Dickens, and W. W. Jacobs. But home talent is not neglected. There is a special committee for considering the first attempts of peasants and other people whose eyes are only just opening to the field of literature, and many of these crude beginnings are now in print.

The publications of the Commissariat for Public Instruction were originally distributed free of charge, but now, with exceptions in special cases, they are sold for a nominal sum (a mere five million rubles or so a volume.)

The universal thirst for reading has, of course, gripped Russia even more than any other country, and its effect has been further stimulated by the active campaigning of the Commissariat for Public Instruction. Vivid posters showing the dangers of ignorance and the advantages of education are freely distributed and displayed, literary clubs are being formed, wandering theatrical troupes are sent even to the most desolated rural districts in Chautauquan fashion, and the six million soldiers of the Soviet army, who were not discharged until they could read and write, are now acting as teachers in their home localities. A million copies of an A. B. C. designed especially to teach adult peasants have been sold. Technical books of all kinds are most in demand, but also imaginative fiction as well as philosophy and poetry, in fact, every kind of printed matter seems to be fodder for these intellectually famished minds.

A Twelve Colored Process

Despite the inadequacy of equipment, improvements in printing processes are being instituted. A man by the name of Turkin has recently discovered what he believes to be a method of printing twelve colors at once. With the aid of the government's money he is at present perfecting this process of which we may hear much more before long.

The publishing department of the Commissariat is earnestly working to make possible adequate copyright protection for Russian authors.

There is, of course, more to be said against than for such centralized publishing activities, not to speak of the fact that no trace of really fine typography or workmanship is apparent in the Russian exhibit. However, one must remember that this is all very new. Obviously the significant thing about this Russian publishing is not the quality of the work but the sheer bulk of it.

Typography in Poland

One of the most striking exhibits at the fair, despite the fact that it is not a very large one, is that of Poland, arranged by Mme. Natalie Bzozowska. The beauty and richness of the Polish room were indicative of the great past of books in Poland. As far back as the XVIth Century fine works of typography were already being produced in the print shops of Cracow, Leipol, and Wilno and several of the large houses now in existence date back to the revival of that art in the early XIXth Century when Poland began to recover from the wars that had ravaged her. Typography in Poland is considered no mean art, and some of her greatest artists have devoted a large part of their time and genius to it, to wit, Jan Bukoneski, Stanislaw Wyspianski, Nehoffer, and Debicki. Modern Polish typography has a deep root in the ancient gems of that art still preserved at the Jagolinur and Czartoyski Libraries, two of the oldest in Europe. The childlike naturalness, primitive force and simplicity of feeling, and exquisite and daring taste of the Polish temperament, as well as excellence of execution, produce books of a delightful freshness and beauty and elegance. Crushed as production has been since the war, this exhibit shows how fast the loose threads are being gathered together, and industry organized.

Altho good paper and charming binding papers are available, paper is dear in Poland, and similarly altho labor conditions are settled and excellent craftmanship is to be had the price is high, so that books are comparatively expensive. The present Polish publishers' society is an old, musty, and unprogressive affair, but Mme. Bzozowska feels strongly that this wave of activity will stimulate the founding of some more articulate organization.

Vividly Colored Spanish Formats

The simple, vividly colored formats of the Spanish room made a most original and attractive display. Practically all the books were printed on what is called Alpha paper, a very white sheet of such high bulk that an ordinary sized novel printed on it weighs only about eight or nine ounces.

The Camera del Libro of Spain which has been in existence only four years, unites not only publishers and booksellers, but all the people who work in any branch of the book or periodical industry. It is supported by the state, who turns over to it that part of the national revenue derived from the tax on the sale of paper. (The fact that this tax is administered by weight leads one to wonder whether the universal use of Alpha paper is not in some way connected with it.) A committee of the Camera del Libro is at present sitting in conference with representatives of the Postal Department to devise a means of lowering postage rates on books. All the books published in Spain must come up to the standard of typography and quality of materials and workmanship set up by the Camera, and the contents of the books are also censored by it. Spanish books are exported to Africa, Asia, the Philippines, Cuba, Patagonia, and particularly to South America, and it is to the expansion of these markets rather than to the psychological effects of the war on the Spanish people that M. Beckari attributes the recent great enlargement of the book business.

With characteristic thoroness and efficacy the German publishers have set off their wares in such a way that the onlookers cannot help but realize the courage and persistence of people who can continue such work under such conditions. Production has, of course, been frightfully cut down during the war and the new books were well supplemented by pre-war formats in the exhibits. The main handicap that the German publisher has to face is that prices must daily go up as the value of money comes down so that the price he must ask for a book to cover the cost of its manufacture two or three months before is practically prohibitive. And export trade is most difficult just now.

There are several publishing trade organizations in Germany. The Börsenverein des Buchhandelslung, which goes so far as to publish a daily newspaper, deals more with the problems of the bookstore, whereas the Verlegerverein is purely a publishers' organization which publishes the monthly Deutsche Verlegerzeitung, a paper that generally advocates the exact opposite of the policies of the Börsenblatt. Die Deutsche Gesellschaft für Auslandsbuchhandel has recently been instituted with a view to reopening foreign markets for German books. It, too, publishes a monthly paper which contains articles describing the various types of books being published in Germany, and which always includes a very helpful classified list of publications for each month. This is circulated as much as possible in foreign countries. It is this Deutsche Gesellschaft für Auslandsbuchhandel that prepared the German exhibit for the International Book Fair.

Art Books Popular in Germany

The most distinct general tendency in Germany, according to Herr Voss, is the great popularity of "Art" books, books with a small amount of text about various artists, and a large number of careful reproductions of their work. The excellence of the reproductions of some of the books displayed, most notably perhaps some of the productions of the Kurt Wolff Verlag, was truly marvellous. An interest in what Herr Voss calls philosophical novels i. e. novels written more for character study and deliberation than mere mechanical plot seems to be the popular taste. Technical books, too, of every description, as in all other countries, are being avidly read, and de luxe editions are being bought in unprecedented quantities. Herr Voss explains the latter on two grounds. First that the Schiebers (the German name for war profiteers) in their eagerness to acquire a highbrow polish immediately purchase de luxe editions of all the proper books, and in the second place, such books are under present conditions a very good investment, for while the value of money goes down, the value of books goes up, so that people put their money into books instead of into banks.

It is interesting to note that in spite of the fact that people are so eager to read and that books are so expensive, paper bound books will not sell in Germany as they do in France, and thoroly good binding is the best publishing policy.

Italy and Spain Sell Emotional Books

Italian publishers have for a long time been trying to achieve some sort of unity, but are up against a number of snags because of old inter-province jealousies and inter-province taxes. The largest organization in existence is the A. L. I., Anonima Libraria Italiana, which comprises seven of the most important publishers: Treves, D'Annunzio's publishers, L'Institute Italiano Arti Graphice, Zanialli, G. B. Paravia, Danichelli, the great school book publishers, and some others. Il Journal de la Libraire of Milan is the official organ of this group. The house of Bemporad and several smaller houses closely associated with it form the second publishers' organization which is called Bemporad, after the most influential factor in it. Dr. Antoni, one of the directors of the Fair who is the chairman of an as yet embryonic government committee to investigate the booktrade in all its phases, retail and wholesale, thruout Italy, has confidence in the eventual union of the two groups.

Italy is the only country, with, perhaps, the exception of Spain, in which the representative reported a large increase in the sale of books of a highly emotional character, such as the novels for instance of Guido da Varona. Dr. Antoni attributes this to the fact that altho women in general in Italy are beginning to read more, they have not yet reached the mental independence that would lead them to read more solid literature.

Italian Government Fosters Booktrade

The Italian government has always made every effort to foster the book business. Before the war it dealt in paper which it sold to Italian publishers at very low prices. This it can no longer afford to do. There is, however, a bill before the legislature now introduced by the A. L. I. to lower the postage rates on books.

And it is the government's paternally beneficient policy that is responsible for the present International Book Fair in Florence, an undertaking which one cannot but feel to have a truly great thought behind it, and which one trusts will be repeated sufficiently often and with sufficient publicity to bring about a greater degree to the international cooperation which is its aim.

AMERICAN FIRST EDITIONS

A Series of Bibliographic Check-Lists*

Edited by Merle Johnson and Frederick M. Hopkins

Number 3.

WOODROW WILSON. 1856—

28th President of the United States

Compiled by Merle Johnson

THIS "principal item" list omits all speeches and state papers except the carefully edited and indexed Columbia University lectures on Constitutional Government.

The most difficult items to obtain for a collection of Wilson's books are "The State," and the limited and signed issue of "A History Of The American People."

CONGRESSIONAL GOVERNMENT. Boston, 1885.
Second Edition so states on title.

THE STATE—ELEMENTS OF HISTORICAL AND PRACTICAL POLITICS. Boston, 1889.

DIVISION AND REUNION, 1829-1889. New York, 1893.

AN OLD MASTER AND OTHER POLITICAL ESSAYS. New York, 1893.

MERE LITERATURE AND OTHER ESSAYS. Boston, 1896.

GEORGE WASHINGTON. New York, 1897.

A HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE. New York, 1902. 5 vols.
Issued in various forms; an alumni edition of 350 copies, signed: a subscription library edition; and a regular trade edition.

ON BEING HUMAN. New York, 1916.
C. Q. at foot of copyright page.

Wilson speeches and state papers run into the hundreds. THE FREE LIFE [1908], THE MINISTER AND THE COMMUNITY 1912, WHY WE ARE AT WAR [1917], IN OUR FIRST YEAR OF WAR, GUARANTEES OF PEACE [1919], INTERNATIONAL IDEALS [1919], THE HOPE OF THE WORLD [1920], WAR ADDRESSES [1918], PRESIDENT WILSON STATE PAPERS AND ADDRESSES [1917], are some that have cloth or board-bound presentation. Books about Wilson are legion and cannot be even touched upon here, as what would be adduced at this time as the finest biography might by the time of printing this list be completely superseded. The Library of Princeton University has printed two pamphlets, "Bibliography of Woodrow Wilson, 1875-1910," by Harry Clemons, and "Bibilography of Woodrow Wilson, 1910-1917," by George Dobbin Brown; with the intention of ultimately completing the series.

The Geography of Genius

IN a very valuable handbook entitled "Contemporary American Literature," written by John Matthews Manly and Edith Rickert for Harcourt, Brace & Co., there is a supplement that suggests a very interesting examination into the birthplaces of our present American writers. In this volume 216 writers who have been considered important enough to be covered in a biographical note and a complete bibliographical list of books, have been classified by state, showing that in origin they come from 31 of our 48 states, from the District of Columbia and a group of 23 from other countries. Of those from other lands, 5 each are from Canada and Russia, 3 each from England and from Ireland, and 1 each from Sweden, Germany, Spain and Holland.

As would be expected, New York State leads the states with 32 names; Massachusetts and Illinois are tied for second with 20, followed by Pennsylvania with 17; Ohio with 10; Missouri and Indiana with 9 each; Kentucky, 8; California, 7; New Jersey, 7; Michigan and Virginia, 6; to name the largest totals.

One pauses to wonder whether in the list there have been omissions or whether it is true that there has been no writer of importance born in Rhode Island, or Delaware or Vermont or Alabama, or whether it can be that Massachusetts has supplied twice the number of authors that the rest of New England has.

When a state has supplied just one lone writer to the list, it seems to have specialized in poetry, and Idaho has added Ezra Pond; Arkansas, John G. Fletcher; Georgia, Conrad Aiken; Mississippi, Maxwell Bodenheim; Nebraska, Edwin Ford Piper; Oregon, Edwin Markham; Washington, Mary Carolyn Davies, while Maine comes thru with a brace of eminent poets, Edwin Arlington Robinson and Edna St. Vincent Millay.

Sometimes the place of birth comes somewhat as a surprise, as the author's work has later become connected with quite other territory. One would expect Willa Sibert Cather to be claimed as a Nebraskan, but she was born in Virginia; Robert Frost, New England's great poet, was born in California; Samuel McChord Crothers, most Holmesian of essayists, comes from Illinois; Zane Grey, from Ohio; Upton Sinclair, from Maryland, and Gelett Burgess from Massachusetts.

Such a list shows such broad scattering of genius that there need be no state nor town that cannot be expected to add its name to the chronicles of the next decades, and while change of residence may concentrate these writers in the great cities, undoubtedly the flavor of the early home rests upon their writings, and it is that original tang which makes the whole body of our literature a thing of value and growth.

Better Homes in America

Country Wide Demonstration Week, October 9—14.

UNDER the initiative of the Delineator, a country wide campaign in the form of Better Homes Exhibits has been developed and developed so rapidly that the sponsors for the enterprise have been almost overpowered by the number of opportunities to put this plan to good use in communities of various sizes and in various states. Over five hundred cities and towns have signified their interest and willingness in having Better Homes Exhibits during the week of October 9th—14th. The President has written his recognition and approval of the idea, and the Advisory Council includes Vice President Coolidge, Herbert Hoover, Secretary Wallace, Secretary Davis, U. S. Commissioner of Education J. J. Tigert, the President of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, Julius H. Barnes, President of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, and many other interests, with Mrs. William Brown Meloney, Editor of the Delineator, as Secretary and organizer of information.

In such an exhibit it would seem as tho books would take their place, and booksellers and librarians and other lovers of books can take the initiative in the various cities where the exhibits are under way to arrange for books getting their proper attention. These exhibits to as large extent as possible will be held in houses that are borrowed for the purpose, or such an opportunity could be made available by builders or developers of real estate. The furnishings could be put in by the organized efforts of various dealers interested in such things, no dealer being allowed to carry his name on the material shown, but all getting the benefit of such display by the subsequent influence on the sales of their own stores thru their own advertising which can connect the exhibit with their stores.

Some years ago when such a model house exhibit was arranged by a group of women in Indianapolis, the bookseller was asked to put in a model library for a home, and in the room which had been designed for the children another bookshelf similar to what had been later developed into the Thomas Bailey Aldrich bookshelf was equipped with a collection of books suitable to the children of the house. Lists were available to give out and proved at that time one of the most interesting features from the point of view of those who attended the exhibit. Some of those in charge said that the electrical equipment of the kitchen and the book exhibit were more commented upon than any other features of the house.

If the bookseller of the city or the library can obtain permission to put in such libraries, the opportunity for selection and planning would make a very interesting problem for a bookseller or librarian.

Just what a model home library consists of would not be answered in the same way by any two groups. But making out a model reading list is quite a different problem from making a list of the world's best books. It may very well start with the basic reference books, the dictionary, atlas, book of etiquette, cook book, book of games, etc., and include books on the care of small gardens, of the automobile, etc. for the man of the house, and on home furnishings, cooking, entertaining for the family. It will not, probably, if it is a two section typical bookcase, include long sets of any one author, but selected books of many authors, and include some standard poets and some current poets, a representation of history, of biography, travel and classics in various fields. If it should be a bookcase of about eight shelves with two hundred books, a collection of really great interest could be arranged, and the list might be printed to pass to all who attended the house, paid for cooperatively by the different people interested, and the effect of such a list would be very great on the development of home libraries and the general reading interest. If such an exhibit should be arranged without books, it would stand as a criticism of the community's attitude toward the place of the library in the home, and no book loving community would wish this.

The announcements in the five hundred cooperating cities have already been made locally, and addresses of local chairmen can be obtained from the Better Homes Bureau of Information at 223 Spring Street, New York City. In a preliminary list of names which the Bureau has published, there were included such cities as Portland, Me.; Raleigh, N. C.; Toledo, O.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Sioux Falls, S. D.; Lexington, Ky.; Little Rock, Ark.; Charlotte, N. C.; Albany, N. Y.; Waterbury, Conn.; Washington, D. C.; Evansville, Ind.; Memphis, Tenn.; Norfolk, Va.; Seattle, Wash.; San Francisco, Calif.; Brooklyn, N. Y.; Council Bluff, Ia.; Muncie, Ind.; Wichita, Kans., etc.

The initiative in connecting books with these exhibits and hundreds of others will remain with the local bookseller or librarian. Books in such exhibits could be not only in the bookcase but on the kitchen shelf or on hall or guest room table. Lecturers on books and their place in the home could be arranged with other lectures that will fill the week, and the American Library Association list on books could be used for developing local material for distribution.

Help for the Add Maker

As an aid to the preparation of advertising copy for the best typographical appearance, The New York Times has just issued a book showing the various kinds of type available for use in its advertising pages.

The book is not only a work of art in itself, but it shows so clearly how the different faces can be used most effectively for display presentation that an advertiser can build up from it just the kind of advertisement that appeals to him for force united to artistry, and visualize in his copy exactly its typographical appearance.

The specimens of body type are displayed in blocks one inch deep, one column width for the smaller sizes and two columns width for the larger faces, thus affording an opportunity to see how they will appear in mass. Head and caption type is in single column measure and the excellent variety of borders is shown in both measures.

Definite specifications of page, column and multi-column type sizes of the various publications of The Times are given at the front of the book; also other valuable working information, simply expressed, about cuts, abbreviations and other technical details.

THERE ARE MORE BOOKSTORES THAN ART STORES AND FEWER BOOKSTORES THAN GROCERY STORES AS THIS COMPARATIVE TABLE SHOWS, IN OTHER WORDS ANY BOOKSTORE HAS MORE POTENTIAL CUSTOMERS THAN A GROCERY STORE

Every Bookseller Has 35,000 Possible Customers

MANY things have inspired the government departments to make more critical examination of statistics and methods of retail distribution, and from the facts brought forth much light has been thrown on general retail conditions. An investigation into the number of retail dealers in the country comes from an analysis of the Census Bureau returns, and under the term "retail dealer" the government includes proprietors of stores and managers and superintendents of retail stores to the total number of 1,328,275. Of these, about 6 per cent are women. Other census figures have shown that women in many fields have ousted men and taken first rank in numerous occupations, but in the ownership and management of retail businesses the percentage is low. However, there are about 12,000 more women merchants in the country today than there were ten years ago and the total number of retail merchants has increased by about 10 per cent in the ten years.

By these figures it would seem as tho there were about 13,000 population to every retail store, but these figures are somewhat deceptive as the government has made no allowance for those who drop out of retail business ownership thru death or thru the closing out of business.

The total census figures indicate that under the heading of "Trade" the government occupational statistics place 10.2 per cent of the country's population, 30.8 per cent are in manufacturing, 26.3 in agriculture, while clerks in stores figure only 7.5 per cent. These latter figures seem somehow to need further interpretation, as these would seem to indicate that there were far more proprietors than clerks. Even after allowing for the large number of one-man stores, these figures seem disproportionate.

In the total number of stores the number of groceries far over-top any other classification, and if we estimate that there are 5 persons in the average family, the retail grocer would be serving about 90 families. The butchers come next with 122,000 stores, with a chance of serving about twice as many families. Next come drug stores, general stores, dry goods, automobiles and accessories, furniture, coal and wood, etc. The total number of bookstores is given as 3,035; of stationery stores, 5,951; newsdealers, 8,484; department stores, 11,752.

If a dealer is classified under books, because he makes his principal emphasis on books, the total is probably generous of what is generally considered a good mailing list in the trade. This would mean that each bookseller has 35,420 possible customers, or 7,000 families, and on those figures there is an opportunity for expansion and specialized work that would be the envy of many other groups. It would seem as tho this total of bookstores might be ready to increase by the next census and probably nothing could be more encouraging to those who write, publish or use books than to see this figure doubled in a decade. Certainly it does not seem out of the way that there should be as many bookstores as shops for curios and antiques, as florists or fur stores, or stores for music and musical instruments.

Hotel McAlpin Adds a Business Library

The Practical Opinions of Business Men About the Best Books In Their Industries

THAT a practical business man and his promotion expert should see in books a vehicle for a new form of hotel promotion is an indication of the increased appreciation of the prestige that can be gained and the interest aroused by putting books to practical use in a new way. There have been hotel libraries many times before, but perhaps the business library, shortly to be installed in the McAlpin, is the first one of its kind in the country. Other hotel libraries, notably the beautiful collection of the Hotel Touraine, Boston, and general libraries such as that of the Hotel Statler in Cleveland, have already proved successful.

The method by which the books for the Hotel McAlpin library are to be selected gives additional interest to this collection. L. M. Boomer, managing director of the hotel, decided to base his collection on the practical opinions of business men, and he sent a questionnaire to about 2000 leaders of industries thruout the country in 20 leading industries. Each one was asked to mention the 10 books that were of first importance in his particular field. These names have been obtained from the editors of the trade papers in these lines of business and industry, and the editors of the trade papers were asked to contribute their suggestions as to the ten books.

The answers have come piling in, and they constitute an interesting collection of the opinions of representative business men and are a very vivid testimony to the fact that business men are today very conscious of the importance of business literature. Not only were the lists valuable and suggestive, but the comments were equally so. When these lists have been collated and analyzed, there will be purchased for the library at least ten books in each field which are of the most fundamental importance. The fields covered are

Insurance	Department Stores
Banking	Clothing
Textiles	Advertising
Groceries	Printing
Railroads	Paper
Shipping	Accountancy
Automobiles	Credit
Iron and Steel	Sales Management
Coal	Publishing
Lumber	Foreign Trade
Grain	Building
Rubber	Heating and Ventilating
Shoe and Leather	Furniture

The unique value of the library comes from the fact that it does not give the opinion of a single expert but a general view of the opinions of leaders in the fields covered. The library will be installed on the mezzanine floor of the Hotel in the course of a few months and will be of general service and convenience for the guests of the McAlpin, and for visitors to the Hotel. Mr. Boomer's idea is that business visitors from out of town will often wish to refresh their memories on facts and figures of their lines and to gather together information to support business activities while in the city.

The formation of this library ought to have a wide effect far beyond its immediate use, as these booklists will be sent out to trade papers in the various fields, numbering several hundred, and are bound to bring up a general discussion of business literature. The fact that this effort has been made and the lists made available will undoubtedly lead other business organizations and Chambers of Commerce to consider emulating this idea.

As an indication of the character of the lists being received the following suggestions for books on Journalism were submitted by J. L. Heaton of the New York World:

History of Journalism. Frederic Hudson. Old but full of good material.

History of Journalism in the U. S. Payne. Briefer but up-to-date.

History of English Journalism. J. B. Williams.

Next would come memoirs, etc., of a more personal or local nature, such as:

Recollections of a Busy Life. Greeley.

Barton's Life of Greeley. Both these old and may be hard to find.

Maverick's Raymond and N. Y. Times or better, perhaps, Elmer Davis's recently issued history of the Times.

In this secondary list would fall a number of excellent works:

The recollections, by whatever name, of Carl Schurz, John Bigelow, John W. Ferney, Alexander K. McClure, Beman Brockway (Whose "Fifty Years in Journalism" is especially good for New York readers) and of course, Benjamin Franklin's "Autobiography."

As a much discussed book in recent weeks, I should be inclined to include tho it is a little bit out of line "Public Opinion" by Walter Lippman.

The short life of John Delane by the late Sir Frederick Cook would complete a fairish list. Not the much larger but silly and snobbish life of Delane by Dasent.

Failing these or any of them:

"The Autobiography of a Journalist," by William J. Stillman, is of great interest tho not all concerned with newspaper work.

Isaiah Thomas, the Printer of the Revolution, left a very interesting book, probably hard to get; his "Memoirs" could be obtained, however.

Baron Brenlew's book "The Lives of George D. Prentice and Others" should be considered. Henry Watterson's recent recollections as well as those of Melville Stone I should have put higher on my list.

If Mr. Boomer has room for an eleventh book, I have no doubt Don C. Seitz, business manager, the New York World, would gladly send him without charge my own book "The Story of a Page." Not because of the author but the subject, which is the editorial policy of the World under Joseph Pulitzer, of whom no memoir yet exists. I have not included any of the useful books which give points on making newspapers, technically. A newspaper man in a hotel doesn't want to study punctuation.

The following suggestions for a list on banking were offered by E. V. Savage of Halsey Stuart & Company, Chicago:

Chamberlain, Lawrence. Principles of Bond Investment. Holt, 1911. (Standard. More technical than the average salesman will use.)

Sakolski, A. M. Elements of Bond Investment. Ronald, 1921. (Presents the "meat" of the subject.)

Jordan, D. F. Jordan on Investments. Prentice Hall, 1920.

Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science Bonds and the Bond Market. Mar. 1920. (An earlier publication is, "Bonds as Investment Securities," Sept., 1907.)

Mead, E. S. Corporation Finance. Appleton. 1920. (Dewing—Financial Policy of Corporations and Conyngton—Financing and Enterprise are valuable for reference.)

Meeker, J. E. Work of the Stock Exchange. Ronald, 1922.

Clay, Henry. Economics for the General Reader. Edition edited by Eugene Agger. Macmillan 1918. (Highly recommended.)

Pierce, F. Human Side of Business. Winston, 1917. (Readable discussion of the bond sales question.)

Rollins, Montgomery. Money and Investments, A Reference Book. Financial Publishing Co., 1917. (In dictionary form defining concisely the terms in use.)

Holdsworth, J. T. Money and Banking. Appleton, 1917. (A text having considerable popularity.)

The Use of Psychological Tests

By W. V. Bingham

PSYCHOLOGICAL methods of selecting employees have now been shown to be valuable additions to the usual procedures, according to W. V. Bingham, Director of Research at Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, in an address before the Babson Industrial Conference at Wellesley Hills. But the practical value of tests and other psychological aids to the manager varies greatly with the type of work and the general conditions of employment. In selecting clerical workers and people to be trained for clerical jobs, intelligence tests are most useful. But in picking successful salesmen, measures of the applicant's interests and tastes, his likes and dislikes, have been found to be more significant than measures of his intelligence. This does not mean that a salesman needs no intelligence. He needs a fair degree of mental alertness. But he needs also, imperatively, many qualities of personality and character that are of relatively minor importance in the less social occupations.

Just as the marvelous advance in industry during the past half-century has been due chiefly to the application of the physical and chemical sciences to the problems of manufacture, so the greatest progress during the next fifty years will be due to the application of scientific method to the human problems of production and marketing. This throws a heavy responsibility on the psychologist; for psychology is the science of human nature. It seeks to discover the laws of action and reaction between people. It formulates the laws of response of an individual to his environment. Applied psychology is human engineering. It is scientific method used to predict and control human behavior.

In a popular sense, every business man is a psychologist whenever he sizes up a customer, plans a sales campaign, forecasts the duration of a panic, or faces any other problem in the prediction and control of human behavior. In a stricter sense he is not a psychologist unless he uses scientific methods of measurement to supplement his own experience and common sense in dealing with the psychological aspects of his problems. It is these measurement methods, and particularly the psychological methods of measuring intelligence, whose value to the business man is now being investigated from every angle.

In some positions, surprising as it may seem, too much intelligence is a handicap. Where the work is largely routine and the opportunities for rapid advancement are few, the brighter employees are the first to leave. They change to other employment before they have learned enough about their job to be earning their salary. It is unnecessary expense to the employer and an unkindness to a bright, able applicant to give him a job in which he is sure soon to be discontented.

One way to predict what a man can do is to find out what he has done. Evaluation of the information on the application blank, such as age, education and kind of previous experience, has enabled one firm to cut down by more than one-half the proportion of unsuccessful salesmen hired.

Still another useful way is the analysis of interests. An interest analysis blank, with a carefully computed table of preferences, eliminated from another group of new salesmen sixty per cent of the failures without eliminating a single successful one. In selecting salesmen, intelligent tests are on the whole not as useful as interest analyses and experience analyses, but they give valuable supplementary information, particularly regarding the very brightest and the slowest or stupidest applicants.

Intelligence tests have been repeatedly found useful as a means of setting a minimum standard, or a lower critical score, below which it is a waste of time for a boy or girl to try to become, for instance, a good stenographer or secretary.

It is almost impossible to tell in advance of trial whether intelligence tests, interest analyses, rating scales or any other kinds of psychological methods are going to give information of much or little value, in predicting probable success in any particular sort of occupation. Enough is known to warrant the assertion that psychological methods have come to stay. One caution, however, must be emphasized. Psychological methods ought not to be introduced into any business by a psychologist who has not first made himself familiar with the nature and peculiar problems of that business, nor on the other hand, by a business man who is not himself trained in the experimental and statistical methods of psychology. Only disappointment can result from hasty or unprofessional resort to psychological technique.

Obituary

T. D. COBDEN-SANDERSON

THOMAS DOVES COBDEN-SANDERSON, the founder of the famous Doves Press, died at Hammersmith, England, on September 7th. As a craftsman in printing and binding his reputation was international. Born in Ainwick in 1840, he studied for the bar and devoted some years to legal work. In 1900, after an apprenticeship, he turned his attention to the printing of books, and each year since he produced on an average of six examples of book-making that stamped him as a great artist, and are now treasured by collectors everywhere. He was the author of "The Ideal Book" (1900), "Ecce Mundus" (1902), and "The Arts and Crafts Movement" (1905). He also issued a "Catalog Résume of Books Printed at the Doves Press, 1900-1916."

NOTICE

Extra copies of this number of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY will be supplied to subscribers at the nominal cost of 15 cents each. Its index to new books, ready or forthcoming, arranged in one continuous alphabet, under both title and author, is just what will be needed by every sales person for the rest of the year.

THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

"Out-of-Print"

"TO the real booklover no notation is so irritating as the too familiar 'o. p.,'" says the New York Evening Post. "Suppose that your perusal of Van Buren's Autobiography leads you to desire a reading of the Autobiography of Thurlow Weed; that you have been inspired by 'The Education of Henry Adams' to look into 'Chapters of Erie,' or that you decide that your interest in American fiction demands acquaintance with Theodore Winthrop's 'Cecil Dreeme.' Your bookseller goes to his catalogs and tells you that they are out of print. There is growing evidence of a revival of interest in Trollope, and many persons would like to read other volumes than the familiar Barchester Series, but most of the sixty or seventy titles are o. p.'

"One merit of standard collections like the Everyman Series and the World's Classics is that they bring into print a great treasure house of books that have long been unobtainable. In certain sections of the Everyman Library, as the travel section, the percentage of volumes previously out of print is very high. Of course, many out-of-print books are a glut on the second-hand market, and the dealers who make it their business to hunt for titles can find them immediately. But the list of 'Books Wanted,' ten or a dozen pages in fine type in every issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, is evidence of the difficulty of obtaining many others.

"Clearly, there may at one time be a thousand libraries and individuals who would purchase an out-of-print book, while the publisher, his plates ready at hand, would find a reissue profitable. How can the agencies of demand and supply be brought together? Sometimes a literary critic will voice a demand for an out-of-print book that will galvanize a publisher. H. M. Tomlinson has done it in the London Nation. But the sensible plan is that broached by a New York dealer at the last Booksellers' Convention, who suggested that booksellers with good outlets should coöperate in underwriting reissues, and named several titles, including Lafcadio Hearn's 'Japan' and Mahaffy's 'Survey of Greek Civilization,' for which he had already obtained support. Public libraries might join with the bookstores, and the public should be asked to assist in suggesting titles and afterwards voting on them."

The Weekly Record of New Publications

THIS list aims to be a complete and accurate record of American book publications. Pamphlets will be included only if of special value. Publishers should send copies of all books promptly for annotation and entry, and the receipt of advance copies insures record simultaneous with publication. The annotations are descriptive, not critical; intended to place not to judge the books. Pamphlet material and books of lesser trade interest are listed in smaller type.

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent for record. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. When not specified the binding is cloth.

Imprint date is stated [or best available date, preferably copyright date, in bracket] only when it differs from year of entry. Copyright date is stated only when it differs from imprint date: otherwise simply "c." No ascertainable date is designated thus: [n. d.]

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q (4to: under 30 cm.); O (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tf. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ff. (48mo: 10cm.); sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow.

Titles beginning with an unimportant word are inverted to be listed under their subject when possible.

Rare Books, Autographs and Prints

THE Lewissohn collections of Washingtoniana, comprising some 12,000 items and regarded as the most extensive that as ever been brought together, has been purchased by Henry E. Huntington of California.

A valuable collection of first editions of harles Dickens owned by the late Elizabeth ampbell Skelton of Portsea, was bequeathed the Portsmouth Corporation to be placed the Dickens Museum.

The last two or three months has been very quiet period among the print dealers t there are now many indications of activi, and exhibitions will start in earnest next onth.

The Brick Row Book Shop has a catalog Shelley first and other rare editions in ss. Its frontispiece will be a portrait of poet reproduced here for the first time.

The first edition of Willa Cather's new vel, "One of Ours," will consist of 35 ies printed on Japanese vellum and 295 ies on Perugia handmade Italian paper, ographed by the author.

The official gift of the French Republic to the Children's Library in the Dickens' House at 13 Johnson Street, Somers Town, formally presented by the French Ambassador, comprised 2,000 francs worth of books.

"A World Worth While." By W. A. Rogers, the cartoonist and successor of Thomas Nast on Harper's Weekly, is rich in anecdotes of Mark Twain, Edwin A. Abbey, Alexander Graham Bell, McKinley, Roosevelt and a score or more of other famous men of the period.

Houghton Mifflin announce "A Concise Bibliography of Walt Whitman" with a supplement of fifty books about Whitman of interest to collectors, students, and librarians, by Carolyn Wells and Alfred S. Goldsmith, to be published in a limited edition of 550 copies about November 1.

Belle da Costa Greene, librarian of the J. Pierpont Morgan library, is inclined to the opinion that the collection of first and early editions of Shakespeare owned by Henry C. Folger is the greatest in this country but declares that in the "wider field of English literature Mr. Huntington is undoubtedly the greatest collector the world has ever known."

Constable and Company, Ltd., of London will publish a complete edition of the prose works of Henry Melville in twelve volumes limited to 750 sets. The edition will be divided evenly between England and America, Gabriel Wells of this city controlling the sale in this country. The edition in all its details will appeal to discriminating booklovers. Two dealers alone have purchased 100 sets and the edition is likely to be disposed of in record time.

At the recent Exposition of the Graphic Arts in Boston, visitors were presented with a neat folder giving "An Historical Sketch of the Stephen Daye Press, the First Printing Press in what was formerly British North America," with a list of titles of works printed on this famous press from 1638 to 1658. The folder was the work of the successor of the Daye Press, the University Press of Cambridge, and contained the Daye bookplate of 1742 supposed to be the earliest American bookplate.

An anonymous donor has presented the British Museum with an additional copy of Shakespeare's First Folio of 1623. The copy is extremely rare in that it has the famous Droeshout portrait on the title page in its original state. In this state there is no shading on the left side of the white collar, the mustache is unfinished and there are a number of fine lines on the forehead. The only other copy hitherto recorded, in which a portrait in this early state remains in place is that in the Bodleian Library. There is a copy in this city of the portrait in this state separated from the rest of the book. It is understood that Quaritch, from whom the donor acquired the book, has offered it to several collectors in the country for upwards of £10,000.

After nearly a hundred years the little known Blake illustrations made for Gray's poems have been reproduced by the Oxford University Press. The original volume of designs was first owned by John Flaxman and passed after his death to John Clarke the bookseller. It was purchased from him by William Beckford whose library was later removed to Hamilton Palace on or before the marriage of Beckford's daughter to the tenth Duke of Hamilton. It has remained in Hamilton Palace until recently, when, thru the kindly offices of H. J. C. Grierson, the present Duke and Duchess of Hamilton consented to the publication of the designs. These designs to the number of 11 have been reproduced in full size, six of them in color, and in a very satisfactory manner Collectors of Blake and Gray will both b interested in the volume.

The Art Center has many plans for th coming season. In October all seven societie who own it, the American Institute of Graphi Arts, the Art Alliance of America, the Ne York Society of Craftsmen, the Society o Illustrators, the Art Directory Club and Th Stoways, will hold a grand union exhibi which is to fill the entire building, except th rooms occupied by tenants. The Art Al liance is already in its new gallery which take up half of the third floor in the building an is occupied just now with an exhibition o work by members. This change was mad necessary by the growth of the society an its work. The board of directors of th Center announces that a gallery on the mai floor has been opened to artists, outsiders, o members of the Center, who wish limite space to display their work. This will affor an opportunity to artists to exhibit, at a nominal sum, paintings, sculpture, etchings, photography, furniture and decorative and craf work of every kind.

Index to Fall Announcements

In this list publishers' announcements are indexed by author, title and series. Titles recorded in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY before July first have been generally excluded. Titles beginning with an unimportant word are usually inverted, so that a book on a given subject will be listed under its subject if possible. Fuller information of the books announced will be found in the publishers' advertising pages, index to which is given on page 847.

What Sells Books

Better service for your customers means larger sales for your shop. This is a truism, but it is also a business ideal. There is perhaps no better way to realize the ideal than to become familiar with the important mediums that influence the purchase of books at retail.

A wide awake bookseller will follow the reviews and comments on new books in these periodicals. As it is not possible for anyone to read all the books that are being published the papers featuring book information are the best means to gain a talking knowledge of the new publications.

It would also be helpful for the dealer to keep a file of recent issues of the more important book-reviewing publications and have them for the convenience of customers who may want to find books which some particular review has brought to their attention.

In the following pages are presented book review mediums which have a nationwide influence on booksales —and bookselling. Successful booksellers and their assistants follow these reviews and comments on the new books, and are prepared for the demand of every new "best seller" which they help to create.

The Publishers Weekly

IMPARTIAL SURVEY OF WORLD LITERATURE

The New York Times Book Review and Magazine places before its readers impartial descriptions of new novels, biographies, works on science, art, philosophy, religion.

Long established as the leading publication devoted to books, The Times Book Review and Magazine is recognized as an authority on contemporary literature. All branches of literature are treated by authors of prominence from a news as well as a critical standpoint.

Informative and inspiring articles of immediate public interest appear in each issue. Vital current topics are discussed from a broad viewpoint by well-known men and women contributors.

Printed by the rotogravure method—the process de luxe of the printer's art, details and shadings of portraits, etchings and other illustrations are beautifully reproduced.

How to Buy or Sell Rare Books

The Book Exchange of The New York Times Book Review and Magazine receives the attention of thousands of buyers of rare editions, de luxe issues and publications of unusual interest.

For advertisements offering for sale or exchange any book—old, new, curious, popular or used, the Book Exchange is unsurpassed by any other publication in the world.

The net paid circulation of over 500,000 copies, embracing the great metropolitan area of New York and 8,000 cities, towns and villages throughout the country, gives it a national scope of great influence.

Rate for single insertions, 12 cents a word; for consecutive advertising for a year (52 issues) 10 cents a word; minimum space 12 words.

Issued weekly—$1.00 a year by mail

Heywood Brown of The World

An Impression by Herb Roth of The World

WHEN Heywood Broun talks about books, the book-lovers of the country stop to listen. In eight months, he has attracted to THE WORLD one of the most eager, loyal and enthusiastic coteries of newspaper readers in America.

During this period, the Publishers' advertising in THE WORLD has increased more than 50% in volume.

The leading book publishers of the country are reaching the booklovers of New York through

Where Most Books Are Sold

is a good place to sell more books

In the Chicago market, for example, publishers have learned that the most popular and effective avenue of distribution is through The Wednesday Book-Page of The Chicago Daily News.

With its yearly daily-average circulation of 401,698—1,200,000 readers daily—The Daily News "saturates" Chicago and its suburbs, journalistically, as does no other medium. And The Wednesday Book-Page of The Daily News is a Chicago institution. Wednesday in Chicago is "Book-Page Day."

The Daily News Book-Page commands that lively reader-interest, reader-confidence that impels buying decisions. The logic of this has been successfully demonstrated in practice. In the amount of book advertising carried by Chicago newspapers The Daily News leads the field continuously.

Here are the figures on book lineage for the first eight months of the year 1922:

		Comparison
The Chicago Daily News	90,416 lines	90,416 lines
The Post	52,057 lines	52,057 lines
The Daily Tribune	15,363 lines
The Daily Herald-Examiner	1,087 lines
The Journal	641 lines
The American	57 lines

SUNDAY NEWSPAPERS

The Sunday Tribune	32,065 lines
The Sunday Herald-Examiner	13,013 lines

The Daily News' excess over the next highest score, that of The Post ..... 38,359 lines

Further emphasizing the established and increasing leadership of The Chicago Daily News in this field is the fact that for the months of May, June, July and August, 1922, The Daily News printed 6,359 more lines of book advertising than ALL other Chicago newspapers, daily and Sunday combined.

Book Browsing

Did you ever browse? You needn't answer "I'm not a cow," because we mean browsing in a book store. Book browsing is the most fascinating of time Killers. The "pasture" is constantly changing. You come to know the old books. You rather resent their absence, as one by one they leave your ken. You had an eye on that set of Abbey's Shakespeare—were saving up for it when, bingo! it's gone!

But it's the new books that give zest to browsing. Here's Mrs. Humphrey Ward's newest story; a new "Penrod" from Booth Tarkington, or the long-promised third volume of Margot Asquith's reminiscences. Or a new volume of very verr libre. Or that clever travesty on Floyd Dell's "Moon Calf." Or a new play by "G. B." Or Jim Ford's "40 Years in the Literary Shop," "and etc.," as Ring Lardner puts it.

Between our two selves a book store really isn't a "store" at all—it's just made up to look like one. A book store is ideal browsing ground, and the browsing's fine this morning. Browse first here, among the book reviews and advertisements—

"they're all in the PLAIN DEALER"

No. 28

Plain Dealer readers are Book readers

The Plain Dealer's "Early Buying Bulletins" appear from time to time on the Saturday Book Page—the only one of its kind in Cleveland. "Buy a Book a Week" is the slogan around which these Bulletins are written. They constantly urge the reading of more and better books.

Northern Ohio is reading NOW more than ever before. That's because these people, reached by The Plain Dealer—are the ones who thirst for, and find, knowledge, relaxation and genuine pleasure in book reading.

They look to The Plain Dealer's Saturday Book Page for their book news and book reviews.

The Saturday Book Page and the "Early Buying Bulletins" work hand-in-hand, selling books to Northern Ohio readers. There's your market—sell your books to them.

What is your Philadelphia market TREE or ORCHARD?

THE PHILADELPHIA TRADING AREA—THE RICHEST TERRITORY IN THE UNITED STATES—can best be compared to a huge bountiful orchard with fruit-laden trees stretching for a hundred miles around.

The advertiser who concentrates on but one small section of this orchard and neglects the surrounding territory leaves the choicest pippins for others to pick.

To properly cultivate this territory and make it yield the greatest harvest at least cost you must use THE NORTH AMERICAN.

THE NORTH AMERICAN is 85% HOME DELIVERED, entering the prosperous homes and influencing a class of readers whose financial resources and standard of living are above the average.

Thousands of them own automobiles; tens of thousands maintain charge accounts in PHILADELPHIA stores; more than one-half own the homes in which they live.

The implicit faith these families place in their favorite newspaper accounts for the tremendous pull of its advertising columns and makes THE NORTH AMERICAN the logical medium for publishers advertising in the richest territory in the United States.

THE NORTH AMERICAN maintains book pages of unusual excellence, edited by Sidney Williams, which bring results.

The Book Pages every Saturday are followed closely not only by our large audience of readers interested in the literature of the day, but also by a majority of the Booksellers in the Philadelphia Trading Area—the richest territory in the United States.

"THE CHEAPEST AND MOST EFFECTIVE BOOK SHOP ADVERTISING"

Does Advertising Sell Books

RARELY, if ever, alone. Book advertising must be supplemented by reviews and critical appraisal of books to be effective. On the other hand, reviews and comment, rarely if ever, alone sell books. Books sell the best when well advertised in a medium devoted to the stimulation of interest in books, through reviews and critical appreciation.

THE DIAL is such a medium. Over three hundred reviews of contemporary books have appeared in THE DIAL within the past year. Among those who have contributed long reviews to THE DIAL in the past year are:

Mary Austin
Robert Bridges
Kenneth Burke
Padraic Colum
Malcolm Cowley
Thomas Jewell Craven
Babette Deutsch
John Dos Passos
Robert Herrick
Robert Morss Lovett
Marianne Moore
Raymond Mortimer
J. Middleton Murry
James Harvey Robinson
Paul Rosenfeld
G. Santayana
Edward Sapir
Gilbert Seldes
Logan Pearsall Smith
Charles K. Trueblood
H. W. Van Loon

Besides having an unusual Book Review Department THE DIAL stimulates a general interest in books and reading, through essays and critical appreciation of books and writers.

Address-Book for the Book Trade

A book that contains the addresses of all publishers in the United States, as well as in England, all booksellers in the United States, Canada and in many foreign countries, and lists of dominant newspapers and other periodicals that feature book news and reviews, is a necessity to every publisher and bookseller.

All these lists and some others are given in the AMERICAN BOOKTRADE MANUAL just issued. It is very complete and up-to-date.

OXFORD BOOKS

OXFORD STANDARD EDITIONS of POETRY AND PROSE

"This series has not been created by the simple expedient of taking an existing edition and sending it to the printer—a plan too commonly followed, as is well known to every one who has ever investigated the text of a well-known author, and has found that each edition contains almost all the errors of its predecessors and adds fresh errors of its own. The Oxford texts are the result of the laborious cooperation of editor, publisher, and printer, involving the choice of the most authoritative original—very often the collation of a number of printed originals and sometimes of manuscripts as well—expert attention to the problems both editorial and typographical of which the successful solution produces a well-designed book, and finally scrupulous diligence in the elimination of error. The substantial accuracy of Oxford texts is widely recognized, and is known to be due to the united vigilance of the editors, the publishers (themselves scholars and sometimes editors) and the printers."—The Oxford University Press 1468-1921.

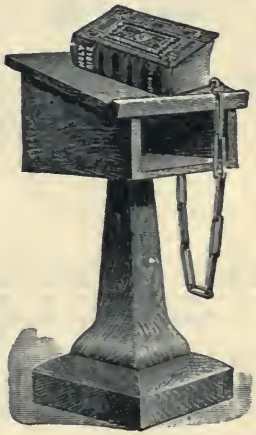
OXFORD BIBLES

Miniature Chained Bible and Lectern

Bibles were so rare in the olden times it was necessary to chain them to lecterns and other places.

The chaining of single books in churches doubtless originated in the injunctions given by Edward VI. to "the Clergie and the Laietie" in 1547, and printed by Grafton, in which they are ordered "to provide within three moneths next after the visitacion one boke of the whole Bible of the largest volume in English, and within one twelve moneth after the saied visitacion, the Paraphrasis of Erasmus the same to be sette uppe in some convenient place within the churche."



This model, measuring 5½ inches in height, and a copy of the smallest Bible in the world with chain, is now carried in stock. The Bible is provided with a magnifying glass inside the back cover.

Price, complete $3.50

In Many Pulpits with Dr. C. I. Scofield

A collection of twenty-seven of the best sermons preached by Dr. C. I. Scofield during his pastorate at Dallas, Texas, East Northfield, Mass., and in his larger pulpit ministry to the English-speaking world. Scofield Bible readers will find these sermons full of Bible teaching on christian life and doctrine that supplement the notes in that edition.

Cloth, gilt top, 317 pages . . . net $2.50

Oxford Teacher's Bibles

Contain centre colum references and the Cyclopedic Concordance being the helps arranged in alphabetical order like a dictionary, also beautifully colored maps of Bible Lands. The black-faced type editions, especially those with the words of Jesus Christ in red, are particularly desirable. Printed on fine white paper and the famous Oxford India paper.

THREE WOMEN OF ANNAM

By Cl. Chivas-Baron Authorized translation from the French

Exotic romance of rare beauty, vivid impressions of the dazzling atmosphere of Annam, wisdom of the East that consoles and comforts us here below. M. Chivas-Baron, who travelled and lived in Annam for many years, has just been crowned by the French Academy for his excellent work on that strange province of Indo-China. In these three romances the author portrays three women of different stations in life, and nowhere can we find so colorful a picture of life and love as it is lived and understood in this enchanting land. Ready in November.

PAUL CÉZANNE

By Ambroise Vollard

Authorized translation by Harold L. Van Doren

With the intuition and skill of a Boswell, Ambroise Vollard has drawn the life of a great artist, dealing with his subject in a style that savors of fiction. This book is the most authoritative work on the life and art of Paul Cézanne, the greatest figure in the modern French school of painting. A number of reproductions of the artist's work are included in the volume. Ready in November.

EATING WITHOUT FEARS

By G. F. Scotson-Clark

This is not a cook book that lays down the law as to how many calories one should eat in conjunction with a certain number of proteids, but it deals with the subject of good living—eating and drinking without the terrors of indigestion, the fear of adding to one's weight, or of producing those wrinkles and rolls of fat indicative of over-indulgence. It is just as much a man's book as it is a woman's. Ready in November.

BOOKS THAT SELL

FOR THE BENEFIT OF MY CREDITORS. Hinckley G. Mitchell. With foreword by Dallas Lore Sharp. Frontis. 8vo. 336 pages $2.25 Postpaid.

The autobiography of the distinguished professor in Boston University School of Theology with all the important letters and documents in the famous "heresy" case.

The story of Professor Mitchell's life records the incidents of his early boyhood, the period spent in Wesleyan University, the years of theological study in Boston and those spent abroad in post-graduate work. That section of the book, however, that recounts the experience of storm and stress where the author was denounced as a heretic, will hold the reader in alternating moods of pity for the victim and indignation toward those who persecuted him.

THE PASSING AND THE PERMANENT IN RELIGION. Minot J. Savage. 16mo; 163 pages. $1.00 Postpaid.

The author was among the first to appreciate the religious significance of the advance of modern science, and boldly to ally religion and science in providing a satisfactory religious interpretation of life to the modern man. He speaks to the mind and heart of the great public. He brings the greatest themes within the grasp of the average man.

This title has been out of print for a number of years, but is now offered in an inexpensive edition.

A CENTURY OF UNITARIANISM IN THE NATIONAL CAPITAL. Jennie W. Scudder. $1.50. 12mo. Illus.

A brief but complete history of the Unitarian movement in Washington, D. C., with interesting side lights on the early struggle. It also reveals the sterling character and distinguished positions of the clergy and laity affiliated with this organization from the days of its foundation.

PETER AND PAUL AND THEIR FRIENDS. Helen Nicolay. 12 mo. $1.25.

An interesting study by an author of acknowledged ability, of the lines of the early Apostles, told in such an intimate manner that these New Testament characters become real people.

ERICK AND SALLY. Johanna Spyri. Translated by Helene H. Boll. Illustrated in colors; 12 mo; 173 pages; $1.75 Postpaid.

Written by the author of "Heidi" for children of ten to fourteen years, it possesses a real plot and mystery in which the little aristocrat stands the test of lonesomeness and wins friends that stand by him until his astonished grandfather takes him to his heart. Both "The Story of Rico," and "Erick and Sally" are charming and safe. They will both help in the difficult task of inculcating a right spirit in the early years of adolescence.

THE STORY OF RICO. Johanna Spyri. Translated by Helene H. Boll. Illustrated in colors; 12 mo; 163 pages; $1.75 Postpaid.

A book which is wholesome and has interest and charm. It unfolds the story of a little Italian orphan violinist who wanders from the mountain heights of Switzerland to a lovely lake in Italy, where, to his amazement, he finds that he is the legal heir to an extensive estate.

The Opera Book

By EDITH B. ORDWAY

The Opera Lovers Edition

This book contains practically all of the operas played in the four opera centers—New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston—during the past years, and some of the leading novelties and revivals. A brief, succinct, but clear account of the action of the operas scene by scene. It is a real guide to the interpretation of what actually takes place on the stage, rather than a retelling in story form of each opera plot.

MAUDE ROYDEN: CONVENTION ADDRESSES: Women at the World's Crossroads

Miss Royden is supremely interested in the opportunity for woman in the changing order in these after the war days when the old generation and the new generation are critical, one of the other. The power of her message is based on her conviction that woman, whose experience has taught her to look on the world as a home, God as Father, men as brothers, can make love triumphant in the world's affairs. Miss Royden writes as beautifully as she speaks. The fact that she is to lecture in many parts of this country next year adds interest to this book based on addresses given at the National Convention of the Young Women's Christian Association—1922. Price to be announced.

DO'S AND DON'TS FOR BUSINESS WOMEN: By Jean Rich (Helen Thompson)

Every business woman wants to know how to dress appropriately; how to get along well with her associates; how to make her services indispensable to her employer; how to progress in business. Jean Rich (Helen Thompson), in this book talks to the business girl in her own language in a series of articles which originally ran as a syndicated feature in the daily press. Price $1.00

WHOLENESS OF CHRISTIANITY, THE: By Charles W. Gilkey

The first book of this Chicago preacher has the recommendation of both Harry Emerson Fosdick and Henry Sloane Coffin. Christianity is neither all spirituality nor all practicality; it vivifies the one and transforms the other. Those who heard Dr. Gilkey at the National Convention of the Young Women's Christian Association two years ago will remember how readily he applies this "neither the one nor the other, but both," to the ideal Christian life. Price to be announced.

FUNDAMENTALS OF CHRISTIANITY: By Alexander Purdy

A new book on "Fundamentals of Christianity" written by one of the younger generation of ministers who has worked with students here and abroad, knows what the new generation is thinking and can tell youth what it wants to know about the truths of Christianity. He makes Christianity desirable and possible to anyone by taking examples of its force directly from the Bible in which he says there are descriptions and life histories of more kinds of people than there are in any other literature in the world. He does not take it for granted that all people are Christians—he proves to them why they should be Christians instead of followers of any other belief. Price to be announced.

GALAXY OF COMING EVENTS

By REV. WILLIAM FRANCIS MANLEY

Relative to the return of the LORD JESUS CHRIST, who will sit on the throne of His father David, in Jerusalem; and reign over the whole earth for one thousand years.

This book gives THE THINGS THAT MUST COME TO PASS, before His coming, and at His coming, and after His coming, according to the Scriptures. And in the order in which they will occur.

Rev. Maurice Ruben, secretary of the Hebrew-Christian Alliance of America, says: "There is not a dull page in the 263 pages of its contents. We unhesitatingly commend this work as the most helpful exposition on the Book of Revelation we know of. Be sure and secure this book." PRICE $1.50.

"Much of the text has been rewritten, important matter added, and more than 50 new illustrations, with two new maps, included. . . . An artistic and superbly illustrated book, the first attempt to describe the Yosemite National Park in full with the aid of splendid illustrations."—San Francisco Chronicle.

"Nowhere in America is the story of glacial action written more legibly into mountain scenery than in the Sierra Nevada. And no other book has described and illustrated this colossal sculpturing of the California upland so clearly and abundantly as the new and enlarged 'Yosemite and Its High Sierra.' The only volumes comparable with it are Mr. Williams' own books about the great mountains of the Northwest. . . . It should well find place in public, private and all school libraries." —Sierra Educational News.

MAESTRO BOOKS

THOU ISRAEL

By Charles Francis Stocking, E. M.

A stupendous novel of present-day conditions, having a mighty theme in an absorbing story developed in a rare Syrian, Egyptian, and New World setting. In its remarkable interpretation of life, death, mind, matter, and the future state it is a thought-compelling response to a world need.

Colored frontispiece, cloth cover, $2.50 net. Leather cover, $3.50 net. (Edition de Luxe) Leather cover, gilt edges, $4.00 net. Postage 15 cents.

CARMEN ARIZA

By Charles Francis Stocking, E. M.

The most powerful novel of religious and political intrigue ever written. Its diverse threads run from the Vatican to the trackless jungle of South America—from the Spanish Main to Washington and New York. Carmen Ariza and Thou Israel afford the final answer to the religious question and are the only novels that have handled it in a strictly scientific way and worked it out to a demonstrable solution. Colored frontispiece, cloth cover, $2.50 net. Leather cover, $3.50 net. (Edition de Luxe) Leather cover, gilt edges, $4.00 net. Postage 15 cents.

THE DIARY OF JEAN EVARTS

By Charles Francis Stocking, E. M.

In this beautifully written treatise, composed by the author in the sun-kissed hills of California, a young girl in the last stages of tuberculosis, hopeless of human aid, and denouncing God and man-made creeds, receives a new truth—and with it a new sense of life. How this was accomplished is the vital message which this book has carried around the world to thousands of helpless, discouraged sincerely sufferers becoming truly a "light shining in dark places."

Cloth, $1.75 net. Morocco, $4.00 net. Postage, 10c.

VAN NOSTRAND BOOKS

RADIO PHONE RECEIVING—A Practical Book for Everybody $1.50

Edited by Dr. Erich Hausmann in collaboration with nine specialists including M. I. Pupin and John H. Morecroft of Columbia University, A. N. Goldsmith of the Radio Corporation of America, L. A. Hazeltine of Stevens Institute, and J. V. Hogan, ex-president of the Radio Institute.

Nine of the men most connected with the tremendous development of radio have combined to give you the result of their experience in the simplest possible manner.

The book is correct in technical detail, yet extremely interesting and entertaining. Written in simple, non-technical language it tells you how to receive messages of any wave length, how to select and operate your apparatus—in fact all the details you need to know.

VISUAL ILLUSIONS and Their Applications $3.00

By M. Luckiesh

There are numberless visual illusions, all of them interesting and many that can be put to useful service in daily life. Their study is fascinating, and this book by an acknowledged authority explains them in a manner that appeals to the general reader as well as to the scientist and engineer.

WITHIN THE ATOM $2.00

By John Mills

"Within the Atom" is a wonderfully interesting and readable summary of recent advances in our knowledge of electrons, of the constitution of the atom, of the radiation of light and X-rays, and of the newly discovered quantum of energy.

The style is that of an essay, illustrated with pictures and simple graphs and entirely free from mathematics or involved discussions. Mr. Mills is one of few authors who are able to explain the mysteries of science in the every day language of fiction, and consequently his book appeals especially to the reader without a scientific education.

MOTOR VEHICLES AND THEIR ENGINES $2.00

LETTERS OF

FRANKLIN K. LANE

This revelation of the inner history of the Wilson Cabinet will set all America talking. But even more important is the revelation of one of the great letter writers of our time. There is a bigness, a tang, a gusto to the book that makes its publication an event in the world of letters no less than in the world of history.

Thrilling New Novel by author of "MR. WU"

THE GREEN GODDESS

By LOUISE JORDAN MILN

The author of "Mr. Wu" writes a thrilling novel of a Himalayan principality, based on William Archer's play of the same name, which as the most exciting melodrama staged in years, has brought George Arliss such distinguished success. Recommend it to all who like a story full of thrills and romance, against a brilliant oriental background.
With striking jacket in full color, $1.90.

TREMENDOUS ADVENTURES

By DION CLAYTON CALTHROP

Delightfully readable, full of variety and adventure, this novel develops from a beginning of old-fashioned romance into a story essentially modern in its conclusion. With picture jacket in colors, $1.90.

NORTHWEST!

By HAROLD BINDLOSS

A tale of mystery and love in the wilds of the Canadian rockies—full of stirring outdoor adventure against the background of snow-capped mountains and pine forests. A splendid companion for the week-end traveler! $1.75.

Two Novels Steadily Increasing in Popularity

JUDITH OF THE GODLESS VALLEY

By HONORÉ WILLSIE
Author of "The Enchanted Canyon," etc.

Booksellers are writing us of their belief in the Fall sales possibilities of this new Willsie romance. From Texas: "It was indeed a treat to read 'Judith.' Honoré Willsie is such a fine, clean, wholesome writer and is very much in demand among my customers." From New York: "One of the best stories of the West I have ever read. . . Bound to be one of the big sellers this fall." From Chicago: "'Judith' will surely be one of our leaders." The extensive advertising now appearing evidences our belief in 'Judith's' possibilities! $2.00

ROBIN

By FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT
Author of "The Shuttle," "The Secret Garden," etc.

A "best seller" since the day of publication, this novel, with its companion story, "The Head of the House of Coombe" is sure of a welcome by all lovers of true romance. For a gift to a week-end hostess, for birthdays—and of course for Christmas!—suggest "Robin" and "Coombe" boxed as a set, in either cloth or leather editions. Cloth, per copy $2.00; leather, per copy $2.50.

Publishers FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY New York

"As for the story, it is a glorious one."—The Atlantic Monthly. "The author has done nothing better than this since 'The House of Mirth.'"—Literary Digest.

Over 200 leading newspapers and magazines have praised it! You will find that the critics in every part of the country are vieing with each other in saying such things as the New York Times' statement that it can "think of no American novel written within the last few years and dealing with contemporary American life to compare with 'The Glimpses of the Moon.'"

Edith Wharton's

The GLIMPSES of the MOON

Every leading bookseller in America has re-ordered it from one to ten times. Five gigantic printings have not been enough to satisfy the ever-increasing demand of the great novel reading public that is buying this splendid novel, and delighting in its love story and picture of society.

Everyone who can read is intent on seeing just what is the picture of smart society which Mrs. Wharton has drawn in "The Glimpses of the Moon," and concerning which there is so much comment in the press. Is this society as amazing in its life as she shows it? Everyone is asking the question. $2.00

The Public Taste in Books

Mr. Will H. Solle, of Kroch's International Book Store, Chicago, in an interesting letter to The Daily News' book page, says to the Editor:

"I thought you might like to know how the public in general is reacting to the hectic and off-color books in fiction.

"Beginning some time last fall we noticed a tendency toward cleaner fiction. This tendency became a marked trait during the last six months. In proof of this we offer the following list of our best sellers: 'Explorers of the Dawn,' 'Memoirs of a Midget,' 'Search,' 'Growth of the Soil,' 'Maria Chapdelaine,' 'Indelible,' 'The Ninth Vibration,' 'The Turquoise Cup,' 'Journal of a Recluse,' 'If Winter Comes.'

"You will notice that each one of these books is a good book, that each one is a clean book; in all of them there is good writing, realism and humor."

"The Shorn Lamb" Wins Critical Approval

"The Shorn Lamb, by Emma Speed Sampson, is another of those delicious Southern stories from the author of Mammy's White Folks. It is a bright and humorous tale, such as will delight those who have read Mrs. Sampson's other delightful Southern tales"—THE BOSTON GLOBE.

"Like the odor of mint from the land of the celebrated julep is The Shorn Lamb by Emma Speed Sampson. It ranks along with Mammy's White Folks, Billy and the Major, Miss Minerva's Baby and other offerings of Mrs. Sampson, and it is doubtful if it does not head the procession"—OAKLAND TRIBUNE.

"It's an adorable book this. The sort of a book that comes in so handily. For he would be an inveterate highbrow, indeed, who could not enjoy its gaiety and humor, and it's a book you would be pretty safe in giving to almost any one, be he or she afflicted with broken bones, indigestion, mumps, or merely the wanderlust."—LOUISVILLE TIMES.

"Rebecca Taylor, the shorn lamb of this story, is quaint and altogether lovable. She is a charming character and sure to win the reader's heart."—NEW YORK TIMES.

"To one weary of triangle, of problem, and of wild west novels, there is something refreshing about this entertaining narrative of tidewater Virginia as it is today. Mrs. Sampson's is a humorous, photographic and readable story."—MILWAUKEE SENTINEL.

"Mrs. Sampson has done a remarkable work in character depiction. Taken as a whole, this is one of the strongest and most interesting fiction books of the year. After finishing it, one is not at a loss to know why Mrs. Sampson has such an army of readers."—ROCHESTER DEMOCRAT AND CHRONICLE.

"Once more Mrs. Sampson, a writer of whom Virginia is justly proud, has proved herself not only an artist in the handling of negro dialect, but also a sincere and sympathetic appreciator of that quaint philosophy with which the old time darkey is ever associated"—RICHMOND EVENING DISPATCH.

"The Shorn Lamb" is a good book; it's a clean book; in it there is good writing, realism and humor!

1 THIS FREEDOM

By A. S. M. HUTCHINSON, author of "If Winter Comes"

The Outlook says: "'This Freedom' will be read by every one who wants to keep abreast of the most important fiction work of the year." "This Freedom" is already the best seller everywhere, and the sales of this great novel are entirely up to our expectations of 300,000 copies by Christmas. Cloth, $2.00. Leather, $2.50

2 PEREGRINE'S PROGRESS

By JEFFERY FARNOL, author of "The Broad Highway"

Everyone who enjoyed "The Broad Highway" will enjoy this new novel just as much. All that is necessary is to have them know that "Peregrine's Progress" has all the charm that made "The Broad Highway" so popular. Remember that this new novel will be advertised twice as heavily as any of the recent books by Jeffery Farnol. $2.00

3 THE EVIL SHEPHERD

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM, author of "The Great Impersonation"

This extraordinary novel of English life contains the same elements of mystery and suspense that made "The Great Impersonation" so popular. Told in Oppenheim's best manner, "The Evil Shepherd" will thrill even the most hardened reader. All signs indicate that "The Evil Shepherd" will take a high rank among Oppenheim's best novels. $2.00

4 SKIPPY BEDELLE

By OWEN JOHNSON, author of "The Varmint"

Like "The Varmint," this new Lawrenceville story will be one of the most popular books of its first season and a steady seller for many years afterwards. George Ade says: "It is a real pleasure to meet 'Skippy Bedelle' and through him to renew acquaintance with several of the awesome characters of Lawrenceville." $1.75

No Book published this Fall has been more universally acclaimed than

THE VEHEMENT FLAME

by Margaret Deland

The most important newspapers and magazines of the country have been practically unanimous in declaring it to be the most powerful and distinguished of Mrs. Deland's works; a novel of enduring qualities in a period of much sensational and meretricious writing.

Sidney Williams in the Philadelphia North American: "'The Vehement Flame' is the richest recent manifestation of a fine creative talent."

Henry Van Dyke in the New York Times: "It is by virtue of her power to make us feel the truth that she belongs to the higher class of novelists, the writers of the larger fiction, whose stories are really alive, and therefore repay us richly for reading them."

The Atlantic Monthly: "It is hardly necessary at this late date to say of one of Mrs. Deland's novels that it is interesting in plot and character, serious in conception, skillfully written, and expressive of a characteristic ethical idealism. 'The Vehement Flame' is all this."

William Allen White in the New York Tribune: "A good book; the old-fashioned kind that may be read of an evening before all the old people without making father fidget. It harks back to the time when right and wrong and God and everything had a place in our fictional literature."

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "We find a study of life so incisive, so well-balanced, so sympathetic, that we accept it as truth, and by it are led to a truer understanding of human nature and to broader sympathies with human-kind."

H. L. Pangborn in the New York Herald: "Mrs. Deland has surpassed herself in this novel. Her highest level in dramatic power, especially in the irony of situation and the interplay of conflicting emotions. To the present reviewer, this seems, beyond question, her finest book; which is saying a good deal."

Why I Can Justly Call

WILLA CATHER'S

NEW NOVEL "ONE OF OURS"

"an authentic masterpiece—a novel to rank with the finest of this or any age."

Alfred A. Knopf

DOROTHY CANFIELD in The New York Times:

"An amazingly rich book, rich as no other living American could write, many-peopled, complicated as life itself is complicated, but composed with a harmony and unity which only art can have."

N. P. DAWSON in The New York Globe:

"One of the best pieces of fiction writing that has been done in America. We are almost prepared to say that 'One of Ours' is that great American novel which has been so long in coming."

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE in The Emporia Gazette:

"As rugged and real a picture of a farm boy who grew to full manhood as ever has been painted by an American."

LLEWELLYN JONES in The Chicago Evening Post:

"Will outlast the season; a finely conceived and well executed work, all indeed that we might expect from her; and that means much."

BURTON RASCOE in The New York Tribune:

"A poignantly beautiful drama, the best sustained and most powerful novel she has written. Told with an epical dignity, simplicity and impressiveness."

HARRY HANSEN in The Chicago Daily News:

"A big, wholesome American novel, true to American character and psychology. We are confident that America will find it a privilege to acclaim 'One of Ours.'"

THOMAS BEER in The R. R. Bowker Book Review:

"Miss Cather has given a challenge to any other living American artist and has produced in her latest work something for which the literate American reader must be grateful."

JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER in his new novel
The BRIGHT SHAWL

RETURNS to the field of the colorful romance. An American boy, Charles Abbott, throws himself into the struggle for freedom in Cuba in a spirit of passionate idealism. His friendship with Andres Escobar against a background of intrigues and violence, is the moving current of the story.

The reason for the title is clear to those who read SAN CRISTOBAL DE LA HABANA, but one must know that the significance of the bright shawl was not alone in itself, as a bright map of a memory of youth, but in two women who wore it — the Spanish dancer, and the half-caste informer; and that they together with the scenes of revolution and peace, the cafés and plazas and bull ring of Havana, are only parts of the whole pattern. A story which will inevitably satisfy all of Mr. Hergesheimer's admirers.

Alfred A. Knopf

THE BRIGHT SHAWL WILL BE PUBLISHED OCTOBER 6.
It may be had for $2.00 a copy at any bookshop, after that date. There is also a large paper edition of two-hundred-and-fifty numbered copies each signed by the Author. The price of these has been fixed at ten dollars each. An early application is advisable.

A Sensational But Constructive Book

THE WRECK OF EUROPE

By FRANCESCO NITTI

Former Premier of Italy

WRITTEN long after Keynes' Economic Consequence of the Peace, backing his views to the limit, and extending them to far greater lengths in the light of later developments, the former Italian premier and famous economist castigates the Treaties as ruinous alike to Victor and Vanquished and proposes a definite plan for the reconstruction of Europe.

A sensational but constructive volume, sounding the keynote of international justice, The Wreck of Europe has profoundly stirred parliaments and peoples abroad, and will equally arouse the thinking people of America to whole-hearted approval or bitter denunciation.

GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY Publishers New York

THE name Richard Dehan, associated in thousands of memories with "The Dop Doctor," will shortly be on the lips of many more thousands for praise of THE JUST STEWARD. This new novel is as astonishing as Gustave Flaubert's "Salammbo" in its rich detail of a vanished Alexandria; as modern as H. G. Wells in its present-day London. It is a story of "star-crossed lovers," the descendants of men of widely different race who had sworn and kept an oath of friendship unto death. This novel has a dual appeal—to the faith in young lovers and to the faith in at least one species of immortality, "from father to son." It will outsell all previous Dehan novels. Ready September 28.

DORAN BOOKS

You've heard customers say: "She's always good." She is. Good for readers, good for you, good for us.

DOROTHY CANFIELD is about the most consistent novelist now writing. Each novel since "The Squirrel Cage" has sold more than its predecessor—"The Brimming Cup" has sold three times as many—and each novel really sold during at least three seasons.

ROUGH HEWN has been nearly three years in the writing, and is her longest novel so far, a rich satisfying love story laid in America and France before the war. It deals with a theme this author does so well—the development of contrasting personalities amid home life in France and America. "Neale" is just as American as corn on the cob. "Marise," born in New Jersey, is brought up in France and Rome and becomes a brilliant and sophisticated young woman. Their growth and the destiny that shapes their lives make the story.

NOTA BENE

Ready October 13th. $2.00.

By a consistent author of best sellers.

September 30, 1922

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men of course do seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves, by way of amends, to be a help and ornament thereunto."—BACON.

New Tariff in Force

A LITTLE over fourteen months after its first introduction into the House of Representatives, the new Tariff Act was signed by President Harding and went into immediate effect. The changes that this brings to the field of books are not as extensive as those that have come to other fields of industry. Thanks to the cooperative work in stating the public's case which was carried on by book-trade, library and educational groups, most of the changes that have been made are of a minor character.

The question of whether the printers have been adequately protected should be considered in connection with the figures of the Department of Commerce. These figures show that in 1910, $1,512,213 of books, music, etc., under the book schedule were brought in from England, the chief exporter, and ten years later, after a war drop of 50 per cent, the figures were practically identical, which, with the increased cost of books, show that fewer books were brought in than before. The figures for 1921 were even less, tho they are not available except in general totals. In the same stretch of ten years, duty free books, which largely consist of rare books, books in foreign languages, books for libraries and schools, have increased from $1,792,721 to $3,227,145. There is no indication, however, that the country desires protection on these special classifications of books.

The only important group of books formerly on the free list and now omitted is the textbook group, which now pay a 15 per cent duty, unless imported by the schools themselves. This is, of course, a decided disadvantage to our educational institutions, tho the imported textbooks are not used in large quantities. They are chiefly books used by higher institutions and imported from English college presses and the like. Under the duty free clause the American importer could bring over a stock to anticipate the term demands of the colleges. With the 15 per cent duty it would seem likely that colleges would have to take the initiative, and, when their orders were ready, the books would be brought over especially for their use duty free.

The increased duty on leather bindings will undoubtedly cause considerable complication in some fields of importing. Under the new law, the book and the binding will be taxed separately, and bindings of less than twenty years old, whether full leather or part leather, all fall under the 30 per cent levy. When the binding is five to twenty years old and has been used, it will be difficult for anyone to gauge the age.

The rule for free importation for schools and libraries has been changed so that there is no restriction as to the number of copies of a book that shall be on any invoice. The former paragraph read that books should be duty free "for the use or by the order" of any library, etc. The law now reads that these institutions "may import for their own use or for the encouragement of the fine arts and not for sale." Whether this wording is intended to eliminate the placing of orders by libraries thru American agents or publishers for importing is not clear, but Paragraph 1530 is subject to regulations by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Section 304 of the special provisions, which provides for the marking of imported merchandise, will cause much trouble to both book-trade and libraries under the new interpretations that have come into effect simultaneously with this bill. It has always been the rule that imported merchandise should be conspicuously and permanently marked to indicate the country of origin. This has now been interpreted to mean that this shall be printed on the face or the back of the title page, not in the back of the book as has been frequently the case with English publications.

A sting was put into this regulation new to this bill, as there is now a 10 per cent extra duty on books that arrive at the Custom House without such markings, and this extra duty falls not only on dutiable books, but books that would be otherwise free of duty, such as books for libraries, schools, etc. The President is given power to change rates after proclamation, and the Tariff Commissioner is given power to assist the President in this work.

An outline of the provisions of the new Act is printed in this issue.

Model Home Libraries

THE announcement made in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY last week, of the Better Homes Exhibits, suggested an opportunity of which every bookseller could take advantage. Not only will there be five hundred cities emphasizing Better Homes this year, but the plans of the promoters are to carry the idea still further another year, to gather the names of towns and cities that are interested. The booksellers' slogan, "Every Real Home Has Books," would have a very pertinent connection with such exhibits as these. Last year during Missouri Book Week the Doubleday, Page Bookshop offered a prize for the best list for a home library. The prize list was compiled by Frances C. Sawyer and printed in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of June 17th. This was a list of fifty titles and included children's books.

In furnishing a model household, the eight-shelf, two-section bookcase is likely to be the one selected, unless there are built-in shelves, and such a bookcase would carry from one hundred and seventy-five to two hundred volumes. The making of a model collection for such a bookcase would be a most interesting problem for the bookseller or librarian, and no committee on model home exhibits should fail to consider the suggestion that such books should be included in the exhibit.

The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, to help this movement on, will offer a prize of twenty-five dollars for a list of two hundred books for a model home library.

This list is not to include children's books, which, it is assumed, should be in a separate bookcase and on which there is already much good information. This list to be considered must be accompanied by a photograph of the collection as it appears in a bookcase, as it had been used in a store window or in a Model Home in connection with BETTER HOMES WEEK.

Selling a School Bookshelf

THE recently published list of best twenty-five books for a schoolroom library has been receiving advertising attention from Wanamaker's book department in New York, which has carried a price list of the twenty-five titles, showing the range of prices for the different items. In total it offers the twenty-five books for as low as $32.60 and as high as $81.55. The Library and Educational Associations which have arranged this list by their vote will get added support for their cause by this publication with prices, and a display of such a collection on the bookseller's shelves will bring to many people's minds the possibility of making a gift of such a set.

New Zealand Book Fair

A CIRCULAR received from Dunedin, New Zealand announces that the booksellers of that city joined together in holding a Children's Book Fair the week of June 19th, in which they have enlisted the interest of the schools and community generally. The leaflet of the booksellers reproduces the recent poster of the Year Round Bookselling Committee with the slogan, "Every Real Home Has Books," and the displays in the stores have emphasized books by the best authors and artists.

A Library's Book Problem

THE New York Library has during the past year found itself most adequately supported by the City Government, and the Staff Association of the Library has undertaken to get public attention to the general situation, especially to the need of funds for more books. Its carefully prepared statement has attracted immediate comment in all the newspapers, which have given generous space to the discussion.

The figures presented show that the New York Library is fourth from the bottom in a list of 100 libraries in the amount of appropriation per capita, which is $.343. The highest city appropriations are four times that amount per capita. Brooklyn, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New Orleans are still less per capita. In the amount of appropriation for books the Library has suffered even more than in other directions, and for the year 1922, books and periodicals were put at $60,000, $40,000 less than the year before. This means that for books alone the city contributes about 1.6 cents per capita per year for its book fund and another small sum for periodicals. The Library received for the year about $70,000 from fines and rentals to be added to the book fund, that is, more from this source than from the book fund itself.

In the four years from 1915 to 1918 the Library added on an average 192,000 books a year. In the succeeding three years 125,000 books per year or a decrease of 35% in the number of books added. This falling off was accompanied by inadequate provision for rebinding.

An increase of $451,000 has been asked for, and of this $190,000, or an increase of $130,000, is intended for books. This would still be a lower appropriation per capita than a city of this character should be able to underwrite.

New Tariff Schedules for the Book-Trade

The wording below has been condensed and should not be used for nice points of interpretation without reference to full text of the Act. The rates went into effect immediately on the signing of the bill by President Harding, September 22, 1922.

AN Act "to provide revenue, to regulate commerce with foreign countries, to encourage the industries of the United States and for other purposes."

Books on the Dutiable List

		New Rate	Old Rate
Par. 1310.	Cloth bound books or sheets.
	The text matter of leather bound books.

	Book bindings or covers wholly or in part leather	30%	15%
	All children's books, paper or other material, printed lithographically or otherwise, not over 24 oz. weight and more reading matter than letters, numerals or descriptive words. (Former rate, 4 c. lb. if lithographed and 15% otherwise.)	25%
Par. 1414.	Toy books without reading matter other than letters, numerals or descriptive words. Bound or unbound and parts thereof	70%	4 c. lb.

Books on the Free List

Par. 1520. Bibles or Testaments, bound or unbound.

Par. 1527. Books, etc, imported for the use of the Government or the Library of Congress.

Par. 1528. The publications or charts of learned societies issued for subscribers or exchange.

The publications of individuals for gratuitous private circulation and not advertising.

Public documents of foreign governments.

Books, maps, music engravings, photographs, etchings, lithographic prints, bound or unbound, and charts which have been printed more than 20 years at the time of importation. (Where such books have been rebound in leather within such period, the binding is dutiable as above Par. 1310.)

Par. 1529. Books and pamphlets wholly or chiefly in languages other than English.

Books for the blind.

Par. 1530. Public libraries, schools, colleges, religious societies, etc., "may import free of duty any books, maps, music, etc., for its own use or for the encouragement of the fine arts, and not for sale, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe." (The paragraph in last tariff specified not more than two copies of a book on one invoice and that the books should be "for the use or by the order" of any library, etc.)

Par. 1531. Books as household effects of persons who have used them abroad at least a year and not intended for other persons or for sale.

Par. 1614. Manuscripts, not specially provided for.

Par. 1625. Newspapers and periodicals.

Par. 1647. Professional books in possession of persons emigrating to the United States and who had owned and used them abroad.

The former tariff admitted all text-books free, but that provision is omitted from this Act except as per Par. 1530.

Special Provisions

Sec. 304. Books, as all other articles, must be marked conspicuously and permanently so as to indicate the country of origin. (Interpretation from the Treasury Department specifies on face or back of title page.) Shipments will not be released until so marked. An extra 10% duty will be levied on goods received and not properly marked at time of importation. This fine applies to duty-free books as well. Every package containing imported goods must be marked with the country of origin, also.

Sec. 305. The importation of obscene books, pamphlets or prints is prohibited.

Sec. 315. The President is given power to change rates of duty by thirty-day proclamation and after suitable investigation. He may put American valuation into use on any article if ad valorem duties on foreign valuations are not effective. The United States Tariff Commission will assist the President in investigations.

Administrative Provisions

Sec. 402. For the purposes of this Act the value of imported merchandise shall be the foreign or export value, whichever is higher. (If those are not ascertainable, the United States value or the cost of production.)

Foreign value shall be the price, at the time of exportation to the United States, at which similar merchandise is freely offered to all purchasers, in usual quantities and in ordinary course of trade, including containers.

Sec. 481. Contents of Invoice. All invoices must state (1) Port of entry to which goods are destined; (2) Time when, place where, person by whom shipped, and person to whom sold; (3) A detailed description of merchandise together with the marks and numbers of the packages; (4) Quantities; (5) Purchase price in currency of purchase; (6) If sent on consignment, the price the owner was willing to receive; (7) Kind of currency, whether gold, silver or paper; (8) All charges upon the merchandise, itemized, including commissions, insurance, freight, containers, cases, coverings and cost of packing; (9) All rebates, bounties, etc.; (10) Any other facts deemed necessary for proper appraisement.

When the merchandise has been purchased in different consular districts for shipment to the U. S. and is assembled for shipment and embraced in a single invoice which is produced for certification, the invoice shall have attached thereto the original bills received by the shipper or extracts therefrom.

Sec. 482. Declarations Accompanying Certified Invoices. Every invoice over $100 shall at or before the time of shipment be produced for certification to

(1) The Consular Office of the district where manufactured or purchased; (2) To the Consular Office for district where assembled if a different district. Such invoices shall be endorsed in a prescribed form, stating whether books are bought outright, that there is no other invoice, that the invoice is true and correct.

Every invoice shall be made out in triplicate or in quadruplicate if desired by the shipper for merchandise intended for immediate transportation under Sec. 552, and shall be signed by seller or shipper or agent of either.

Such invoices shall be certified according to the provisions of the existing law. The original of the invoice shall be filed in the Office of the Consul or Officer by whom it was certified. The duplicate and, if made, the quadruplicate, shall be delivered to the exporter to be forwarded to the consignee for use in making entry and the triplicate sent promptly by the Consular Officer to the Collector of Customs at the port where consigned.

Sec. 484. Entry. Entry by consignee shall be made within forty-eight hours after entry of the vessel.

The consignee must produce a certified invoice except on special ruling by collector and shall produce the bill of lading. Such entry shall be signed by consignee or his agent and shall set forth all facts required.

Sec. 485. Declaration. Every consignee shall make a declaration under oath in form prescribed that all statements are correct.

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to prescribe regulations for one declaration in the case of books, magazines, newspapers and periodicals published and imported in successive parts, numbers, or volumes and entitled to free entry.

Sec. 486. Bond. Consignee shall give bond on merchandise, none of which or part of which only is sent to public stores for appraisal.

Sec. 487. Correction Before Appraisement. The consignee or his agent may make additions or deductions from cost or value at time entry is made or before appraiser has made examination.

Sec. 489. Additional Duties. If the final appraised value shall exceed entered value, there shall be a 1% additional duty for each 1% excess.

If appraised value exceeds declared value by 100%, the whole package shall be seized.

Duties shall not, however, be assessed upon less than the entered value except where the importer certifies at the time of entry that the entered value is made higher than the value as defined in this Act to meet appraiser's decisions on previous shipments which decisions are still waiting final decision.

Sec. 498. Entry Under Regulations. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to prescribe rules for the declaration of—

Merchandise not exceeding $100 in value, including such merchandise imported thru the mails: .

Articles sent by persons in foreign countries as gifts, etc.

Sec. 499. Examination of Merchandise. Merchandise which the regulations require shall be inspected or appraised, shall not be delivered, except as otherwise provided, until it has been examined and appraised and found correct. Not less than one package of every invoice and not less than one in every ten packages shall be designated by the Collector for examination. The Secretary of the Treasury may make exceptions to this.

If a package is found to contain an item not invoiced, the appraiser reports to the collector as to whether he believes there is apparent intent to defraud.

Sec. 500. Duties of Appraiser. To appraise merchandise in the unit of quantity in which the merchandise is usually bought and sold by ascertaining or estimating the value thereof by all reasonable means, any statement of cost in any invoice to the contrary notwithstanding.

Sec. 501. Reappraisement. The decision of the appraiser shall be final and conclusive unless a written appeal is filed with the Board of General Appraisers by the Collector within sixty days after the date of the appraiser's report or filed by the consignee within ten days.

Sec. 504. Payment of Duties. The consignee shall deposit with the Collector at the time of making entry the amount of duty estimated. Upon receipt of the appraiser's report, the Collector liquidates the account and collects increases or makes refunds.

American Bible Anniversary Celebration

THE FAMOUS OLD BIBLE HOUSE IN ASTOR PLACE WHERE THE WORK OF THE AMERICAN COMMITTEES FOR REVISING THE BIBLE WAS DONE

ON the 4th of October this year there will be a celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the first formal meeting of American scholars to revise our English translation of the Bible. The work of Bible revision in America grew out of a movement in England. On the 6th of May, 1870, a committee of eight bishops proposed a plan for revising the Bible to the Convocation of Canterbury. The plan met with approval, and the committee was enlarged with impartiality. The cooperation of famous Biblical scholars of other sects was solicited, so that Presbyterians, Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans and members of other Christian denominations were represented as well as the original group of Episcopalians.

The English New Testament Company began its labors the 22nd June, 1870. In August, 1870, Dr. Joseph Angus, one of the British committee, arrived in New York with a letter from Bishop Ellicott, Chairman of the New Testament Company, authorizing him to open negotiations for the formation of an American committee of revision. The Rev. Dr. Philip Schaff of the Union Theological Seminary issued invitations to future members of the American revision committee. The first formal meeting of this committee took place on October 4th, 1872 at Number 40 Bible House, Astor Place, New York.

It had been felt necessary to revise the Bible because of many obsolete words and phrases which meant very little to modern readers or whose meaning had changed since the early translation and because of inaccuracies of translation from Greek text. The discovery of three very ancient manuscripts, the Sinaitic, the Alexandrian and the Vatican, shed new light on Bible texts, and new information on the history of the Bible had come from excavations in Egypt, Assyria, Babylonia, Judea and Arabia. The discovery of old sculptures and ancient libraries found in long buried cities helped to clear up many obscure Bible passages.

"The main reason for revision was not a literary one," wrote Matthew Brown Riddle, one of the American revisers in "The Story of the Revised New Testament." "Despite a few archaisms, the noble diction of the Authorized Version has been preserved in the Revised Version. New words have not been introduced, except when accuracy demanded a term unemployed in the older version, but, while the literary form was constantly considered, the main purpose was to present accurately, as far as any version can, the meaning of the New Testament writers. The Greek language was by no means so well known in the days of King James as it is today. The influence of Latin, the common tongue of scholars in that age, modified many of the renderings, especially those of the Greek tenses, which do not correspond exactly with those of either Latin or English. As there is no article in Latin, the very important use of the Greek definite article was often ignored. The preposition was rendered inconsistently if not carelessly. Moreover, the Authorized Version habitually renders the same Greek terms by different English words and on the other hand renders different Greek terms by the same English words. This made it impossible for the English reader to determine the correspondences in the Greek.

"The Revised New Testament represents a much older, and, in the judgment of all competent scholars, a more accurate Greek text, than the King James Version. The latter was based on the Greek Testament of Beza, from which it differs in only forty places. Now Beza, while a careful exegete, was not an expert textual critic. In his day the science of textual criticism had not yet been developed. The editors preceding him, Erasmus and Robert Stephen (or Stephens, as generally printed), had few Greek manuscripts and no settled critical principles. It is usual to speak of the text of the Sixteenth Century on which the Authorized Version is based as the "received text," but this is not strictly correct. The edition which claims to present the received text was printed by the Elzevirs at Leyden, in 1633, twenty-two years after the publication of the Authorized Version, but it differs very slightly from Stephen and Beza... The true position is: that the original Greek text is authoritative; not any translation or any later and possibly impure and inaccurate text. To discover this original Greek text has been the task of textual critics since the latter part of the Eighteenth Century... No edition of the Greek testament can claim to present "the revisers' text," since, on many passages where there are various readings, different spellings and punctuation, the revisers passed no judgment. Only upon readings that would affect the English dress was any action taken."

"No one manuscript was followed by the revisers. In each case all the leading authorities were recognized, and the judgment based upon evidence, both external and internal. From the results it would appear that the American Company gave more weight to internal evidence and the English Company to external evidence. Nearly all the differences between the two Companies in regard to reading are indicated in the American Appendix, published in the Revised New Testament of 1881. In many instances the English Company preferred one reading in the text and another in the margin, while the American Company reversed this position."

"The method of cooperation, between the English and American companies, as finally agreed upon, included: the sending of the first and provisional revision from England to America; then the consideration of this by the American Company, the results being returned to England; then, after careful consideration of the suggestions from America, a second English revision, which was also sent to this country, and the same course pursued in regard to it. Practically a third revision was made in England, in order to secure more uniformity in the renderings. Indeed, Bishop Ellicott,—in his final report to the Convocation, intimates that there were virtually seven revisions, including the American reviews of the matter sent to this country. Furthermore, it was agreed that an appendix should be published to the English Revised Version, containing the more important preferences of the American Company. As the Version of the New Testament was the work of two separate companies, who never discussed their results in common, the superiority of a version resulting from this united and corporate discussion is apparent. It was further stipulated by the University Presses (Oxford and Cambridge), who owned the English copyright, that the American Company should not publish an edition of their own for a term of 14 years.

"That the English revisers gave, as they state in their Preface, 'much care and attention' to the American suggestions is shown by the number, either incorporated in the text or added in the margin of the Revision of 1881, probably 1000 in all, as estimated by Bishop Lee. The American appendix, moreover, formed an essential part of the results of this cooperative labor.

"In general the English and American Companies agreed remarkably well. A curious proof of this general agreement may be stated. At one time, owing to some difference of opinion about the relations of the two Companies as affecting the business interest of the University Presses, the first English revision of the Epistle to the Hebrews was withheld from the American Company, but it was decided to proceed independently. When afterwards the work of the English Company on that Epistle was transmitted, it appeared that the American Company had, without knowledge of the English revision, adopted far more than half of the emendations in exact terms, and a large proportion of the other half was substantially the same.

"It had been agreed in 1878 that the differences of readings and renderings which the American Company deemed of special importance should be included in an Appendix to the English Revision. While, during the successive revisions of the New Testament, a very large proportion of the American suggestions had been accepted by the English Company, either in exact terms or in substance, there still remained many points of difference, both as to certain classes of passages and as to individual instances. The question then arose in the American Company: 'What shall be the extent of the Appendix?' Here there was difference of opinion. As the action in regard to the Appendix was taken July 7, 1880 and the English Company was nearly ready to publish the Revised New Testament, the preparation of the Appendix was rapidly pushed. A committee prepared a list which was printed for the use of the revisers comprising 'a basis for the Appendix.' Yet, despite the great care given to the task, the Preface to the American Standard Revised New Testament frankly states that the Appendix to the edition of 1881 was 'hastily compiled under pressure from the University Presses.' Still it contains very few errors.

"As the preferences of the American Company published in the revision of 1881 have been incorporated in the American Standard edition of 1901, the details in regard to the Appendix can be learned only from the English editions of the University Presses. In the preface to the edition of 1901 it is stated: that the list of passages in which the New Testament Company dissented from the decision of their English associates when it was transmitted to them bore the heading, 'The American New Testament Revision Company, having in many cases yielded their preferences for certain readings and renderings, present the following instances in which they differ from the English Company as in their view of sufficient importance to be appended to the revision, in accordance with an understanding between the Companies.' It was therefore somewhat of a surprise to find, when the edition of 1881 reached this country, that the heading of the American Appendix was in this briefer form: 'List of readings and renderings preferred by the American Committee recorded at their desire.' This substitution was made without any consultation with the American Company. It may have been occasioned by a desire for brevity, but, whatever the reason may have been, the published heading gave an erroneous impression, suggesting that the only points of difference between the two Companies were those included in the Appendix. While there was no evidence of any intent to thus minimize the labors of the American Company, the effect was to strengthen the desire to publish a distinctively American Revised Bible at the expiration of fourteen years, when such action would be permissible, in accordance with the agreement made with the English Company and the University Presses.

"There was no way of correcting the published heading, for millions of copies had been printed in England, and the English Company had dissolved, leaving the University Presses as the only authority to which appeal could be made. The American Company retained its corporate existence, and wisely decided to make no protest, fearing the effect upon the success of the revision. With this incident the cooperation with the English Company closed. The relations with that body had been mutual, and there is every reason to believe that the English scholars appreciated the labors of their brethren in America."

When the Revised Version was published in England, the Chicago Tribune had the whole New Testament cabled over and printed in one issue.

"During the interval between the publication of the English Revised Version and the American Revised Version, the American revisers paid attention to the criticism which the Revised Version encountered," says Mr. Brown. "While most of the unfavorable judgments expressed were due to ignorance or prejudice, there were many intelligent criticisms deserving and receiving due consideration. The method of publication caused some perplexity. No compensation was received by any members of the American Committee. The expenses of the American Companies during the period of cooperation had been met by private subscription, and the additional outlay in the preparation of the American Revised Version might have been provided in the same way, but this plan would have left the edition unprotected by copyright and would have opened the way for unauthorized and incorrect issues, as in 1881. Finally, Thomas Nelson & Sons entered negotiations with the Committee. In April 1897, a meeting was held at the Bible House, New York, to confer with the New York representative of this publishing firm. It was decided at the desire of Nelson's that a new and complete set of references be prepared. The size of the volume, the arrangement of marginal readings and renderings and of Old Testament citations were virtually agreed upon. At this conference, the publishers expressed their willingness not only to defray the necessary expenses of the revisers incident to the preparation of the volume, but also to make some pecuniary compensation to the surviving members, but the proposal was declined. The arduous labors that followed were performed gratuitously. The American Standard Edition of the Revised Version of the Bible was placed on sale August 26th, 1901."

In 1873, Harper & Brothers published a pamphlet by Dr. Philip Schaff, who was the head of the work of revision in America. The pamphlet was called "The Revision of the English Version of the Holy Scriptures by a Cooperative Committee of British and American Scholars of Different Denominations." It outlined in great detail the proposed plan of revision. In this he said: "I have reason to believe there is a general disposition among us to retain the prose idiom, grammar and vocabulary of the Authorized Version, so far as is consistent with faithfulness with the Greek and Hebrew Scriptures, with changes to the present stage of the English language. The popular English Bible is the greatest blessing which the Reformation of the Sixteenth Century bestowed upon the Anglo-Saxon race. It is upon the whole the best translation ever made, not excepting even the Jerome Vulgate and Luther's Version. It is not the production of a single mind but of a large number of wise and good men, representing three generations in the most eventful and productive period of modern church history. To substitute a new popular version for such a work would be almost a sacrilege; certainly an ungrateful task and inevitable failure. But this is not the question. The present movement contemplates no new version, but simply a scholarly and conscientious revision in the spirit, and, as far as possible, in the very language of the old. The object is to make a good translation still better, more accurate and consistent, and to bring it up to the present standard of Biblical scholarship. The need and desirability of a new revision are almost generally admitted, at least by those who are best acquainted with the Bible in its original languages. The most ardent admirers of King James's Version do not claim for it perfection and infallibility."

"The improvements which can be made without in the least impairing the idiom and beauty or disturbing the sacred esssentials of the Authorized Version may be considered under the following heads as needing revision: The text; errors; inaccuracies; inconsistencies; archaisms; proper names; accessories; arrangement.

"1. The text. To restore from the best critical resources now made accessible an older and purer text in place of the comparatively late and corrupt textus receptus. (The Hebrew text having been secured long ago by the Masarets, presents very little difficulty. It is stated that there are only 1314 various readings of importance in the Old Testament, and that only 147 of them affect the sense.) The case is very different with the New Testament. The Authorized Version was made from the received text, so called. The received text was hastily derived in the infant period of the printed Bible from a few and faulty cursive manuscripts, and the oldest versions, except a corrupt text of the Vulgate, were not yet known. We have now as complete an apparatus as is necessary to settle the text in all its essential features. The Sinaitic and Vatican manuscripts, the earliest versions, and the quotations of the Nicene and Ante-Nicene fathers we are now able to reconstruct with a tolerable degree of certainty, the oldest attainable text, which is upon the whole much simpler and stronger than the Post-Nicene and Mediaeval textus receptus.

"2. Errors. To correct acknowleded errors either of typography or English grammar or translation. (Misprints like Vinegar for Vineyard in the famous Vinegar Edition of Oxford, 1717; errors of grammar as cherubims for cherubim or cherubs; whom say yet that I am for who, etc.)

"3. Inaccuracies. To rectify inexact and imperfect renderings which obscure or weaken or modify the sense intended by the sacred writer. (They took branches of palm trees, where the original reads, The branches of the palm trees, i. e., of the Mount of Olives.

"4. Inconsistencies. To introduce consistency and uniformity in the translation of words and phrases. αἰώνιος rendered in one passage as both, everlasting punishment and life eternal; or Ἕλλην now Greek, now Gentile.)

"5. Archaisms. ('To let' in the sense 'to hinder'; 'charger' in the sense of 'platter'.)

"6. Proper names. To introduce uniformity in the spelling of proper names of persons and places, retaining, as a rule, the Hebrew forms for Hebrew names, the Greek forms for Greek names, except where a form given has been thoroly naturalized and unalterably fixed in English usage, as in the familiar names Jesus (the Savior) for Joshua (the leader of Israel); Mary for Miriam; James for Jacob; John for Johannes; Matthew for Mattæus; Andrew for Andreas; Paul for Paulus; Peter for Petrus; Stephen for Stephanus; Jerusalem for Yerushalaim or Hierasolyma; Athens, Rome; and a few more.

"7. Accessories. To revise the orthography; the punctuation; the use of capitals, as in Spirit, Father, Son. Redeemer, Scriptures, etc.; the words in italics; the marginal references; the chronology (of Usher); and the headings of chapters, and columns all in conformity with the style of translation, the most approved standards and present scholarship and usage.

"8. Arrangement. Finally, to combine with the received division into chapters and verses an arrangement of the prose in paragraphs and a metrical arrangement of poetry according to the laws of Hebrew parallelism, but the division into chapters dates from the Thirteenth Century, and the division into verses, as first introduced in the Old Testament in 1528. Much of the beauty of the Bible is lost to the common reader by the uniform printing of poetry and prose. This improvement, in which scholars and educated men are more interested than the mass of Bible readers, will probably be strenuously opposed, for, since it strikes the eye, it would create the impression that the revised version is a different version of the familiar old Bible."

The work of the scholars who revised the Bible was done quietly and without any remuneration. They wished neither to glorify themselves as individuals nor as members of a committee. They won more criticism than praise for their brilliant work. The present celebration it is felt, is an opportunity to honor these men who have had all too little praise for their services. Modern readers who enjoy the fruit of their labors do not wish the names of these eminent scholars to be lost in obscurity. October 4 will be widely celebrated by churches and Sunday schools thruout the country.

An Active Bookstore Auditorium

THE auditorium connected with Paul Elder's Bookshop at San Francisco has been developed as an active part of the institution, and this fall's program indicates a wide range of interest in the various lectures that are to be held. Some of these are lectures on specific books; others on general subjects of general literary interest. Three novels have been selected for special review. On September 14th, Aline B. Greenwood will lecture on "Current Events" with detailed attention to Edith Wharton's new book, "Glimpses of the Moon." On October 5th, Raine Bennett, director of the Western Arts Association, is to talk on William J. Locke's new novel, "The Tale of Triona." On October 19th, Mrs. Kathleen Norris is to give a talk, there being special local interest in the fact that the scene of her novel, "Certain People of Importance," is laid in San Francisco. All these lectures are free. On October 14th, Dr. James L. Gordon is to discusss the doctrines of Emil Coué, and the books on the subject will be mentioned. On October 28th, Dr. David P. Barrows, President of the University of California, will review "The Life and Letters of Walter H. Page," and on November 4th, Rev. W. K. Guthrie is to review "The Letters of Franklin K. Lane. On November 11th, Dr. Lillien J. Martin, author of "Mental Hygiene," reviews "The Mind in the Making." Admission to these lectures is fifty cents.

Besides this, there is a lecture on September 30th on "The History and the Art of Bookbinding" by Mary J. Coulter, pupil of Cobden Sanderson, and one on "Etching and Etchers" by the same lecturer on October 21st.

Besides these, there are lectures on "Travel in South America," on "Aryan Culture," on "Unknown Australia" and "The Passing of the Old West."

English Book-Trade News

(From Our London Correspondent)

THERE are those who say that business is not good. Generally speaking, business is not particularly good, but the business of book-selling seems to be satisfactory and the fall promising. A most fortunate thing that happened a few weeks since, was the settlement of the printers' strike. This cleared the ground, and industrial difficulties are, for the moment, any way, in the back ground. In these days of constantly changing situations, it does not pay, from many points of view, to bother too much about the future. Wisely taking care of the present, it is not too much to hope that the future will effectively take care of itself. That is certainly a wise philosophy, and a good policy. Moreover, it does seem as tho the public is more equably accepting the situation in regard to the prices of books. It is still felt, of course, that published prices are too high, but the public is realizing that the costs of production have not come down nearly enough to justify any reduction worth considering. Most novels are being issued at seven shillings and sixpence, and this price is likely to obtain for a long time yet. There is, also, the very good sign that book buyers of the general class are beginning to realize that a good book is decidedly worth paying for.

Now is the time to emphasize this particular feature of book selling. With good propaganda, and a united effort, something might be definitely accomplished, not only in popularizing the book, but driving home the fact that books are not for the asking and receiving, without a proper exchange for value received. If books remain at a high price, or at least on a higher basis than in 1914, it is having one good effect; for it is keeping out the bad book. It will be a great pity if the pre-war quantity ever becomes again that quantity at the expense of quality.

During the past summer, sales have, on the whole, been very good. Some best sellers appeared and succeeded, two of the most notable being Mr. Hutchinson's "This Freedom," the sale of which has already topped six figures (120,090), while Miss Dell's "Charles Rex" is not far behind. Naturally, a part from instances like these, and the cheap reprints—by the way, something like 100,000 have been sold in cheap form of Mrs. Hull's "The Sheik."

There has been a great sale of guide books. As a well-known columnist in John O' London's Weekly says: "The demand for the less expensive volumes, such as deal with particular counties or cities of England, comes largely from folk who take char-a-banc journeys, and are anxious to know about their travels. Certainly this new and popular method of traveling has given the guide-book sales a great impetus this season. These coach trips are made over the length and breadth of England and Scotland.

Now we are in the full tide of autumn publication, and there are a great number of books, both small and great, appearing during the next few weeks. Fiction makes a big array, and the general book of considerable interest is going to be in great evidence this season. Already Philip Guedalla's "Second Empire" is in a second impression, while "The Wonderland of the Eastern Congo," by T. Alexander Barns, a thirty-one-and-sixpenny book, is doing very well. It is not to be supposed that Lloyd George's war book will be out this year, but Mr. Asquith's Memoirs, possibly Mrs. Asquith's second volume, and the ex-Kaiser's Memoirs, may be expected this season. We are to have Mr. Gardiner's "Life of Sir William Harcourt," and books by Shane Leslie ("Life of Cardinal Manning") and Mr. Churchill (a biography of Sir Marks Sykes) are among the season's promised items. Also Sir Algernon West's Diaries, and Lady Susan Townley's book. One of the most interesting announcements is "The Standard Edition of the Prose works of Herman Melville," to be completed in twelve volumes at ten guineas a set. This edition is strictly limited to 750 numbered sets. This ought to be a good line for booksellers. The texts, carefully established after the first editions, will be printed by T. & A. Constable of Edinburgh, and Messrs. Constable, of London, are the publishers.

Those of us, says The News agent and Bookseller, who know H. E. Alden are pleased to hear of his election to the Chairmanship of Messrs. Simpkin Marshall and Co. Mr. Alden entered the firm at the very bottom of the ladder and has won his present position solely by a steady application of his undoubted ability to furthering the interests of the great business of which he is now the head. During his long connection with the trade, Mr. Alden, has seen many changes and witnessed many rivalries. Before the amalgamation of Simpkins and Hamilton's he can remember the strange happenings resulting from the competition between the two houses, when it was said it was so keen that the rival travelers raced and chased one another on their "journeys" up and down the country.

We are very sorry, indeed, to have the report of the probable stopping of that enterprising, up-to-date, and lively journal Book Post. It has fought a good fight, but does not seem to have had the success to which it was entitled.

Best sellers just now are:

FICTION

Hutchinson's "This Freedom."
Dell's "Charles Rex."
Marshall's "Big Peter."
Weigall's "Bedouin Love."
Wharton's "Glimpses of the Moon."
Hamilton's "Rustle of Silk."
"Georgian Stories."

NON-FICTION

Guedalla's "Second Empire."
Barne's "Eastern Congo."
McKenna's Tex
"The Pomp of Power."
West's "The Judge."
Dyott's "Silent Highways of the Jungle."
"Anatole France and his Circle."
Williams' "Emperor Nicholas II."
Lynd's "The Sporting Life."
Lynd's "Books and Authors."

Publishers at Chemical Show

THE week of September 11th saw a large four floor exhibit of the chemical industry which proved very successful from the point of view of exhibitors and was well attended. Among the publishers who maintained displays were J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia, which has always had a strong line of American and imported books on the chemical subject, P. Blakiston Sons & Company, Philadelphia, Chemical Catalog Company, Inc., of New York, American Chemical Society of New York, Howes Publishing Company, New York, John Wiley & Sons, Inc., New York, McCready Publishing Company, New York, and Industrial and Educational Press, Gardenvale, Quebec. The exhibitors reported that this contact has been extremely worth while. The Lippincott booth carried Year Round Bookselling posters.

New Capital for Building Circulation

F. M. LUPTON, Publisher, Inc., of which Moody B. Gates is the President, is offering a new issue of 55,000 shares of Class A stock, no par value, at a price to yield 9%. The business was established nearly forty years ago by F. M. Lupton, who in his time was well known as a publisher of cheap editions of standard works. Since his death, the business has been carried on with practically no change of name, the chief assets of the corporation being the People's Home Journal, McClure's Magazine, which it controls, and a printing plant known as "The Periodical Press."

Circulating Library Subscriptions

THE increase in circulating libraries in this country makes comparison with the large English libraries of value, tho the method of subscription in that country is in general on a different basis from what is customarily adopted here. A current advertisement of the London Times Book Club and Circulating Library places its chief emphasis on what it calls its "Guaranteed Service," which it claims insures a supply of books immediately on request. The rate is 6 guineas per annum with three volumes out at any time. The cheaper subscription of 3 guineas gives a service not quite so prompt and trial subscriptions for shorter periods of time and one, two or three volumes are to be had.

A Study of Publicity

THE Russell Sage Foundation has issued in the past few years a series of books by E. G. and M. S. Routzahn which have been extremely valuable material for anyone planning exhibits in promotion work of any kind.

They are now at work on a study of publicity campaigns and have ready a reading list on publicity which they will send in mimeographed form to anyone interested. The book is to contain one chapter on the subject of "Weeks," and in preparing this the authors have been studying the methods and material of Children's Book Week.

"The A. B. C. of Publicity Planning" and "Travelling Publicity Campaigns" have been among the previous books issued.

Boston Council Bars Book as Pro-British

ON motion of Councilman Jerry Watson, who some time ago launched an attack on Webster's Dictionary on the ground that it was pro-British, the City Council today unanimously passed an order requesting the trustees of the Boston Public Library to bar from their shelves Helen Nicolay's "Book of American Wars," Century.

The objection to Helen Nicolay's volume, as expressed by Watson, was that the author "falsified history and held the early patriots up to ridicule." To prove his case the Councilman read passages referring to Samuel Adams, James Otis and Joseph Warren.

Watson's order aiming at the elimination of the dictionary was also presented, but the council voted to lay it on the table pending acceptance by the library trustees of an invitation to attend the next meeting and show cause, if any, for the retention of the Webster classic.

PEPYS FOR PALE PEOPLE

"Dr. Pepys' Diary," by Dr. Morris Fishbein. Reprinted from his column, "Tonics and Sedatives," in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Reader, are your chortles ailing?
Have you felt your chuckles failing?
Here's the very dope to ease
Dormant risibilities!
Gossip mildly medicated,
Persiflage well pepsinated . . .
Here's the perfect preparation.
Swift and certain relaxation.

Are your cachinnations sluggish?
Yet you distrust doctors drugish?
Gentle reader, try with me
Fishbein's osteopathy.
Fishbein jolts the funny bone,
Tickles you until you groan,
Racks your rib with ribald laughter,
Shocks you first and soothes you after.
Rocks you with gargantuan mirth
Till you get your money's worth;
Then, by chiropractic wiggles,
Lulling you to gentle giggles,
With a parting pleasantry
Touches for a trifling fee.
Morris Fishbein never fails you.
Try his treatise for what ails you!

Atlantic's Bookselling Series

THE Atlantic Monthly book section is launching a new effort to give greater value to its book pages by carrying a series of ten articles on the bookstore and its function. These articles are specially written for the Atlantic by H. J. Barrett, and the first one appears in the September number. On each of these pages there will be printed at the bottom "THERE IS A BOOKSELLER IN YOUR TOWN," and to the local bookseller will be sent a decalcomania for window display, on which is printed "We sell books advertised in the Atlantic Monthly." This series of ten articles is to be carried in ten issues of the Atlantic, in the same number of the House Beautiful and of the Living Age, with a total circulation for the series of 1,800,000.

Such an emphasis on the important function of the bookstore connected with publishers' advertising is a co-operative effort of real value to the bookstores, and the text presented gives a continuous argument in favor of a more genuine public appreciation of what a well-rounded bookstore can mean to a community.

The first of these articles, called "A High Priest of Culture in a Generation of Jazz," reads as follows:

"Why does the bookstore present the last living example of that individualism for which Thoreau contended so valiantly: for that natural unimpeded development of personality which, it is evident from the literature of earlier ages, was the normal condition before the harnessing of power crowded so many of us into cities with the resultant loss of individual flavor?

"All but the bookstore man. Protected by a barrier of books from the ripples in the great tide of time, he remains himself, a character. He always was a character. He is one. It was no accident that Samuel Johnson's father kept a bookshop in Litchfield. Samuel came by his qualities honestly.

"In an age of movies, golf, ephemeral magazines, Sunday newspapers and commercialized universities, he sits serenely among his tomes: a high priest of culture in a generation of jazz. 'Books,' said Whipple, 'are lighthouses erected in the great sea of time,' and he tends the lamp. 'The true University of these days,' said Carlyle, 'is a collection of books,' and he is its dean. 'The writings of the wise,' said Lander, 'are the only riches our posterity can not squander,' and he is their conservator. In a money-mad age he is content with a living. He is himself. His life 'is a life not an apology.'

"From no motive other than that of loyalty to the traditions of his ancient guild he carries upon his shelves hundreds of volumes which he can never hope to sell at a profit. By the time their eventual purchaser appears they will have 'eaten their heads off' in overhead expense. But they are there because he takes professional pride in his stock, because he interprets his function as something far higher than that of a mere merchandiser of paper bound between boards. 'Books are the voices of the distant and the dead' said Channing, 'and make us heirs of the spiritual life of past ages.' And the bookstore man relays these messages.

"The nation's bookstores are probably the greatest single force we possess for lifting the intellectual level of our people. And they exert an incalculable influence upon our ethical standards. Were all our universites, with their vast paraphernalia of learning to close their doors tomorrow less damage would be done to our intellectual life than were our bookstores to put up their shutters. But tho millions of dollars are diverted to the endowment of colleges, who has ever given a dollar to a bookstore?

"The bookstores ask for no donations but they do expect patronage. Let us patronize them. Let us not be open to the indictment of Georg Brandes in his essay 'On Reading.' He says, 'There are people who are content as to books with the provision afforded them by circulating libraries—a sorry method at the best. It is a sure sign of failing culture and poor taste when at every watering place in a great country expensively dressed women are invariably seen each with a greasy novel from a circulating library in her hand. These ladies who would be ashamed to borrow a dress, or wear second-hand clothes, do not hesitate to economize in book buying.'

"The books advertised in the Atlantic Monthly are worth reading and re-reading. That means that they are worth owning. Whenever you see the reproduced device displayed you will find them on sale. Make the acquaintance of your local bookseller. You will find him a man of manifold contacts, a staunch defender of the republic of letters from the usurpation of the dynasty of the dollar."

Lectures on Typography

COLUMBIA University is again offering its course in typography by James D. Gabler. Last year nearly two hundred students took the course in the spring term, and this fall a course will be given both in the morning and in the evening beginning October 4th, the morning course at 9 o'clock to 10:40; evening course, 7:40 to 9:20. The series of lectures will be entitled "Preparation of Material for Publishing." The fee is $28, which includes the University fee of $6, books about $6 and a special course fee of $16.

Other Columbia courses are "Advertising Display and Mechanics" by W. P. Langreich; "Advertising Writing" by W. Shaw-Thomson; "The Psychology of Advertising and Selling" by A. T. Poffenberger.

Lloyd George's War Book

"A MAN of Kent" in the London British Weekly says that the arrangements made with regard to the publication of Lloyd George's Memoirs constitute a record, not only in regard to the price to be paid, but also for the speed of the negotiations. Less than a fortnight ago Curtis Brown, the literary agent, was definitely empowered to offer the work, not on the usual royalty basis, but for a fixed sum in payment of complete rights.

These rights were divided into British, American and foreign serial rights and British and American and foreign book rights. It was no surprise to learn that Sir William Berry had secured the book for the Sunday Times and for Cassell and Company, which he controls, for he is in close touch with Downing-street, and it was understood that there was a promise of long standing to give him "the first offer." The figure mentioned for the complete British copyright is £30,000. The New York Times, in conjunction with its allied papers, is supposed to have agreed to no less than £40,000 for the American and Canadian serial rights alone. Much interest has been aroused in publishing circles by the statement that Funk and Wagnalls are to issue the book in the United States, for, apart from their famous Standard Dictionary and books of reference, this firm has recently concentrated most of its force upon the Literary Digest, one of the most successful weekly publications in the States.

It is known that the competition for the American book rights was fierce; probably the fact that Funk and Wagnalls are the representatives of Cassell in the United States was the deciding factor. As the sum talked of for the American book rights is £20,000, it is suggested that £90,000—the total figure said to have been agreed upon—leaves out of consideration all rights outside the English language. It is certain that such rights will bring that total well beyond the six figures which a month or two ago was the talk of the publishing world—and laughed at as "absolutely beyond the bounds of possibility." It remains to be seen when the book will be issued. It is to run to 200,000 words, and only the first chapter, dealing with the outbreak of war, is, it is said, completed.

German Text-Book Prices

Situation is Extraordinarily Puzzling.

THAT publishers have been able to carry on thus long in Germany with a relatively small increase in price has been partly due to the economies exercised in the matter of format, but is much more due to the fact that there were still in stock many text-books printed before the war, and that these are still being sold at pre-war prices, a policy that most of them now agree has been altogether wrong and that will, it is feared, bring disaster to the publishers who have pursued it. In order to avoid such a state of affairs, and at the same time to consider the rights of the schools and the school children of Germany, the Text Book Publishers' Association has recently conducted a thoro investigation to determine the best methods for arriving at the lowest possible prices for text-books.

The first problem that this committee finds itself up against is the ever decreasing value of money. If this were considered from the point of view of foreign exchange the figures would be completely appalling, and considered as it is from the point of view of the purchasing power of the mark in Germany it is bad enough, this having decreased so tremendously since the end of the war.

This circumstance is further complicated and rendered disheartening because the prices of commodities, and especially publishers' commodities, independent of the exchange, are rising as they tend to approach the world-market price. Computations made from these facts would all indicate that the price of books should be increased at least twenty-fold in order that their manufacture may continue.

The matter of school books newly manufactured being thus disposed of, the question then rises as to whether the great stock of books manufactured before the war should be sold at pre-war prices. To this the investigating committee answers most emphatically "no." In the first place, the books are only bound as required, so that the binding cost is at the present rate, and in the second place the cost of overhead has so increased that a publisher would have to charge five times the normal price of a book in order to cover the overhead alone. Then also, it is pointed out that 'if an edition is sold at a cost that will not yield sufficient profit to help in the reprinting of a new edition, the results of such a policy will inevitably be suicidal if they are long continued.

This is particularly true under present conditions when hardly anyone is in a position to increase his working capital the necessary hundred-fold, and when bank credit is practically impossible to get, even at a rate of interest prohibitive to one who makes at best such small profits as the text-book publisher. Because of the ever fluctuating value of money and money relations, no definite formula could be arrived at for the prices of these books printed before the war, and the recommendation of the committee was that the lowest possible price for a publisher to charge was the price at which he could reproduce the book sold, as nearly as he could compute it.

Building List Prestige

ONE of the most interestingly conceived and well-executed publicity efforts that any publisher has recently undertaken comes from Doran in the shape of a 12mo volume entitled, "When Winter Comes to Main Street," a book written by Grant Overton, in which is described, in a series of twenty odd chapters, the variety and contents of the Doran list, both past and present.

Mr. Overton has succeeded in weaving together chat about authors and particulars about books that not only supply interesting reading but valuable reference information which is the more easily put to good use by the presence of a good title and author index.

The chapters include such subjects as "The Courage of Hugh Walpole," in the course of which is given a list of Walpole's sixteen books and the best sources of information about him; "Swinnerton, Analyst of Lovers," "Cobb's Fourth Dimension," "Audacious Mr. Bennett," "The Vitality of Mary Roberts Rinehart." "Books We Live By," "Places to Go," "Shameless Fun," "Rebecca West, An Artist," "Heterogeneous Magic of Maugham" to indicate only part of the material covered.

Many portraits of the authors are included, and the presswork and cover design of the book make it one of the most attractive 12mo volumes that has come from any publisher this year and might well serve as a model of good book-making.

The publisher reports that over 30,000 of these have been distributed, many of them in good sized quantity to booksellers, who have sold them with their own imprints in the interest of book promotion at the nominal price of 50c. a copy.

The Doran Company has very correctly estimated this as an interesting, effective method of building imprint prestige, and, as it says on the wrapper, "No publisher's imprint makes a successful book, but a succession of fine books makes a publisher's imprint. Unlike the manufacturer of shoes or automobiles, the publisher has no 'brand'. Each book is a new brand. He does not assure you of absolute uniformity to pattern and material, but stands for individuality and variety."

An Uncorrected Galley

FAIRY DOLLS

Late in the afternoon, the Settlement Worker returned to Harlem House. It was the swarming library hour. One small girl wanted only fairy tales. When asked why nothing else would do, she said:

"Because I read them to my dolls."

"How many have you?"

And the little Serafina answered: "I can have as many dolls as I want, if I believe in fairies."—New York Sun.

BETTER OUT THAN IN

A good many men have the same feeling with regard to our lists of "10 best writers" as that of certain distinguished Frenchmen toward the Academy—that group of forty who are called "the Immortals."

He was asked one day why he did not propose his candidacy for the Academy.

"Ah," said he, "if I applied and were admitted, some one might ask, 'why is he in it?' and I would much rather hear it asked, 'Why isn't he in it?'"

DICKENS IN BRONZE

She is an old negro mammy and has been in the employ of Albert Kraemer, vice-president of the Fuerst and Kraemer Company for many years. Yesterday she was dusting and when she came to a bronze bust of Charles Dickens she stopped and inquired:

"Mistah Kraemer, who am dis here genman?"

"That is Charles Dickens, aunty, the noted author," replied Mr. Kraemer.

"Am dat him?" Old aunty's eyes shone with delight. "I'se done hyear a lot about dat Dickens. 'Deed, Mistah Kraemer, I'se done hyear so much about him, I allus thought he was a white genman."—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

The Business of Writing

THE Parisian press has been discussing whether an author should have other means of livelihood than his pen. A poll of some of France's best known writers shows a wide division of opinion, some maintaining that authors cannot live by their pens alone, some saying that even if they can they should not and others insisting that unless they do they will not be able to give their best efforts to their writing, says an editorial in the New York Tribune.

In English and American literature there are comparatively few examples of great authors who were regularly engaged in other work. Most of these have been men in the law, the ministry or medicine, and in nearly every case their writings have eventually absorbed practically all their time. Sterne was a minister, and Swift for a time dean. Goldsmith studied medicine, and Oliver Wendell Holmes was a physician of distinction. Others, like Scott and Thackeray, inherited positions which relieved them of the worst struggles for a livelihood. Dickens, on the other hand, rose from absolute poverty thru the field of journalism.

Lamb, spending his days on a high stool in the counting house of the East India Company, is one of the few prominent examples of authors in "trade." In our own day William McFee, whose stories of the sea have been so successful that he could devote his entire time to writing without fearing the wolf, prefers to continue his profession of engineer on the steamship Carillo.

In these times the returns of successful fiction writers are so great that they rarely need worry about their daily bread. In this respect, of course, conditions have greatly improved in the last century, and more especially in the last two decades. But even were this not so, it is difficult to escape the belief that those who write only as a side issue and make a genuine success of it have been and still are exceptions. The famous French author M. Brieux claims that while a writer is not necessarily obliged to exercise some other profession it is possible for him to do so. Is not the truth in reality, merely a development of this thought, and should it not be said that while a writer may practice some other profession he should not?

Books and Stationery

WALDEN'S Stationer, a leading periodical in that field, has begun to use special pages with the heading, "The Stationer's Book Department," which is intended to bring constructive help to the stationer who handles books or is about to handle books.

A Week's Gleaning's of Book-Trade News

THE AUTHOR of "Behind the Mirrors" and "The Mirrors of Washington" is Clinton Gilbert, a Washington correspondent, representing the Philadelphia Evening Ledger and a number of other newspapers at the capital.

A BOYS' SCHOOL in New York City has recently been named the John Burroughs School for Boys.

STOKES is publishing a novelized version of William Archer's play, "The Green Goddess," prepared by Louise Jordan Milne, author of Mr. Wu. Mrs. Milne has lived in the East and knows India as well as China.

BOBBS-MERRILL will publish an American edition of "L'Europa Senza Pace" by Signor Nitti, former Prime Minister of Italy. It was published in England under the title "Peaceless Europe," but the English edition was much criticized. The translation for the American edition has been perfected by Professor Christian Ganss of Princeton, and the book will be published here as "The Wreck of Europe."

THE WRITINGS which compose Jane Austen's newly published volume, "Love and Freindship (Stokes) belong to her girlhood days at her father's rectory in Hampshire. There were ten in the family, and Jane's older sister, Cassandra, was her special confidante. The sisters were widely read for young ladies of their day and doubtless got much fun out of Jane's burlesques on the sentimental novels they read. It is said that Jane had an early love affair which came to nothing because she found her lover indifferent to her literary ambitions.

IT WOULD be curious to know how many of the readers of "A Critical Fable" have discovered that the title-page is in rhyme. James Russell Lowell used to say that the publisher of his "Fable for Critics," the late G. P. Putnam, never discovered that his title-page rhymed. A correspondent has lately written to Houghton Mifflin stating that the title-page of "A Critical Fable" contains the author's name embedded in an acrostic or cipher. The publishers profess themselves unable to discover anything of the sort, and announce that they will be very glad to receive any elucidations that may be sent to them. These, and the various guesses as to authorship, will be published later on.

EDWIN FRANCIS EDGETT

Edwin Francis Edgett, literary editor of the Boston Evening Transcript, whose book pages have for many years had the predominant influence in the New England book market, whose influence is, in fact, country-wide, appears as an author this fall. The book is "Slings and Arrows" and is published by B. J. Brimmer Co. of Boston. There are twenty-six drawings by Dwight Taylor.

DR. EMILE COUE, the famous founder of the Nancy School of Autosuggestion is planning to visit the United States next January for a series of lectures.

"THE BOOKMAN'S MANUAL" by Bessie Graham, of which a fairly large edition was issued a year ago, is now out of print. While the sale was chiefly within the bookselling trade, a goodly number of copies was taken for students in library schools and by others for use as a guide to general literature. A revised edition is planned for 1923 publication.

"The Wasteland," the longest poem T. S. Eliot has ever written and the first poetry he has written in the last three years will be published on October 1.

ETHEL BARRYMORE began her two-year engagement at the Longacre, New York City, on the 26th of September, with a play by Hauptmann, "Rose Bernd."

THE BOOK of wild animal stories, "An Old Wolf's Favorites," is by Sir Robert Baden-Powell, father of the Boy Scout movement.

THE WOMANS PRESS as the only house publishing books, entirely staffed and organized by women, had a booth at the Womans Activities Exhibit held at the Commodore Hotel during the week of Sept. 18-23.

Obituary Notes

EDWARD CLARK MARSH

EDWARD CLARK MARSH, literary adviser of Harper & Brothers, was accidentally shot and killed by his own gun near his country home at Pawling, N. Y., on September 24th. He was born at Portland, Mich., in 1875, and on completing his collegiate course he engaged in journalism as a writer of reviews of books, music and plays, contributing occasional short stories to the magazines. In 1906, he became associated with the Macmillan Company, New York, in a literary capacity, remaining with them until 1920, having served as Vice-President of the corporation and as manager of its publishing department. In 1921, he joined the Harper staff as editorial adviser. He edited "The Wisdom of Carlyle" in 1910.

ENOS A. MILLS

ENOS A. MILLS, lecturer and author, died suddenly at his home at Long's Peak, Cal., on September 21st. He was born in Kansas City, and early in life went to the Rockies, where he established himself in a cabin at the foot of Long's Peak. He was familiarly known as the father of the Rocky Mountain National Park. In addition to directing Long's Peak Inn, known to tourists all over the country, he wrote extensively for leading magazines, and was the author of many books having to do with bird, wild flower and scenery protection, and the development of national parks. He had climbed Long's Peak, one of the loftiest in the Rockies, more than three hundred times. His published works are: "Wild Life in the Rockies" (1909); "Story of Estes Park" (1911); "Spell of the Rockies" (1911); "In the Beaver World" (1913); "Story of a Thousand-Year Pine" (1914); "Rocky Mountain Wonderland" (1915); "Your National Parks" (1917); "Being Good to Bears" (1919); "Grizzly, Our Greatest Wild Animal" (1919); "Adventures of A Nature Guide" (1920); "Waiting in the Wilderness" (1921); "Watched by Wild Animals" (1922.)

THOMAS E. WATSON

THOMAS E. WATSON, U. S. Senator from the State of Georgia, who died suddenly in Washington on September 26th, was the author of a number of books, besides being the editor and publisher of several periodicals in his home state: His published works include: "The Story of France," (1898); "Life of Thomas Jefferson," (1900); "Life of Napoleon," (1902); "Bethany, A Study and Story of the Old South," (1904); "Life and Times of Andrew Jackson," (1907); "Handbook of Politics and Economics," (1908); "Life and Speeches of Thomas E. Watson," (1908); "The Methods of Foreign Missions Exposed," (1909); "Socialists and Socialism," (1909); "The Roman Catholic Hierarchy," (1910).

Checking Up on Parcel Post

A RECORD of all parcel post packages passing thru the mails is being kept by postal authorities at the present time according to information reaching the Traffic Group of the National Retail Dry Goods Association. For periods of from one to two months all mail packages are being checked and weighed with a record being kept of their number and the time consumed in handling them. The aim of the survey is believed to be the securing of data for making changes in the present parcel post rates, as well as possible weight restrictions. It has been found that certain packages do not pay their way thru the mails under the current rates, and it is said that these may either be excluded or the rates raised.

The Weekly Record of New Publications

THIS list aims to be a complete and accurate record of American book publications. Pamphlets will be included only if of special value. Publishers should send copies of all books promptly for annotation and entry, and the receipt of advance copies insures record simultaneous with publication. The annotations are descriptive, not critical; intended to place not to judge the books. Pamphlet material and books of lesser trade interest are listed in smaller type.

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent for record. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. When not specified the binding is cloth.

Imprint date is stated [or best available date, preferably copyright date, in bracket] only when it differs from year of entry. Copyright date is stated only when it differs from imprint date: otherwise simply "c." No ascertainable date is designated thus: [n. d.]

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q (4to: under 30 cm.); O (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tf. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Ff. (48mo: 10cm.); sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow.

Titles beginning with an unimportant word are inverted to be listed under their subject when possible.

Rare Books, Autographs and Prints

A FEW collectors will be glad to know that the story of the life and work of the two gifted women, Katherine Bradley and her niece Edith Cooper, who collaborated as "Michael Field" in twenty-eight plays and eight volumes of lyrics, has been admirably told by Mary Sturgeon in a volume published by George C. Harrap & Company of London.

Gabriel Wells of this city not only recently added to his Shelleyana the finest copy of one of the rarest and most valuable Shelley first editions, the "Posthumous Fragments of Margaret Nicholson," the only copy now available for the collector, but he brought back with him from London a wonderful collection of letters of Shelley, his wife, Mary Shelley, Claire Clairmont, his wife's sister, and other letters of Shelley interest written by his literary friends.

Edmund Gosse is authority for the statement that the name of the first novel Thomas Hardy ever wrote was "The Poor Man and the Lady." "It was full," he says, "of revolutionary and anti-social extravagances and the reader for the publisher to whom his manuscript was submitted happened to be no less a person than Mr. Meredith." Meredith sent for Hardy, and Hardy asked leave to suppress the manuscript. He then wrote "Desperate Remedies."

The current number of the New York Public Library Bulletin contains the continuation of two bibliographies, Daniel C. Haskell's list of references in the New York Public Library to Provencal literature and languages in Part XIII of this important work which constitutes a working bibliography of the subject. Part II of "A Bibliography of Thomas Holcroft," by Captain Elbridge Colby includes among the works enumerated many editions of his play, "The Road to Ruin" and the "Life of Baron Trenck." The Holcroft bibliography contains many useful notes on the authors' publications, historical and biographical as well as bibliographical.

An interesting announcement comes from Cleveland. George Kirk of that city is publishing in a limited edition of 1,000 copies, fifty of which are on Japanese vellum, "Twenty-one Letters of Ambrose Bierce," edited with a "Note" by Samuel Loveman. Here for the first time, it is said, in this sequence of letters written by Bierce to a young poet, is disclosed the secret of his disappearance. Bierce knew his destination and chose to disappear. His supposed entry into the World War and the reported engagement with Mexican bandits is reported to be a hoax. The possibility may even be ventured that Bierce is still alive. The publication date for these letters is fixed for October 1.

A set of the books written by Guy de Maupassant is said to exist on the margins of which he jotted down the real names of every person and place described. Until a year or so before the World War the original of George Duroy of "Bel Ami" was a well-known figure in Paris; the real Boule de Suif was named Adrienne Lugay; the heroine of "Une Vie" is said to have been the author's own mother; the originals of Oliver Bertin and the Comtesse de Guillery of "Fort Comme la Mort" and of Forestier and Madame Forestier and M. and Mme. Walter of "Bel Ami" are said to have been well-known to a score of de Maupassant's intimate friends.

Alfred Knopf, the publisher, who visited the late W. H. Hudson while in London last year, says of the great nature writer: "He was a gentle courteous old man, who was somewhat bewildered by the fame and financial security that had come to him in his old age along with the belated recognition of his books. He, who had been so poor, had so much money then he didn't know what to do with it. As a tribute to him I planned and had printed a special edition of "Green Mansions," each copy of which was to have been autographed by him. The sheets were on the way over for his signatures when he died. To carry thru the project it would now be necessary to resort to some such expedient as that of getting his signature from canceled checks and inserting them in the book."

Burne-Jone's work in connection with the illustration of William Morris's Kelmscott Chaucer has not always been spoken of with the respect that it deserved. More than once it has been flatly intimated that Burne-Jones lent his name to Morris on this occasion and that the work was done by others. Joseph Pennell, in his lately published "Scammon Lectures on the Graphic Arts" referred to the drawings in the Kelmscott Chaucer, "said to have been done by Burne-Jones," and adds, "They were not. They were by two of his pupils and friends Fairfax Murray and Catterson Smith, but all the same the book is beautiful." This declaration has forced Miss May Morris to issue a statement which has the endorsement of Morris's trustees giving the full facts which will settle this disputed point for all time. Miss Morris says: "The drawings for the Kelmscott Chaucer were made by Burne-Jones with a pencil on as nearly as possible the scale on which the woodcuts were to be engraved. But it was necessary that the delicate drawings should undergo translation into lines suited for wood engraving, which was to harmonize with the type of the book. For this work of translation, Morris at first intended to employ his old friend Fairfax Murray, but in spite of his zeal and understanding, he was too busy with other matters to get on fast enough, and Morris saw that the book would never be produced at all unless some one were found who could devote the greater part of his time to it. Thus the work came into the hands of Catterson Smith and all went happily and smoothly. This preparation of the Burne-Jones drawings was as follows: A very pale photographic print was made and washed faintly with Chinese white; Mr. Catterson Smith then drew over it with a brush, altering pencil tones into lines with much skill, and when the drawing was in this manner translated it was submitted to Burne-Jones, who looked over it closely, making his comments, alterations, and corrections. The drawing thus passed by him was photographed on the block and was engraved in facsimile by W. H. Hooper. This sort of translation was such as in the early days of wood engraving would have been done by the wood engraver himself, but in this case the translation was the work of one man and the cutting the work of another. The original designs by Burne-Jones were presented by Mr. Stanley Baldwin in 1921 to the Fitzwilliam Museum at Cambridge where they may now be seen."

"Harold Goddard Rugg of Dartmouth College," says the Boston Transcript, "some two years ago contributed in the Dartmouth Alumni Magazine an article on "The Dresden Press" which is a model for local librarians or students of our early American literature. Such work as he did here for the press of Dresden, which was the ancient name of Hanover, N. H., once a part of Vermont, ought to be done in all other communities where local presses were established in the early part of the last century. The Dresden press issues have a particular interest from having been printed on the famous Stephen Daye press, which in its wanderings stopped for a time in what is now the seat of one of the largest of our colleges. Mr. Rugg's paper leaves some bibliographical problems unsolved, but it deserves recognition for the good work already done, and few other towns have an equal record of the beginnings of printing in their communities."

The details of the large paper limited edition of the writings of Lafcadio Hearn, to be published by the Houghton Mifflin Company indicate that it will be one of the handsomest sets ever printed by the Riverside Press. The text will be printed from new plates made from Caslon type and on a fine quality of rag paper with deckle edges. The edition of sixteen volumes will contain thirty-two plates in color and ninety-six photogravures, besides many cuts in the text supplied by the author when the books were first published. A feature of the edition will be the autograph of Setsu Koizumi (Mrs. Hearn) written with a brush in Japanese characters, with the Hearn (or Heron) crest at the top and Mrs. Hearn's personal seal at the bottom, put on by Mrs. Hearn by means of a bamboo seal and Japanese seal ink. The edition will be limited to 750 sets and will be bound in several styles of bindings of unusual attractiveness.

SCANDINAVIAN ART

Until now there has been no book available in English for comprehensive discussion of the artistic production of the three nations of the North. The volume SCANDINAVIAN ART is intended to fill this want. It gives, in readable, well-ordered form, fully illustrated, and yet within the convenient compass of one volume, exactly what the American reader wishes to know about the art of Sweden, Denmark and Norway.

Marion Ames Taggart's
new and delightful story
"WHO IS SYLVIA?"

Those who fell in love with Sylvia when she was little "Captain Sylvia" knew that she would grow up into an altogether charming young lady, and Miss Taggart's new book is actual proof that she did.

"Who is Sylvia?" is a story that girls will love, but there is no age limit, for almost anyone would enjoy it.

Will monkey glands bring back youth?

is a question now being discussed everywhere.

THE GLAND STEALERS

BY BERTRAM GAYTON

(nom de plume)

In every home in the land, gland grafting is being talked about pro and con by young and old. Scientists are still experimenting—at any moment some new discovery may set tongues wagging. This is the book of the moment to push. It will make the nation smile—the news of it will be taken up by the public and the press. It is the uproariously amusing story of an American Grandpa's rejuvenation and an English grandson's consternation. It opens with a smile; the very title and jacket design in color stir one's risibles. The fun comes thick and fast, and with it, some thrilling adventures.

It is not only humorous, but it is sane, logical and convincing. Whatever people may think, it will keep them grinning and make them talk.

ORDER AT ONCE—GET THE SALES THAT ARE BREWING—RECOMMEND IT TO ALL YOUR CUSTOMERS—THEY'LL LIKE IT—ASK FOR IMPRINT CARDS AND POSTER CUT OUTS.
